The AMERICAN HOME for March

Color brings an outmoded dining room up to date

THERE was nothing wrong with the furnishings in the room shown on the right. The room was practical and livable, but it suffered from one major fault—outdated decoration. The color treatment dated back to the time when people were afraid to use color. The lack of it made a drab background for the nicely styled furniture, and it didn't show up to its best advantage.

It's not difficult to see the character that has been added to the old room by combining colorful walls with a colorful floor of Armstrong's Linoleum. Because of their large areas, walls and floors are the most logical places to add the color every room needs.

In this room the color for the Armstrong Linoleum and the colors for the rest of the room were worked out together. Consequently, the linoleum acts as a harmonizing element to tie the whole scheme together. The dramatic white organdy curtains, the exciting pink accent of the upholstery, and the crisp inlaid design in the floor give the room the sparkle that it so badly needed before.

No matter what room in your home may be suffering from old-fashioned decoration, you can help bring it up to date with a modern color scheme. If you'd like help in your color planning, talk to your local Armstrong merchant. He'll show you a wide choice of color and designs in Armstrong's Linoleum that can be the basis of your color scheme.

You'll not only like the beauty and style of this handsome flooring, but you'll also appreciate its smooth seamless surface that makes cleaning so easy. You'll find that your home will be brighter and your housework lighter, with a floor of Armstrong's Linoleum.

Send for . . . "Go Ahead and Decorate," newest decorating book by the noted home stylist, Hazel Dell Brown. 32 pages of full-color illustrations offer stimulating ideas for every room in your house . . . whether it's new or old. Send 10t (40t outside U.S.A.) to Armstrong Cork Company, 5203 Pine St., Lancaster, Pa.

There are a lot of advantages in having a floor of Armstrong's Linoleum in a dining room. Its stylishness is obvious, and any design that can be drawn can be created in this wonderful material. Some of the unseen qualities are its underfoot comfort, its durability and its glistening surface that never needs costly refinishing. Above is Armstrong's Marbelle Lino-leum, Style No. 032, inset with plain black and turquoise... just one of the many lovely color combinations possible. Send for free room plan today.

HOW I RETIRED IN 15 YEARS WITH $200 A MONTH

"Down here in Florida, boating, fishing, getting brown on the beach, and taking trips in my car, my old job in New York seems far away. Yet it was just about five years ago that I retired. And even the boss envied me. For I was retired at 55 with a life income of $200 a month.

"But I'd never be here if I hadn't lost my shirt in the crash of 1929. Just before that, everything was going up. I had a little money and put it in a 'sure thing.' It went up—then down. At forty I lost everything but my job.

"Well, I'd always pictured myself retiring before I was too old to enjoy life. Now, I had nothing to show for all those years. Suppose I could save again—could I hold on to it?

"One day, the man who lived next door to us in Bayside, John Hughes, told me he was planning to move South. He was retiring. I couldn't help saying how I envied him.

"But John said something that woke me up. There's an up-to-date way almost any man can use today. There's just one secret—starting in time. You can get a guaranteed income, with no investment headaches, when you're—for instance—55. It's a modern plan called the Phoenix Mutual Retirement Income Plan. With it, you simply make your salary now buy you a retirement income later!

"That night I dropped a card to Phoenix Mutual asking for details. As soon as I read the booklet they sent, I said here's just what I need.

"Soon after, I applied and qualified for a Phoenix Mutual Plan. It was a marvelous feeling to know I'd get $200 a month—guaranteed—every month, when I hit 55. Meanwhile, my family was protected with life insurance.

"You'd be surprised how quickly the years tick off. A while ago, I got my first Phoenix Mutual check and retired. Now my checks come every month to my Florida mailbox. I've security a rich man might envy."

After a hard day's work... stuck with the dishes again!

What a way for the weary male to end the day! You've just finished a big dinner. That tired, drowsy feeling is coming over you. You'd love to relax with the pipe and the paper. But, no! Once again you're staring at that acre of dirty dishes, too many for your wife alone.

You dutifully shrug and say, "Well, dear, might as well get started."

You ought to talk to one of the men who's made his home a place of leisure after mealtimes for himself and his wife, with a General Electric Dishwasher.

No hand-rinsing! Dishes out of sight! Pots and pans, too!

Just brush loose food off the plates. The dishwasher pre-rinses, then washes with famous "spray-rub" action that makes even sticky pots and pans come sparkling clean. Takes off all but soil that's been baked on! Finally, the washer doublerinses with clean hot water . . . fan dries the dishes to a sparkling glitter . . . and then shuts itself off.

Dishes Cleaner than "Hand-Washed"...

. . . because they're washed in water hotter than your hands can stand. Hot water stays hot thanks to G. E.'s famous Calrod® unit.

In the dishwasher, dishes and glasses are cushioned on soft plastic-coated trays that remain stationary. Only the water swishes around.

It's so convenient. The sturdy, dependable G-E Dishwasher glides out at a touch. Easy loading. No tiresome bending. No tiresome stooping, and plenty of counter space left. Your kitchen's always cleaner because the G-E Dishwasher holds (and hides) a complete service for eight, including ten glasses.

You'll save her as much as an hour a day!

A General Electric Dishwasher saves many wives at least an hour a day . . . sometimes more. And, as the man of the house, you can appreciate that here is an investment which will increase the value and saleability of your home.

Let a General Electric PRE-RINSING Dishwasher do the dishes for you. See your G-E dealer for a demonstration today. General Electric Company, Louisville 2, Kentucky.

Allow 2 weeks. $2.95 prepaid. Circle Studio, P. O. Box 189, Staten Island, New York.

HOUSEWIVES NEED some kind of thermometer to tell them when to water their house plants and when to leave them alone. Floregarde is just such an indicator that stripes pink when there is enough moisture, stripes blue as the soil dries. Just 11/2" high, it is barely seen above the soil. Get enough for all your plants. Seven, $1 ppd. Walter Drake, Drake Bldg., Colorado Springs, Colo.

Spencer goes in for Flowering Crabs

MARGARET POLLOCK

Spencer, Iowa, have burst into radiant pink bloom each May and delighted everyone with their delicate color and cheerful fragrance. Noting the hardiness and beauty of the trees, the Clay County Garden Club (with a membership covering Spencer and the surrounding rural area) early in 1950 suggested that the flowering crab be made the community tree and planted wherever circumstances warrant. By the close of the spring planting season in late April, more than 300 trees had been set out in that town of 7,400 people. Some went into the parking area along sidewalks, some into front yards, some into back-yard gardens where they could be seen from terraces, picnic areas, and the indoors, and still others (with the City Council's permission) along several of Spencer's streets, where the planting was done as a project by the local chapter of the Future Farmers of America.

The Park Board had trees planted in several of the local parks and the County Fair management used them to beautify the entrance to the 120-acre fair grounds; only those passing by will see them in bloom in the spring, but at Fair time, thickly studded with bright little apples, they will greet the 200,000-odd people who attend. When a courthouse employee died, his associates sent two trees to his widow to be planted at his home as a memorial. The local newspaper and radio station boosted the project by telling people where to find the most attractive trees when they were in bloom, thus stimulating interest in planting more. Meanwhile, the Garden Club stood ready to help with advice on choosing varieties, and locating, planting, pruning, and otherwise caring for the trees. Not only local dealers, but also nurseries throughout the area benefited by the demand for young trees which continued in 1951 as the Club pushed steadily toward its objective of two flowering crabapples per block on every street in town. Already, a few of the trees planted in 1950 have bloomed. The rest, now graceful and attractive as to foliage, will come into full flower in a few years. And how lovely Spencer will be then!

"My house is made of this, too!"

Only a few years ago, insulating sheathing was a brand-new idea. But it has certainly proved itself in a hurry. Nowadays, it's so commonly used that even the children are familiar with it.

There are good reasons why Armstrong's Temlok® Sheathing has become so popular. Temlok is made of interlocking wood fibers formed into these large, strong boards. When it is nailed to the framework of a house, it makes the entire structure strong and solid. Temlok also provides excellent insulation for year-round comfort. It cuts heat loss in winter; it keeps the house cooler in summer.

You'll never have to worry about dampness harming Temlok. Each pine fiber is thoroughly waterproofed with asphalt.

With all these advantages Armstrong's Temlok Sheathing usually costs less to use than ordinary sheathing lumber. The big boards go up faster, saving labor costs, and there is practically no waste of material. Your fuel savings can actually repay the cost of Temlok in a few winters.

Before you plan your new home, be sure to get full details on Armstrong's Temlok Sheathing. For details on this remarkable material, stop by your lumber yard or building supply store.

How We Work

We were honored recently when the Secretary of Agriculture summoned our E. L. D. Seymour to Washington, D.C., to act as sub-committee chairman at a meeting of the National Garden and Home Food Preservation Advisory Committee—quite a mouthful, but a good cause. Ned Seymour, as you know, is our esteemed horticultural editor, and we're glad to share him with our government in matters that concern you and the food you eat. Up top there in the usual order is the committee: D. S. Weaver; E. L. D. Seymour; Prof. B. S. Pickett; Dr. M. L. Wilson; Hon. Charles F. Brannon, Secy of Agriculture; Dr. H. B. Tukey; Dr. R. J. Haskell; Paul C. Stark. Ned flew back in time to edit final copy on his big story, "Tuberous Begonias," a fascinating subject which you'll find on page 28.

Arts and Crafts Editor Dorothy Trumm was snapped this month as she went over to Radio City to act as one of the judges in a Bristol Meyers handicrafts contest. BM's employees in branch offices all over the world were invited to submit samples of their handwork: woodworking, photography, painting, etc. Dotty had an awful time singling out one item. Her favorite, which won first prize, was a lovely mahogany blanket chest with a lift top—which she wistfully said would look fine in her own bedroom! That's she with Joseph Allen, vice president of BM, and Robert Shaw, art director of Doherty, Clifford, and Shenfield.

The gent with the horn rims down at bottom is Executive Editor Jim Wiley who went out to Minneapolis to photograph the prizewinning Blueprint Home for this issue—you'll see it on pages 23 through 27. Jim took along our Land Camera, snapped dozens of shots to study photographic angles before professional photographers went to work. The Kleenex, Jim says, indicates a lousy cold—he finished up and took to bed for 36 hours before catching a stratocruiser. How we work—and how we rest!

The paneled walls and built-in bookcases of this colorful room are of painted Douglas Fir, contrasting beautifully with the fireplace and floor covering.

ARCHITECT: WALLACE S. STEELE BUILDER: JACK E. BORAN

Oome on in and have a look at one of the most applauded houses of the year. Its honors have multiplied: First, its plans by young Minneapolis architect Wallace S. Steele won a $2,500 national prize plus a $750 regional award in the biggest architectural contest of its kind ever staged. Next, J. E. Boran, Minneapolis builder, backed the jury's verdict in a very practical way—he thought enough of the design to bet on it heavily, so he brought it to life by planning to build a whole development of homes just like the sample we illustrate above and on the next four pages. Finally, because the editors of AMERICAN HOME agree that this house is exceptional, we're telling you about it, and offering blueprints from which you can duplicate it yourself. (See Blueprint Order form, page 131.)

Because its planning is so advanced and so sound, we call this Forecast House. Its style is Comfortable Modern. If your family is medium-sized, and if your ideas are too big for most moderately priced houses, we think that you'll be as excited as we are about this one. Here are its merits in a nutshell: With its 1,080 square feet, it's about the size of the average two-bedroom house, yet it has managed to embrace three bedrooms plus an amazingly PLEASE TURN THE PAGE versatile dining-and-everything-else room, all in a compact, squarish rectangle—an economical shape to construct. It has well defined areas for children's outdoor play and adult's outdoor living, yet you could make it sit happily on the average small 60 x 100 suburban lot. Moreover, it was planned to accommodate itself to a variety of different orientations.

Solidly built, endowed with many refinements, and insulated against the extremes of Minnesota climate, the house we show sells for $20,000 (but unfurnished, of course). But in many parts of the country, especially if you use a concrete slab instead of a basement, you could adapt the plans to a house costing thousands of dollars less.

It is a house with a purpose much bigger than itself, for it was designed to bring the best architectural thinking within the reach of the vast major-MORE ON PAGE 26 ity of homebuyers-the millions of families who usually have to settle for so much less. Here is how it came to be: Some 85 per cent of our homes are put up by merchant builders who construct them on speculation and sell them already finished. Few such builders employ the services of architects. Meanwhile, the talents of our best home designers have been going almost exclusively into built-to-order luxury homes way beyond the pockets of most of us. To bring architect and builder together for their mutual benefit and the profit of the public in general, The Magazine of Building and the National Association of Home Builders staged a giant small-home competition. Prizes-a whole flock of them-were offered for houses with fresh ideas: houses good to look at which would be sound investments and economical to build; houses advanced in design and use of materials, but neither so starry-eyed that they'd be impractical or highly experimental, nor so "different" in appearance that they'd fail to sell easily. Of the staggering 2,727 house plans which competed.

How to grow them -

You can start with tiny seed sown on top of loose, peaty soil, but it takes 3 months to get a small tuber. Quicker and better, buy top-quality tubers; count back 8 weeks from average date of last frost, and set tubers, dished side up, on peat moss bed

In 3 to 5 weeks, when tubers have sprouted and leaves opened, lift tubers carefully, disturbing roots as little as possible, and plant each one half an inch deep in a 3- or 4-in, clay pot, or a waxed milk carton cut to about 4 inches high

or an exotic and all-around useful flower to grow, look to the tuberous begonia! This I say without disloyalty to the popular perennials that are the mainstay of any garden, providing variety of color, foliage, height, and texture; like old friends, they are tranquilizing to the spirit. But tuberous begonias seem-at least in our Midwestern garden-like the guest who makes a dramatic entrance and manages to catch your eye even when you are exchanging confidences with a dear friend. So far from the equator and the flamboyant trees and flowers of their native tropics, their luxuriant growth is unbelievable; yet, with reasonable care, they have become thoroughly useful residents of Northern Illinois without losing any of their glamor.

Last October 5th, when our living room boasted two lovely arrangements, we sent at least a dozen blooms-two bowls full-to the hospital, and half a dozen to our son's teacher. How many plants have we that we get such generous returns? Only 24. But half that many will keep a family supplied with cut flowers, a daily corsage, and a bright spot in the garden from July 1 until frost. The cost? Well, our tubers are not of the rare, expensive kinds; half we bought locally, the rest from a large specialist in the West. And at an average price of a little over 20 cents each, they have been equally satisfactory as to quality and quantity of bloom. Although we always order tubers of the camellia type, we have received some of the carnation, rose, and single types. But the percentage not true to form and color is small; and, besides, the resulting variety is interesting. One of these months I hope to tell about some of the uses to which I put these fascinating flowers. But, for the present, I want to talk about oper potting soil is essential. It must be light, se, absorbent of moisture, but well drained. od formulae are: 3/3 sandy loam, 1/3 peat moss; each sandy loam, peat moss, rotted cow manure; each heavy soil, sharp sand, and leaf mold

In potting up tubers, cover hole in pot with bits of broken pot; add half an inch of gravel or other coarse drainage material; fill two thirds full with soil; set tuber in place, cover half inch deep, firm soil gently with thumbs while revolving pot

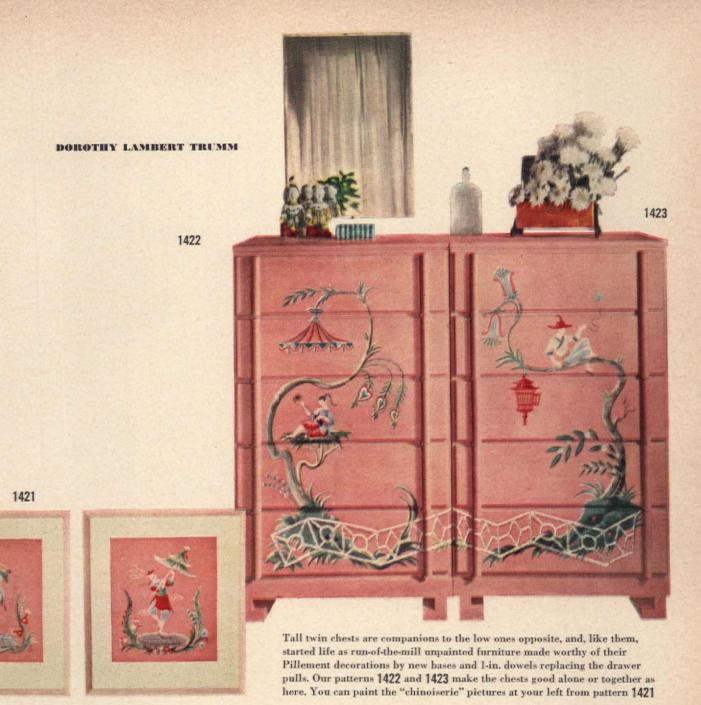

Before June, prepare soil in outdoor bed, mixing in humus, also a tablespoon of bone meal for each plant. When frost danger is past, set out plants from pots or milk cartons, 12 in. apart and about 2 in. deep. If ground is dry, water well, then apply mulch

Unpainted with scalloped aprons and little round drawer pulls. The key to their present good manner is a sprightly adaptation of Chinese-flavored decorations by the 18th-century French artist, Jean Pillement. New, homemade bases have a Chinese accent, and 1-in. dowel sticks replace drawer pulls. (For latter operation, apply one dowel to each side of the chest, then cut between drawers to permit opening.) Decorations are our patterns 1419 and 1420, which make good company for a French bed whose headboard was built from our blueprint pattern 1218

The French Had a Word for It

The young woman whose bedroom we illustrate opposite is no Marie Antoinette, but she sure knew how to get cake when there was no bread—and with AMERICAN HOME Patterns, you can do the same. Our heroine is a bright American career gal who shot her budget on living-toom furnishings, and then made the most of what was left by fitting out her bedroom with the most inexpensive of chests, bought unpainted, and then given the delectable fillip of decorations fit for a queen.

"Fit for a queen" is no figure of speech here. The granddaddy of the designs which gladden the furniture on this page and the next, is one Jean Pillement, 18th-century French painter and muralist to royalty, an artist who lent a hand with Marie Antoinette's Petit Trianon and with the palace of the King of Poland, no less. The work which charmed such patrons has gone right on charming down the years, so we've taken some Pillement motifs and adapted them for you. There's a French name for the gleeful, graceful style they embody: chinoiserie, which means in the manner of the Chinese. Pillement didn't invent the style, but he was one of its most skilled practitioners. It was the rage of the 18th century, along with Chinese tea and the thin Chinese porcelain Europeans were just about discovering. A Chinese artist wouldn't recognize it, of course, because this particular brand of lighthearted prettiness is really French as all get-out. But the themes are Chinese, and the wonderful way in which a few strokes can be used to bring a large area to life is very Chinese indeed. In fact, making a little count for a lot was a major lesson Chinese art taught us—important to you, too, since it means you can have so much effect for so little effort. You've met up with chinoiserie before, of course, especially in some Chippendale furniture. Like most Europeans of his time, Chippendale embraced the Chinese manner—sometimes a bit too enthusiastically. The Chinese returned the compliment of all this attention: when every self-respecting garden in Europe had a pagoda summerhouse, little versions of Versailles sprang up in the Far East. If we should ever find a Chinese Pillement, we'll let you know.

French Had a Word

Meanwhile, we can be grateful for the French one, since his decorations have infinite possibilities. You've just seen how we adapted them for inexpensive bedroom furniture, enlarging them and applying them broadly. But the aristocratic secretary-desk at your right is something else again—Pillement decorations about as Pillement would have used them, the Chinese details fitted into a French rococo outline with ravishing effect. We know, because we took this piece along to the American Home Economics convention and everyone loved it—including the men.

Patterns adapted from the work of

Marie Antoinette's court decorator are glad tidings for your tired furniture

o you own a desk like the dullard on your right? Take heart, for this one was pretty hopeless, too, when we found it in a secondhand store and set about making something of it. You can see that we were successful. After scraping and treating it to a coat of off-white paint with gold accents, we garnished it with some extraordinarily handsome drawer pulls and served it up with a set of the handsomest of Pillement chinoiserie designs. Then we decided that we had to share them with you. Our patterns give full instructions for applying this French 18th-century enchantment to furniture. The door panels are 1373; the desk lid is 1374; and the delightful fripperies on the sides and dancing around the drawer pulls are 1375.

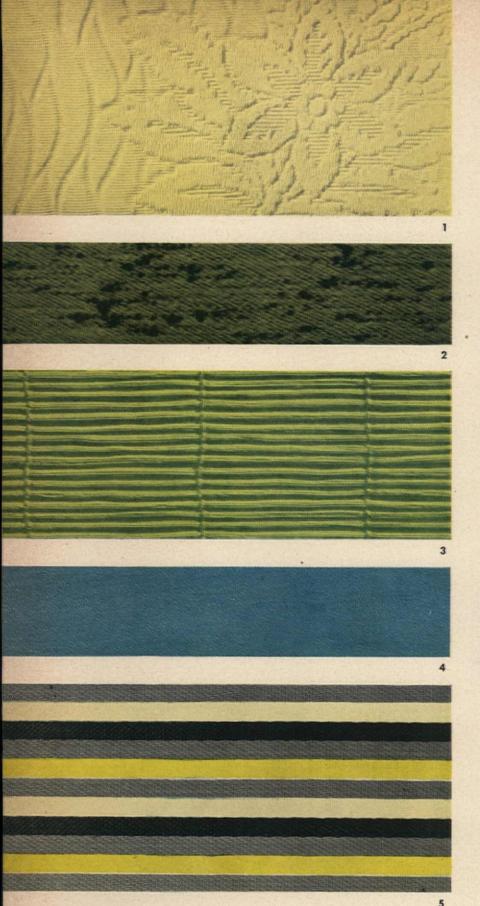

Not French with a Chinese accent, but pure Chinese are the paintings which grace the Four Seasons plates at your left. Petal for petal and twig for twig, we lifted the designs from a set of old (probably 18th century) Chinese plates symbolizing the seasons. For your infinite pleasure and edification, we turned them into painting patterns. Nobody knew more about the subtleties of design than the Chinese masters, and in copying their work stroke for stroke, you'll learn lessons in color and arrangement which will stand by you. Looks difficult? Not with our patterns which make it easy to reproduce these beauties. But it's a sit-down-at-leisure project-you can't turn out such gems with one hand and feed Junior with the other. Because these plates are heirloom stuff, we used lovely Limoges with a "modern" rimless coupe shape (the ancient Chinese knew it, too), but the designs would sparkle as brightly on inexpensive white pottery. Painted in oils which permit you to shade and accent in the delicate manner of the Chinese originals, these dishes are intended for your walls and display shelves, not for your dinner table.

Plum blossoms may mean spring to us, but to the Chinese they are the flower of winter, and long life. On the top plate they are used in an especially Chinese manner, filling the space gently, but not obviously. How sharp the tree trunk looks; how few strokes do it! Ancient Chinese used this kind of shorthand painting—delicate as handwriting, but it captured the exact look of the thing represented. Autumn's chrysanthemums decorate the second plate. In the Chinese language of symbols, they stand for fidelity, and wish you friends in the autumn of your life. They also mean joviality—and a life of ease and retirement from public office! The artist captured their sturdiness and their live grace. So can you. Together, winter and autumn motifs are pattern 1417.

ove and affection, richness and honor, feminine beauty; that's the peony, the flower of spring and subject of the third plate. How fully and richly the blooms are painted—a fitting prelude to the final plate bearing the lotus of Buddha, flower of summer, flower of purity and fruitfulness. The Chinese say that in a good painting the "idea is present even where the brush has not passed." You can see what they mean if you study the blank spaces in these four designs. They are unpainted, yet important in the composition, for Chinese artists consciously make use of such blanks. In the peony plate, for example, the design seems to hug the bottom, yet the composition isn't overweighted, for the larger white areas balance the smaller dark ones to make a design of great delicacy. The spring and summer patterns together are 1418.

In the designs which deck the plates, the flowers are filled with meaning. But the birds seem to be along mostly for the ride, and for the joy their presence gives us. Some pairings of flower and bird are suggested in Chinese poems, but no traditional symbolism is involved. The five-clawed dragon which fills the cover of the little box at the bottom of the page is another matter—he appeared only on pieces belonging to the Emperor. He's yours, however, to use as indicated on our pattern 1416.

News in Plastic Upholstery

t's no news that plastic upholstery materials welcome tough wear and respond to soap and water cleaning. We've been saying so for years. Now we're shouting about them all over again because they have blossomed out with beauty to match their talents-witness these 14 examples. New vinyl plastics have been made to look and feel more like the. long-familiar woven fabrics. Their designs range from modern geometrics to traditional brocatelles, their colors fit today's palettes, their textures range from the sleek to the heavily embossed. Regardless of design, they fall into three general types: (1) Unsupported films, which are all-plastic sheets. (2) Supported films, which are fabric-backed. (3) Materials woven from plastic threads. They need little special handling, and the few tricks necessary for cutting and fitting them have all long since been worked out. The ones we show were carefully scaled by their designers to make the job of upholstering with them an easy one.

Points on Padding a Budget

JANET MCHENDRIE

This is a furnished apartment. At least, that's what the ad said. But it's what came after the Befores you see on the opposite page that makes the story interesting. It cost less than $500 to make the changes you see in the After pictures, but the difference in style in the new room seems to amount to much more than that. The layout is a typical "efficiency" unit—one room, a tiny kitchen, bath, and a large closet euphemistically dubbed "dressing room." The walls were tan, the carpet taupe, the furniture a collection of items of a type called "borax" or "dogs" by furniture men—the term is just as derogatory as it sounds and perhaps the kindest translation is "no traceable ancestry."

Outside of the obvious need to make the room more attractive, the biggest problem facing the tenant was to utilize the three seating pieces (sofa and two upholstered chairs) and yet make them look completely different, and to do it with little cash outlay. As usual in this common case, a combination of wit, work, and canny shopping was the answer.

To transform the sofa, the three seat cushions were stitched together to make one. Then lines were squared off and the ugly machine-carved wood trim was padded by cotton batting and muslin stitched into place. Two chairs received the same treatment. A sale at a fabric counter fetched a six-yard length of blue-and-green plaid—enough to slip-cover one chair. A dress-goods counter yielded sturdy green gabardine to slip-cover the sofa and blue gabardine for the second chair. Both, $1.50 per yard.

Other padded points that look better than their cost: Only one wall was painted dark blue, yet it seems to give the room another dimension. Unjoined lengths of monk's cloth with roughly basted hems (saved labor charges) drape the window and the wall holding the Murphy bed, slide on traverse tracks. Cotton string rugs, laid over the worn carpet, feel thicker than they are. The dining table was homemade of plywood, painted, flanked by inexpensive yacht chairs. Two little secondhand tables are covered with silver foil, serve as coffee tables or (with pads) as extra seating. Storage chests flanking the sofa cost more than other pieces, but their purchase was made possible by the other savings.

Less than $500 made this Before and After difference!

Old sofa had its lines changed with cotton batting and muslin stitched into place, was slip-covered in dress-goods gabardine at $1.50 a yard. Two chairs on wall opposite sofa received same treatment. Combined with taste, inexpensive materials (monk's cloth, deck chairs, string rugs, secondhands) produced style here. Radio was from owner Bill Kipka's former apartment

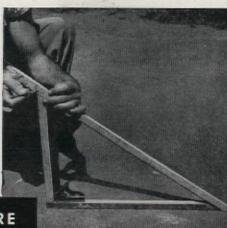

What else could those doors hide (top) but a Murphy bed! Inexpensive monk's cloth draperies now conceal the telltale doors, suggest a window—at least the skeleton in the closet is a mystery. Two chests flanking slip-covered sofa contain English tray-type drawers, hold owner Bill Kipka's full complement of shirts, underwear, socks, accessories

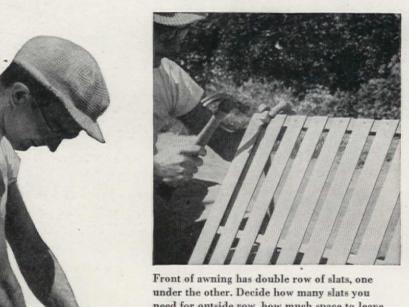

Each awning needs 2 triangular side frames of 1 x 1 lumber. True corners with square. Awning height should be little more than half height of window. Use yardstick to measure angles for cutting long slanted end braces need for outside row, how much space to leave between them. Make spacer of wood, and use it to space slats evenly. Nail slats with thin wire or with small gimp upholstery nails

After top row of slats is in place, turn frame over and nail on under row of slats. These should be nailed directly beneath spaces between slats on top row. This will permit leaving top windows open in rain

How to Make
Awnings from

For strength, reinforce back corners of frame with strips of tin or sheet metal. With tin shears, cut strips ½ in. wide by 2½ in. long

Fold the tin or sheet-metal strip around the back corner of frame, as shown. Fasten with long nail driven clear through metal strip and wood to other side. Hammer end of nail flat

Fasten two triangular frames at top and bottom with strips of 1 x 2 lumber. Add center braces in middle of each triangle and across center front of awning frame

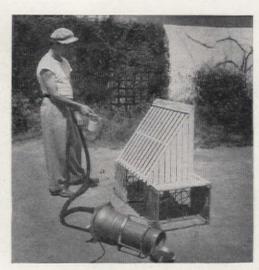

There is only a single row of slats on sides of awning, so nail them closely together. Cut slat tops to follow angle

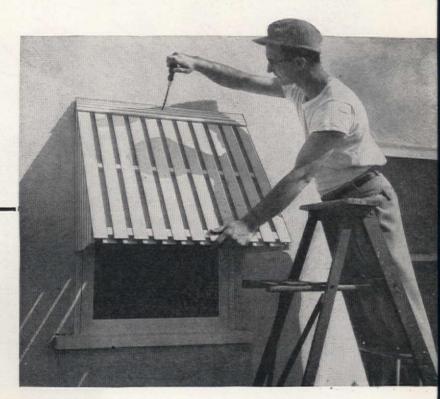

To form a header and add to the appearance of the finished awning, use the long face board which hid the "works" of the Venetian blind. Cut it to fit awning, and nail it in place

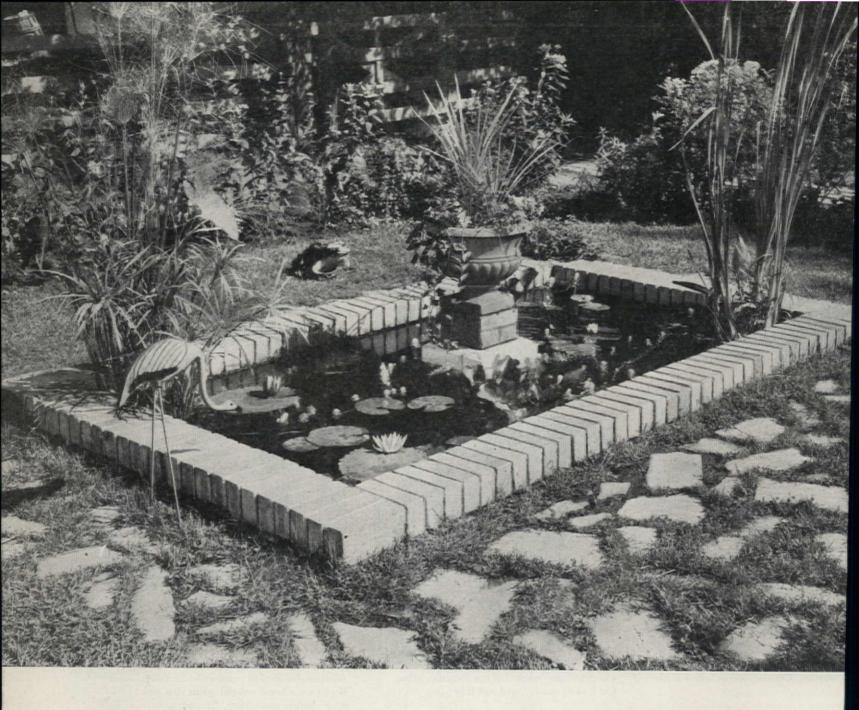

A vacuum spray will do a speedy paint job, and a good one, for the paint will reach small angles hard to paint with a brush. If you use a brush instead, paint slats and frame before assembling. Retouch nails

enetian Blinds

A wooden awning like this would cost about $75 if you went out to buy it. But if you're the owner of some old Venetian blinds, make your own awning for the price of a few sticks of lumber and some paint. When it's finished, simply screw it onto window frame

Built for $60!

JANE MCKENRY

eading "A Million Dollars Worth of Fun for $15.00" in the July AMERICAN HOME, I was thrilled. "Why," said I, "isn't more attention given to what we women can do when our female determination goes to work?" With that in mind, I just had to tell you how I built a 5 x 9 ft. fish and lily pond for $60, entirely by myself, despite the skeptical grins of family and friends. The work started with a hole 10 ft. long, 6 ft. wide, and 3 ft. deep. (Depth is important if you plan to leave fish in the pond over winter.) That dug, I bought a load of brick ("seconds") for $33 a thousand; a level ($2.49); a bricklayer's trowel (49¢), and a garden cart ($7.95). The rest of the $60 went for sand and cement as needed.

Mixing the cement in the cart, I poured it into the hole on top of a layer of broken stone and brick to a depth of about 4 in. A few days later I laid the walls (one brick thick), filled in behind them with broken and useless brick, and over this poured a very wet cement-sand mixture up to ground level. I laid the top course of bricks on edge crosswise to form a rim above the ground, and used the rest to build a pedestal for a plant urn. As the onlookers' grins began to disappear, I proudly painted the inside of the pond with blue pool paint to both waterproof it and give it a professional look. Finishing in August, I planted hardy waterlilies right away to give them a good start. The picture shows how my work blossomed into a thing of beauty the following summer. In the plant box at the right (4 in. below the surface) I put a cattail, pickerelrush, velvet leaf and water-poppy; in the other (2 in. below), I put a papyrus, green taro, lobelia, and dwarf sweet flag. Around the pool are marigolds, zinnias, phlox, roses, pansies, coleus, and other easy-to-grow old favorites that provide color and cut flowers.

The pool has no drain and when I want to empty it I siphon the water out with a hose into the basement drain. To take care of any overflow after heavy rains, I inserted pieces of 3/4-in. pipe just below the brick rim so the water can flow out onto the grass.

So ends the tale of the "big ditch," which isn't such a joke among my friends any more. Who said that women are the weaker sex?

eet the M. J. MacWhinnies. Physically, you won't see a one of them in these views of the remarkably pretty, and remarkably sensible house they live in in Freeport, L.I.—yet each picture is filled with their personalities and reflects the happy e a home like this one can harbor. But the family may not be just hat you'd expect. For instance, Mrs. MacWhinnie isn't a little old ady who has been collecting antiques since Hector was a pup, and Mr. MacW. doesn't have to ease himself gently into his venerable

From the grandfather's clock to the Victorian china on the dinner table, the furnishings in this buse were bought to be used, and are used. Antiques are not prohibitive luxuries if you buy the useful kind and learn to rescue beauties which have been ill-used by time

Here's how to welcome antiques into your family circle. Three lively boys live here and there's been no catastrophe yet!

Did you ever see a more graceful wing chair? It's good for sitting in, too. The slender object next to it is an old European lace maker, the delight of its owner who loves it as she'd love a bit of sculpture. When you're furnishing with antiques, you don't have to use draperies of the period. See how handsomely at home a modern window treatment is in this room

Almost everything on the fireplace wall could stand alone as a symbol of "home." From the Boston rocker to the Staffordshire cows on the mantel, you wouldn't want to change a thing. Yet, because this is a growing collection, its family may see an entirely different setting next week. They know the spirit remains the same, and any change is always for the better

Ancient pegged desk from Vermont seems to glow with satisfaction at its surroundings. It was in terrible condition when the MacWhinnies bought it, but years of collecting taught them wonders a restorer can work—and they learned to do some of it themselves

Dining table, bought in ruins for $20, is spectacular example of astute buying and restoring. Top had to be reversed to be usable, and old cherry rolling pin furnished lumber to piece it. trying to live in it. The main point is that everything in this house blends together in happy good fellowship.

But because Inez started her collecting fifteen years ago when her husband and his salary were both very young, Maison MacWhinnie (not just an alliteration—Inez comes of French stock) does more than offer an object lesson in how to live with antiques: it can teach us how to acquire antiques in the first place without investing a king's ransom in them. The secret? Well, for one thing, though you'll find things here which the fanciest big-city dealers would be proud to display, Inez didn't start by buying the rarest of pieces with the finest of finishes in the best of condition. She loves and collects country furniture—the best kind to have if there are youngsters around—and buys it from country sources. Then, too, the first chests and tables and chairs in this collection were bought as necessary furniture, not as show pieces, luxurious extras. And because of the wise way Inez did her buying, the furniture was acquired at bargain prices.

That solid cherry dining-room table, for instance-mellow as it is now, all mortised together with nary a peg nor a nail, it would be tagged high in a deep-carpeted antiques gallery. It cost Inez $20 plus a tidy sum for refinishing, but less, at that, than an ordinary sturdy dining table might have cost. When she found it, it had been sitting in a Long Island barnyard for years—and looked it. It was in such bad condition that its top had to be reversed before it could be used. But Inez knew enough, when she spotted it, to recognize its wonderful wood and construction, to see the beauties, and the strength, of its fine T stretcher—and to grab it knowing that she'd invest several times its original cost in bringing it to life.

Then, there was that pine Welsh dresser in the dining room. It took both knowledge and imagination to see its possibilities behind broken doors and under six coats of paint—but Inez knows good proportions when she sees them. She also knew how handsome solid pine could look brought down to its natural color—so she bought the thing, paid $20 for it plus a restoration charge, and ended up with a very fine antique. When you've been at it as long as Inez, you learn how to do some of the simpler restoring yourself.

Of course, not all of her treasures were orphans of the storm, and

Idea for windows in beach house or development house with high windows: Hinged wooden panels are set on track at top of frame, fold back like shutters to admit full light, can be arranged to combat glare and let in just a little light. Barbecuers, ahoy! Here's an idea for an inexhaustible supply of paper tablecloths. Wooden box on patio storage wall holds big roll of ordinary brown wrapping paper. Old saw blades on edge of box tear paper neatly. Pull off as much as you want, use it, burn it with trash

Mrs. Brady calls her sofa "Big Mo" after the battleship—there's eleven feet of it. Three-fold screen in corner was painted by Mrs. Brady's mother, as was picture hanging over fireplace (see cover). These windows face east; others opposite the sofa face south, flooding the room with sunshine

Designed for a Busy Street

Unorthodox planning of storage wall and service wing insulate this house against traffic noise of busy thoroughfare

The house that turns its back to the road to face garden or view is as much a part of our time as the front porch was a symbol of another era. Seldom is a plan so neatly devised as this one, however, to combat the night-and-day noise of a heavily trafficked road and yet confine itself within the limits of a narrow lot. The shape of the plan is less common than the problem, as a careful study of the drawing on the opposite page will show.

Architect Igor Polevitsky has sensibly ranged a double-walled stack of bathrooms and storage closets along the front façade of the house as an insulating barrier against sound. To further this purpose, the service wing projects streetward from the house, terminating in an open car port. Protecting the car port, and cutting off direct view of the entrance door, is a louvered baffle of poured concrete.

Main rooms of the house—two bedrooms and a huge living-dining room—face the rear and a view over an adjoining golf course. Exposure is primarily east and south to catch prevailing winds and winter sunshine, with few windows on the north and west elevations—orientation fits the locale, which is Florida.

Exterior walls are of brick and concrete. The living room with its simple fireplace (see cover) is paneled with vertical boards of bleached cypress washed with white paint. The owners, General and Mrs. Francis M. Brady, have furnished the house with pieces from Rome, Paris, Panama, and the United States.

Short and Sweet

Abbreviated window dress is the latest home fashion—
here are some pretty variations

Your windows are the eyes of your home—make them sparkle, and the whole house is bright; make them beguiling, and they give individuality to every room. Let them tell a new story. Here is a nosegay of ideas which prove that the ubiquitous ruffled tie-backs or the usual glass curtains flanked by draperies, though often excellent, aren't the only solutions. Your windows can be friendly and still original, rich without being rubber-stamp. What's more, the crisp and imaginative window treatments here are both inexpensive and easy to copy. Remember that your windows' dressing improves your outlook in more ways than one: if it frames a good view, it must still afford you some privacy; if it hides a bad view, it must still let in some light. It must modulate the daylight, sometimes filtering it, sometimes letting it in full strength. It must be attractive not only from the inside, but from the outside as well-not only a thing in itself, but part of your room, and it must reflect the room's whole character.

- Shuttered windows are even more romantic with a veil of embroidered eyelet-batiste half-curtains. Get the effect from one deeply flounced curtain, or from two tiers of simply gathered fabric hung on rods in line with mullions
- An excellent way to keep your windows light, yet dress them to match your room: Simple draw-curtains in a light solid color are banded in print used elsewhere in the room.

 The valance is a gathered flounce of the print, deep and full
- This bewitchery, exceptionally pretty itself, gives privacy without cutting off a good view. Wood half-shutters have chintz panels. White cotton curtains are hung by self loops bound in yellow. They keep fabric in neat, even folds
 - Troubled by a narrow window smack against a wall? Then dare to drape it on one side only—it can be handsome. This floral chintz has plain ribbon bands which are themselves accented by a binding of plain chintz. Lampshade makes nice balance
- Double tiers for a small dormer are white sateen with ball fringe. Just make two pairs of curtains. Hems are applied to fronts of curtains, ball fringe sewn in hem. Corners are neatly mitered. Stenciled design on wall is from old coverlet
- Another way to use shutters and half-curtains. Shutters were cut down from full-sized ones, enameled white. Half-curtains are white cotton with three rows of ball fringe at hem.

 Casing fits rod closely so plain, inch-deep heading stands up

Your own house plants may furnish all the blooms you'll need for this arrangement. Put them in a pin holder around which you've bent a 6-in.-square sheet of plumber's lead. This will hold all the water they need

A walk in the country produces materials you can force for this: apple blossoms, fern, fiddleheads, dried, spore-bearing fern leaves, skunk-cabbage leaves. Use blue-green pottery container of spiral or asymmetrical design

Driftwood is so decorative and imaginative in itself that it can make a very few flowers go a very long way. Select a piece with rhythmic shape and a flat base which will rest solidly in a low bowl. Be sure to wax it well

To force blossoms, mash lower 2 or 3 inches of fresh-cut stems with hammer, then put in deep water in a warm room. Force ferns and skunk cabbage by covering plants with basket or keg. Cutting a few fronds isn't harmful to plant

How to do it

BETTY B. MERRIAM, Flower Arrangements

For color, use African-violets, begonias, and grape ivy. Don't be afraid to cut them from your house plants, for such pruning is beneficial—it keeps plants from becoming "leggy" and it stimulates new shoots

Establish high point by placing curved apple branch in pin holder. Next place fiddleheads, wrapping skunk cabbage around stems as shown at left. Use fern fronds of varying lengths, but point them all in the same direction

Big Effects with

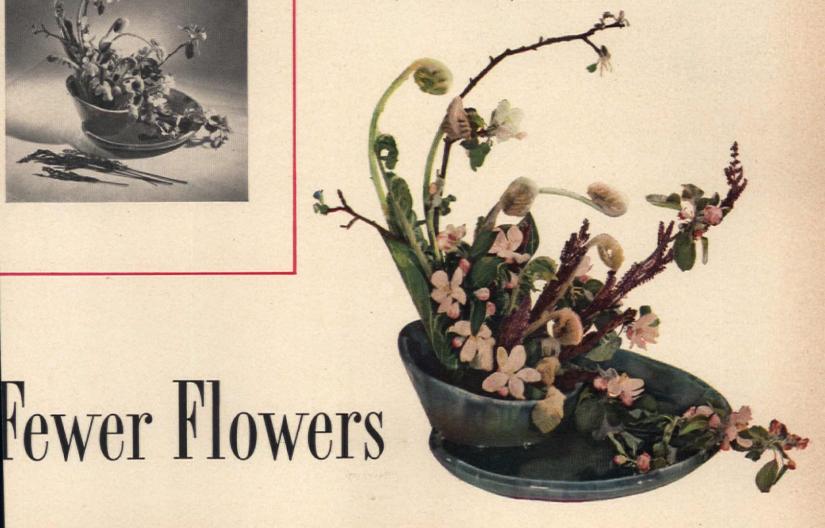

Start with tall stems of begonias and grape ivy, then add cluster of African-violets at base. For filling in, use leaves of the latter with their beautiful texture. Follow line of driftwood for motion and continuity

You can make your arrangement flow gracefully from the upper left to lower right by adding apple blossoms-this time shorter stems. To give the whole thing accent, fill in empty spaces with dried, spore-bearing fern leaves

Woods are full of fern, fiddleheads, and skunk cabbage. Use them, and driftwood, to extend scarce flowers

Yes, that's the before picture above! This house, built about

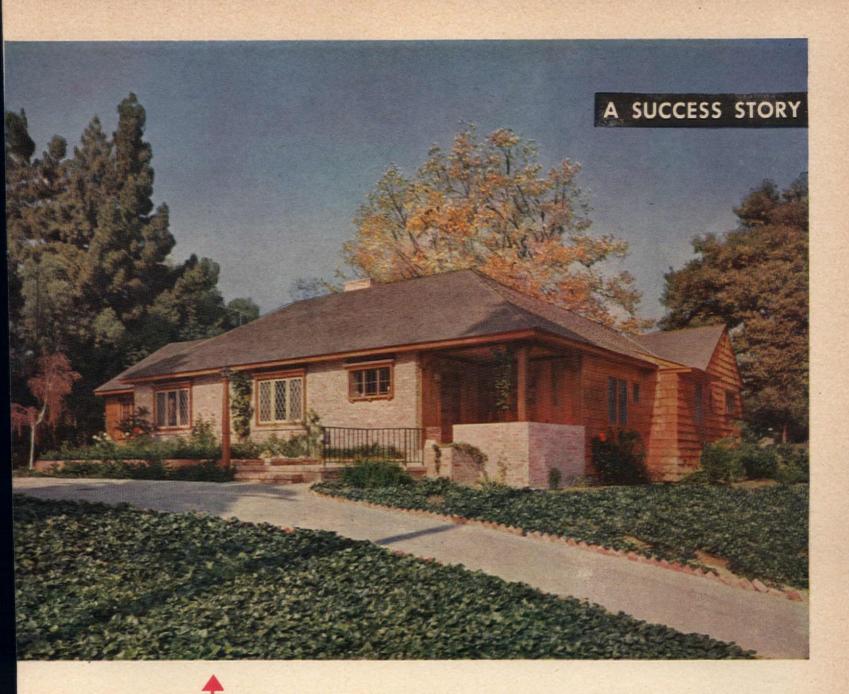

1912, was tastelessly remodeled

in the 1920's when it acquired the ill-conceived modernistic look shown above. Opposite, see its 1951 reincarnation (after a second remodeling). It was given the timeless good looks of an English cottage by ripping off the gimcracks, facing the front with brick, adding a new roof and some simple but excellent landscaping

ARCHITECT: GERARD COLCORD

House is 1 Year Old!

It looks so happily rooted on its hillside that it's hard to believe the house above hasn't basked there for years in that sunshine, just as it is. But actually, though its foundations are forty, its face is only one year old. Here's the story, a remodeling Right and Wrong as well as a Before and After: This house was built about 1912, then brought "up to date" during the 1920's by the tasteless masking of its façade with that modernistic gingerbread you see on the opposite page. That was Wrong. Now skip a few decades. Last year, radio actor Elliot Lewis bought it for the sake of its sound structure and spacious interior, and, with help from architect Gerard Colcord, endowed it with its new and engaging personality. They were Right. They ripped off that heavy band around the top which was supposed to make the house look modern (but didn't), then repaired the scars with a brick front, and added the gently pitched roof to achieve serene and timeless architectural design.

Dollar for dollar, it paid the Lewises to buy and alter this roomy house inside as well as out—a new one with the same amenities would have cost them much more. That new floor plan is perfect for a couple with very full lives. There's room for entertaining, plenty of it: formally in the large living room and dining room, informally in the tavern which flourishes in full view of the rear garden where the small den used to be. Since actor Lewis needs a den, too, they arranged for a large one on the site of the old patio—it was mostly walled in, so no important structural to-do was needed for roofing it over. Perhaps best of all is that master bedroom suite which follows a formula deserving high priority in your file of dream-house ideas: the big double bedroom provides for each of its owners the singular blessing of a private dressing room and bath.

Place and Show

t a time of year when flowers are scarce and expensive, we've done a table setting for you without a real blossom we ve done a table seems scattered with posies. Recall if you will, a blustery March day and the first sight of gentle fresh violets nestling in soft fur-a sure sign that spring is on the way! This lovely table captures the same feeling: the lavender-blue violets and Franciscan's fine goldbanded "Olympic" china are so realistic you can almost pick them and feel their velvety petals. A strange yet becoming anomaly is this, for the delicate drawing of the flowers is as traditional a handling of a floral pattern as you are apt to see-realistic rather than stylized; but the actual forms of the ware itself are definitely modern; the subtle coupe shape of the plates with no indented well or raised border, and the simple lines of the coffee pot pictured above. China is about $14.50, for a five-piece place setting.

The crystal goblets have a similar pleasant contradiction. They are Tiffin's "Ming Modern," a shape as old as China herself. You'll find this delicately curved bowl, this short, round foot in ancient ceramic bowls and wine cups. But the simplicity of this form makes it as compatible with modern as the newest Scandinavian designs. These are about $2.00.

Our flowerless centerpiece is an arrangement of glittering crystal pieces, all by Tiffin—the swelling soaring birds poised on heavy transparent globules of crystal; the magnificent tall candlesticks with bell-shaped hurricane globes a full 16½ inches high. Birds are about $30 a pair; the hurricane lamps, about $25 a pair.

The sterling flatware, an enlarged detail of which you see above, is Alvin's "Southern Charm" pattern, a design that is definitely traditional in execution, yet chaste enough to be completely at home with these other friendly modern pieces. Six-piece place setting about $29.75. Covered serving dishes and salts and peppers are Gorham's sterling.

The place mats, which catch the color of the violets and send it winking through reflections in silver and crystal, are Belgian linen with a basketweave border—about 75¢ each.

Here's the built-to-order headquarters of a woman who loves the view from her home and sees no reason to waste it during her working hours. So when it came to the kitchen of their new house, Mrs. Willis Broadhead of St. Louis Co., Mo., specified a long, narrow room divided into working and social halves, paneled with pickled pine, floored with rubber tile which resembles brick, and open to the view by a series of large windows. In addition to an excellent arrangement of up-to-the-second equipment which includes a thermostatically controlled ventilating fan over the stove, it has to its credit: toe space under the counters, a pair of lazy Susans in corner cabinets, a tray file, slide-out bottle holders, slide-out pot rack, acoustical ceiling.

4 thsps. finely cut parsley 1/2 tsp. celery salt

1/4 tsp. salt 1/4 tsp. poultry seasoning

Green onions and DEL MONTE Catsup if desired 6 thsps. finely chopped onion

Make 12 thin patties of the meat. Let bread crumbs stand in milk; then add 1/2 cup of the corn and the remaining ingredients; mix well. Sprinkle patties with salt and pepper; put together with the stuffing mixture, in pairs. Place in shallow pan; bake in moderately hot oven (400° F.) about 15 min. or till done to taste. Serve with the rest of the corn, heated and seasoned. Garnish with DEL MONTE Catsup and onions as shown, if desired. Makes 6 servings.

The Dinner Bell

broiler split in quarters and baked in our own very special sauce—a rich, red tomato sauce compounded of sugar and spice and everything nice. . . . here is a queen of dishes for you, but one which is as easy on the budget and as easy in the making as it is easy on the tongue and eye. And it's a symbol of one advantage the dear new days have over the dear old ones: you can have main courses like this at "just family" meals because the mass production of chicken has brought its price right in line with once-lowly fare. And you don't have to eat your fill of it in the spring and yearn for it the rest of the year the way you used to, because chicken is now in plentiful supply the whole vear around

The Little Red Chick we're crowing about here is easy in the doing because you can combine its sauce in five minutes flat, then ladle it over the chicken quarters before baking it at 350° F. Two hours later, you'll find the goodness of the chick blended with that hot and handsome sauce, all ready to serve up four husky appetites. And you can repeat it soon!

Those potatoes were designed to go with the chick both in looks and in taste. Instead of just plain mashed spuds, we fashioned them into nests after adding a whole egg to give them fluffiness. Then under the broiler until lightly browned. Nesting in the nests is a filling of chopped buttered celery and pimiento, a compliment and a complement to our chicken.

Now for the salad which seems so right with this dinner: grapefruit sections offer a refreshing tartness, while avocado slices contribute a subtle mellowness. Between the slices, tuck an occasional crisp onion ring, and if the red variety isn't available, a white onion will do just as well. For a superb dressing, copy a French model by substituting fresh lemon juice for vinegar in your favorite French dressing recipe-you'll borrow this idea for use with any fruit salad.

And now for those crusty skyscraper popovers! If you would like to add to your reputation as a cook with a list of specialties which never fail, here is one your public is sure to approve. Popovers are usually tricky-but not these. They're foolproof, and to make them more so, we give you some how-to's on page 62. And to make them taste still better, we added the flavor of onion to them. A tip from our AMERICAN HOME kitchen to yours: as soon as popovers come from the oven, prick their tops with a fork to let the steam escape. This operation is our secret for preventing the sogginess which so often blights popovers.

Lemon Feather-Lite seemed to be the best name for a beautifully light cake which is angel food with golden yolks added. It has that angel touch, and it's decked out in a sweet but tart whippedcream glaze. After a sample, we know that you will ring the dinner bell out loud for this one, too!

SHELF-KUSHIONS

Discover the newest, most exciting idea that ever saved time and work in the kitchen . . . Rubbermaid Shelf-Kushions.

They're permanent rubber shelf-liners that protect dishes and quiet your cupboards.

Now you can stand up dishes safely in the molded plate rail. And the special surface ribbed design allows ventilation for glassware.

Here's more good news to make cupboard care easy. Rubbermaid Shelf-Kushions lie flat, wipe clean with a damp cloth, and stay new-looking for years—never curling, warping, peeling, or softening. They come in gay colors . . . in standard 11¾ inch widths, and a choice of 24, 30, or 36-inch lengths.

Space-saving Rubbermaid Plate Racks are good news for cupboards, too. They do away with plate-stacking, prevent chipping.

Imagination an essential ingredient s Americans, we probably have no set tradition in our pattern of cooking-for, after all, we are a real "melting pot" of all nations, and what is more natural than our food assuming this same blending of ideas? We may pride ourselves on the ability to cook "as well as Mother"typical New England fashion, or deep South in trend-however, food ideas do change through the years for one reason or another. G.I.'s who served overseas found French or Italian cooking, for example, suited their palates, and, tucked in a corner of their overseas bag, came a special recipe. Or perhaps foreign travels have alerted some of us to the real goodness of foreign cooking-and all to the good! For just plain American food has tended to be bland, seasoned toward no particular flavor-and don't forget the old saying that "food without seasoning is like talk without reasoning." We admit there is glamour in the very thought of herbs and spices, but we're willing to bet there's a lot more glamour in food with a pungent, herby, well-seasoned flavor!

One word best describes the use of herbs and spices in cooking: "Subtlety"! Over-seasoning as well as under-seasoning should be guarded against. The dish should be such that people say "What have you put in to give this delicious flavor?" rather than "Um, you've got orégano in this, haven't you?" How delicious an ordinary recipe can become when the seasoning is alluringly mysterious and not the least bit obvious! When using more than one herb at a time. blend them carefully so that only one flavor predominates. And, very important, be sure to remember that the delicate aroma and flavor of savory herbs is lost after long cooking the herb touch should come toward the end of the cooking period.

Herbs are a weapon-in-hand for the homemaker who's struggling with the high cost of meat on a budgetfor the flavor of thriftier meat can be improved tremendously with the addition of only one, or a proper blend-

A tip to enhance the flavor of pork chops or pork steak is to add a generous sprinkling of sage to the pork while steaming. A sprinkling of thyme during braising also does wonders to make fresh ham even more savory-

Imagination

try rubbing powdered sage into the ham before cooking!

Thrifty and quick cooking—creamed dried beef flavored with a little powdered sage—or a pinch of thyme added to corned beef hash will really bring questions from a hungry crowd. Even hamburger takes on added glory for the addition of a dash of orégano. Or try fixing chipped meat as an herbal meat loaf! For about 1½ pounds of meat, add a ½ teaspoon both of marjoram and savory.

When chicken's on the "good buy" list, add a new taste-turn to the plain roast fowl by basting with melted herb butter—made by adding ½ tsp. dried tarragon to ½ cup melted butter—or (only please, one at a time!) ½ tsp. orégano, ½ tsp. sweet basil, ¼ tsp. powdered thyme, or ½ tsp. powdered marjoram.

Spices, too, can do much to improve the flavor of thriftier cuts of meat—and even the spices we associate most generally with pastry cooking add a marvelous touch to certain meat flavors. When cooking a pot roast, just before flouring, sprinkle the roast with ¼ tsp. ground cloves, pepper, and celery salt. Or if it's whole cloves you'd rather use, just add six (plus a crushed bay leaf, naturally!) to a cooking pot roast.

Hamburger that's seasoned with onion salt becomes better tasting with a dash of powdered allspice-and the same dash added to the flour used for dredging roasts is very good. About three or four whole allspice berries added to the water used for boiling fish adds worlds of flavor improvement! Chili powder, so typical of dishes of the Southwest, should be reserved not for hot, steaming chili alone! A wonderful addition to most stuffings, and perfect for bringing out the flavor of the meat and vegetables in the plainest of stews-just try half a teaspoon.

Where herb and spice cookery are concerned, our imagination runs on and on—and, really, imagination in cooking is the ingredient most necessary in experimenting with new taste treats which herbs and spices can bring to everyday cooking!

SURE IT'S SMART, THESE DAYS, TO OWN YOUR OWN FOOD FREEZER!

BUT, IT'S SMARTER,
THESE DAYS, TO BE SURE
YOUR FOOD FREEZER
IS BUILT RIGHT!

Knowing which food freezer to buy is as easy as 1-2-3

How wonderful it is, to enjoy the garden-fresh goodness of out-of-season fruits and vegetables! To have a constant supply of wonderful frozen foods at your fingertips. To save lots of food money by buying in quantities at sale prices—all because you have a food freezer!

But be sure to get the right food freezer! It's as easy as 1-2-3!

- Look for rugged construction. Frigidaire Food Freezers are strong and sturdy, built to last. Can't buckle or warp even when loaded with hundreds of pounds of food. The lid seal is always good and tight. Moisture-laden air can't leak into the cabinet to cause frosting and icing. Complete wrap-around freezing coils put and keep cold where it's needed most. It's the only freezer with coils on all four sides and bottom for complete freezing protection!
- 2 Look for efficient insulation. Three things are important. The amount of insulation, the way it is packed, the way it is sealed. Frigidaire insulation is thick and efficient. And years of experience have taught Frigidaire engineers the way to pack and seal insulation against outside and inside moisture. As a result, it can't water-log, can't expand . . . keeps all the cold inside.
- 3 Look for cold-making power. The Frigidaire Meter-Miser, simplest refrigerating mechanism ever built, provides more reserve power than you'll ever need. And only Frigidaire has it! . . . See the Frigidaire Food Freezers, and inspect all their advantages, at your Frigidaire Dealers now!

You've Asked About Them

Home Freezers—Our answers to questions most frequently asked on their use and care

NEED SPECIAL WIRING? No. Plug it into a direct outlet (no extension cords) in any place convenient to you. Do put it on a circuit of its own.

HOW COLD INSIDE? Run a new freezer for 24 hours at near-zero temperatures before putting in food to be frozen. About 4 lbs. of food per cubic foot may be frozen every 24 hours. Fluctuation of temperatures causes unsatisfactory results, so keep a thermometer in the freezer and never let the temperature go above 10° F.

IF POWER FAILS? Keep the door to the freezer closed! Power is seldom off long enough to cause damage to frozen foods, for it takes many hours to thaw foods in a well-insulated freezer. A well-stocked freezer will keep most foods frozen for several days, for the fuller the freezer, the longer foods will stay frozen. If service is interrupted for longer than a 24-hour period, add dry ice (usually obtainable from ice cream or frozen food stores) or take your frozen foods to a locker plant. Notify your local power company that you are a freezer owner. Many companies have priority lists for freezer owners, and should power fail, these circuits are repaired first.

warned of Power Fallure? Most new freezers are equipped with either a light or alarm signal to warn you that all is not well. Heed these signals, and look for them daily!

DEFROSTING? The freezer should be defrosted when the accumulation of frost on the interior of the cabinet interferes with closing the lid, removing storage baskets, or efficient use. It usually consists of scraping frost from the sides with a special wooden or plastic scraper. Some manufacturers, however, recommend that the current be cut off and the freezer defrosted in a way similar to defrosting a refrigerator, so be sure to read your instructions!

NEED CLEANING? By all means! Clean the interior with baking soda and water after each defrosting. If it has a rubber gasket, keep it free of oil and grease, for these are natural enemies of rubber. To keep it looking shiny as new, wash exterior with a damp soapy cloth and protect with high-quality wax.

Terving buffet? Here's your chance to contribute to table-setting tra-dition, for since this easy form of entertaining has become so popular even for small parties that the buffet is nothing like it used to be. New traditions are in the making, so improvise to your heart's content until you develop an arrangement best for your

Keep two things in mind: first, table in your room. traffic control must be good, which means that you should arrange plates, silver, napkins, and food in such a way that each guest can help himway that each guest can help himself conveniently to each dish—and walk away with the proper implements. Second, use your wits to make the setting a treat for the eyes.

For convenience, decide, to begin with, whether circulation will be best in your room if the table is against the wall surrounded by plenty of space on three sides, or away from the wall where the table's whole perimeter may be used. Then let your menu determine the details. You may make one unit of plates (never more than 12 to a stack), napkins, and flatware. Or you may put silver and plates near the food for which they'll be used, grouping cups and saucers with the teaspoons, the coffee urn, the sugar and creamer; dessert plates with dessert and the silver used for eating it. At a dinner, it's usually better to serve dessert and coffee after the main course has been cleared away. When the crowd is large and the table small, and everything comes on at once, try to have side tables for coffee and sweets. Avoid foods which need knives, and skip the salad fork if your main course is eaten with a fork.

Use your imagination, and plan the table for color interest. Your table may be uncovered, or covered with anything you like from paper mats to the finest of linen cloths. But because so much goes on at a buffet table, a solid-color cloth or a handsome bare table top is usually best, especially if your china is patterned. You can pile the napkins, place them between the stacks of plates, or arrange them attractively at any easily accessible spot on your table.

Whether it is a colorful mound of vegetables or a formal flower arrangement, make your centerpiece as gay, and as handsome, and as much a conversation piece as possible. Build it as high as you like and place it where won't block traffic around the table. Your best candlesticks, your chafing dishes, all your favorite table bedeckments are at home on buffets so long as they do a job, go well with other appointments, and don't interfere with the main business at hand: the serving of food.

No need to wait for help in "rolling back" food costs to fit your budget! You can do it for yourself, by following one simple rule. Just make sure that the first utensil on your range at mealtimes every day, is a MIRRO-MATIC Pressure Pan!

Heartening hot lunches, so satisfying to hungry, young appetites, take only minutes of your time and pennies from your pocketbook, if you plan them with MIRRO-MATIC in mind. And MIRRO-MATIC really rings the dinner bell, quickly cooking economical cuts of meat to tasty tenderness . . . helping vegetables to keep a bigger share of their natural, appetizing color, garden-fresh flavor, and mineral and vitamin values...topping off the meal with inexpensive quickly prepared desserts.

Every single day, MIRRO-MATIC can save money, save time, and save fuel for you, actually letting you serve your family better, for less. as anyone who already owns a MIRRO-MATIC Pressure Pan will tell you.

Photography is our number 4 national hobby, but few amateurs are lucky enough to have display areas for pet prints—never enough wall space. This screen not only organizes the clutter of an assortment of photographs, but turns them to decorative advantage. It can be a permanent fixture or be folded away for easy storage. It is equipped with metal shelf track (kind used for mounting bookshelves) so your prints can slide in and out for frequent changing. The prints we show are all mounted on 12 by 15-inch boards, but you can plan your screen for any size. For the panels, use 3/4-in. plywood boards; for frame, 3/4 by 11/2 in. lumber.

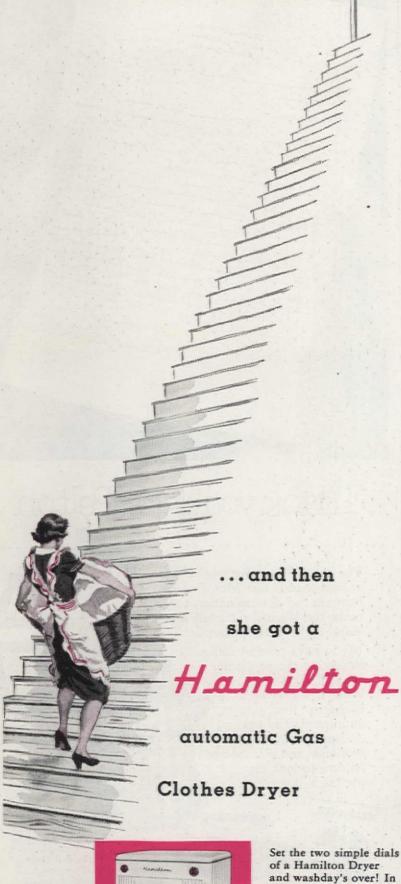

Make frame. Cut corner joint on 45° angle. Before nailing plywood panels to frame, apply a little glue. Use small nails. Countersink

Install two hinges between each two panels. Note ½-in. overhang which permits screen to be closed with metal shelf track in place

Attach shelf track to panels with \(^3\)-in. screws. Your mount ing board size will determine number of tracks and space between. For 12 by 15-in. boards, leave 15 in. between tracks, with \(^3\)\(^2\)-in. border at top and 5 in. at bottom of screen

Give Your Home The Matchless Beauty Of Famous Williamsburg Colors...

• One of the delights of visiting restored Williamsburg is seeing the beautiful colors used by our ancestors. These same bues are available today in Pittsburgh reproductions for modern homes. For example, you can have lovely Rose-Tan which decorates this enchanting bridal suite in the Chiswell-Bucktrout House. This and many other beautiful shades are represented among Pittsburgh Historic Wall Paints, priced well within the range of ordinary finishes.

As Practical As They Are Lovely, These Authentic Period Colors
Are Available Exclusively In Pittsburgh Historic Paints, Approved
By Williamsburg Restoration, Incorporated

Now YOU CAN ENJOY the glorious hues that contributed so much to gracious living in the cavalier homes of early Virginia. These distinguished colors, steeped in centuries of tradition, are reproduced exclusively by Pittsburgh in a series of Historic Paints which bear the hallmark of Williamsburg Restoration, Incorporated.

- Just as careful research paved the way to the faithful restoration of the once proud capital of the Royal Colony of Virginia, so painstaking work by Pittsburgh's color experts and technicians has made possible the authentic reproduction of these colors for practical use in modern home decoration.
- The charming rooms shown here are from restored Williamsburg. They suggest the pleasing, decorative effects you can obtain by applying the principles of COLOR DYNAMICS in the use of Williamsburg colors.

- This remarkable Pittsburgh painting system makes use of the energy in color to help you harmonize these lovely hues to the best advantage in every room of your home.
- The distinctive results you obtain are made all the more enduring by the live-paint protection that is a time-tested advantage of all Pittsburgh Paints. Enriched with special "Vitolized Oils" which remain in the paint film, these high-quality paints provide a smoother, richer finish that keeps its fresh, new beauty longer than ordinary paints.
- See your nearest Pittsburgh dealer and have him explain how much more enduring satisfaction you enjoy when you paint right with COLOR DYNAMICS and paint best with Pittsburgh Paints.

 Walls and fireplace of Colonial Blue give this lovely dining room of the King's Arms Tavern a pleasing atmosphere of bospitality and good cheer. This is but one of many colonial colors authentically reproduced in Pittsburgh Historic Paints.

Vallace Steele's came in third, in addition to winning First Prize for the Midwest region. And those prizes really counted, for they were awarded y a jury which included not only top architects but down-to-earth builders s well. Actually, the house we illustrate is an improvement over the prize esign: the only faults the jurors found with the original drawings were in etails of exterior design and the garage location, shortcomings which chitect Steele corrected before this house was blueprinted and built, Take a close look at the practical plan (page 24). It's all good, but the ning which really sets it above most houses of its size is the section which cludes the front entry, the kitchen, and that thousand-and-one purpose ea we've marked "dining." Especially the latter area. In most houses of is size, a dining room, a real one, is an unknown blessing. There's usually "dining area" in the living room, but it's apt to be more a builder's signation than an actual fact, so the family eats its meals in the kitchen's lining nook." Not the family who lives here! This dining area can join with the living room or remain completely aloof from it, but it's a hole dining room, and you could set up a large table in it without going ar the living room proper. It's an informal dining room for the family. it it can get as formal as you like. In addition, the open counter which nnects it with the kitchen (see illustration on page 27) is a snack bar, this space becomes the handy dining nook as well.

But feeding the family is only one of the functions of this area. To see with works with the house, imagine what a boon a layout like this would to a sociable young mother.

See what happens, for instance, when your committee comes to tea.

o need for a flurry at four—your living room has been serene since praining, because nobody had to so much as walk through it, thanks to that rd-working dining area which is also the main traffic way of the house, was here that you served your offspring their lunch and after-school acks, here that you did your sewing, wrote those letters, and perhaps essed your dress. This area has its own door to the outside, and since at door is the one nearest the play yard and garage, it's the main family door-the little foyer off the front door stays spruce and ready for visitors

So your guests will come in through the main entry (in too many small houses, this is part of the living room, not set off as it is here). They'll hang their coats in the generous closet, then settle down in that living room which seems more spacious than it really is. The goings-on won't be interrupted, because a big-house principle has been incorporated here: this is a dead-end room—the dining area assumes the heavy traffic.

Your young Jack and Jill won't disturb you. They have plenty of space of their own in the great big playroom. Who ever heard of a big playroom in a small three-bedroom house? Well, thanks to an accordion-like folding partition, the youngsters' two bedrooms become a single large one by day, and two distinct units by night. With double-decker beds, these quarters designed for two, could house four children.

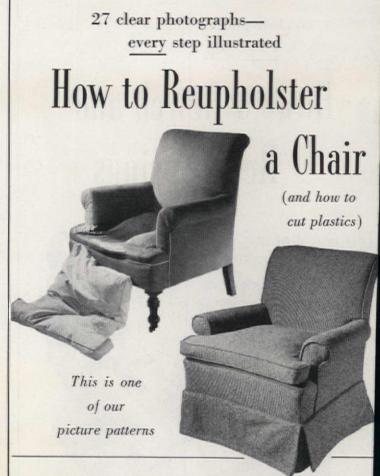

As the tots reach the age when study is as important as play, the house adjusts to their needs-and yours. Put a wall where the folding partition was, and the nursery becomes two real bedrooms, each with wall space for furniture to supplement big closets with built-in shelves and shoe racks

As the family grows up, the uses of that dining area will grow, too. The useful snack bar is just right as a work table, a hobby table, or a fine place for games on rainy afternoons. And how grateful you'll be for that dining area when the small fry troop in with their friends afte school! They can be "entertained" here with milk and cookies, but they'l be out of your kitchen, out of your living room, and close to the play yard which was designed for them.

When party-time comes, the dining area suddenly remembers that it i part of the living room. Used together, the two are big enough to wel come a teen-age gang. Then you may all be happier if they use the rumpu room in the basement-next to the laundry, space was allowed for just such hospitality headquarters: a rumpus room with its own fireplace.

That kitchen (page 27) is something to hanker for, too-not only f the sake of its very new equipment, but because of its location in th house as well. You're really in command of the whole place from here you can be a part of whatever activity is going on in the dining area, and you can even see out into the play yard; you can tell who's at either door, and you're just a short step from the living room.

Your master bedroom? Don't miss its cross ventilation, its views of the play yard and the rear garden. Note its nearness to the bath, its two large closets, and the fact that a double battery of closets separates it from the main area of the house.

Scaled to fit the house, the living room is a small-house room which has learned a whole bag of tricks from the custom-built living rooms of big modern houses. Here a whole wall of south-facing windows is protected by a broad solar overhang so it will bring in the sun's warmth in winter and shut out its heat in summer. If you have a view, this window can greet it. The fireplace is given an important treatment, for the entire wall is designed around it, a wall sheathed in wood and set off by a long hearth.

This is a woody house whose warm materials lend softness and richness to its economically simple lines. The exterior redwood siding, gaily interrupted by bright yellow doors, comes right into the house: it panels the fireplace wall and appears on the ceiling of the kitchen and dining area. The well-favored cork floors, quiet and soft, need few rugs—they're warm in winter, cool in summer.

Heating here is by means of a new air-wall gas system which distributes its warmth through inexpensive 4-in. ducts rather than through costly custom-made outlets.

"Well, fine, all of it," you say. "But if it's in the $20,000 class, this small house is too rich for my blood!" But it doesn't have to be in that class. Your local contractor, who knows the average per-square-foot construction costs in your area can tell you the price of building it. Builder Boran made this Minneapolis version a little gem of a house. Everything in it would be nice to have. But you could pare it down.

For example, if you build it without the basement and the fireplace, you'll still have a prize winner, for the contest version had neither. The only change in floor plan you'd have to make is to put the heater in the space now occupied by the staircase to the basement. Then, too, in many parts of the country you could use a carport instead of a garage.

If stout but less expensive materials were substituted for some of the practical but costlier ones used here, the house could come within the budget of even more people. But don't tamper with the good basic plan, for it is that, after all, which made this house a multiple prize winner.

Government Issue

The United States Government prints not only money, but pamphlets on almost every imaginable subject. Too little is known about the fact that these helpful booklets are available to the public at very low cost. Below are described only a few of the thousands of instructive booklets from which you can learn, profit, and find enjoyment.

These booklets may be obtained by writing the Superintendent of Documents, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington 25. D.C.

A new edition of the Government's best seller, Infant Care, has recently been published, and includes a section entitled "You and Your Baby Sitter." This invaluable chapter offers suggestions for making certain the sitter is reliable, giving her the proper information before leaving, and the etiquette of baby sitting—from both the sitter's and the parents' points of view. The entire booklet has been completely rewritten by Children's Bureau specialists and provides a specific, reliable guide for the rearing of infants up to one year. 20¢

Hobby books, as such, are not issued by the Federal Government, but many bulletins printed in conjunction with various Government programs are of interest to hobbyists. Here are listed only a few of the many booklets available:

Photography (2 vols.) Volume 1 is a 478-page manual of basic photographic principles and practices. Volume 2 discusses the more specialized fields. Each volume, $1.25.

Postage Stamps of the United States, 1847–1950. A complete, authentic review of United States postage stamps, fully and accurately described. 60¢

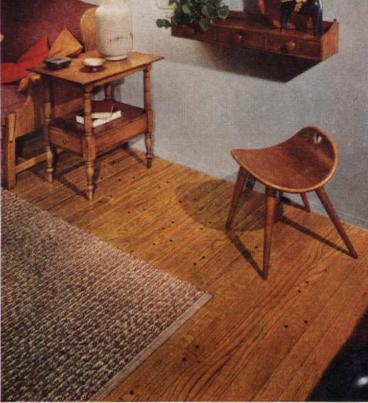

House Plants. Includes descriptions of many kinds of house plants, proper soil conditions, how to plant and care for them. 10¢

Attracting Birds. How to attract, feed, water, and protect birds. 10¢

Fundamentals of Electricity. Originally written as a Navy training manual, this explains in detail the basic principles of electricity as applied to everyday uses such as ignition systems, batteries, generators, 75¢

Operation of Small Boats and Harbor Craft. Another Armed Forces manual, this is intended to acquaint the beginner with the theories of boat handling, emergency measures, and other information. 30¢

Make It of Leather. How to make more than 15 different leather articles, with simple instruction and illustrations. 15¢

It's the tile that's right in 9 cases out of 10!

Flexible! Gold Seal Linoleum Tile can take the up-and-down movement of the average wood floor without cracking—without even a strain! Brittle tile may crack and shatter over wood floors.

Grease-resistant! Even the hottest spatters won't soften Gold Seal Linoleum Tile or fade its colors. (Grease pits the surface of some tiles—even disintegrates them! Think of that in your kitchen!)

Easy to install! Gold Seal Linoleum Tiles are precision-cut, almost fit themselves into place. And to fit them around thresholds you merely cut them with a knife.

Quiet, restful! Linoleum is blissfully quiet—not clattery as brittle tile is. It's comfortable underfoot—not hard and tiring.

Beautiful! Shiny, brittle tile has the hard cold look of an office or a factory . . . but the deep-glowing satiny texture and the rich soft colors of Gold Seal Linoleum Tile have the warm, inviting, welcoming look of home!

They Planned this Remodeling before they Bought it

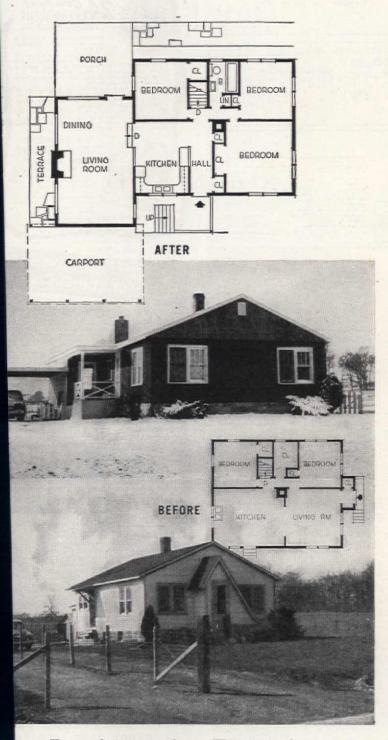

Outbuildings and incongruous little entry porch marred the house directly above. New personality came from brown insulated shingle installed right over original asbestos shingle, from knotty pine trim, and neat, inviting fence. New entry is on another side of house he beauty treatment above-transforming this house from nondescript to spruce contemporary-was remarkable enough But it isn't the half of this remodeling project (for detail of the inside story, see plans on page 97). All of these wonder were wrought mostly with their own hands, by the N. G. Bitter mans of Carterville, Ill., who first saw the house, surrounded by cornfield instead of garden, in the spring of 1949.

It didn't look good to them, even though their entire five year of married life had been spent in converted Army barracks. Fo one thing, it had only one piece of plumbing-a leaky faucet i the kitchen. But its roof was good, its large basement was dry and its possibilities hopeful. So they sketched out their remode ing plans, found them feasible-and bought the house.

Since Capt. Bitterman not only had an engineer's degree, bu also knew his way around a carpenter's shop, they decided to us

Here are the important changes. Whopping new living room stretches across entire rear of house, its roof extended to shelter entry. House got its first bath, a real entry hall, an extra bedroom, a centrally located kitchen. Rear porch may become a room some day their own labor, calling in professionals only when it seemed wise to have such skill—as for foundation work and the installation of a complete water and plumbing system. It took a couple of years' worth of evenings and week ends, but the work discouraged them so little, and the results encouraged them so much, that they stuck it out to the end.

The major improvement in plan was the new living-room wing. You can see some of its merits on the plan: its big-family size, its convenience to the kitchen, its isolation from children's bedrooms, its three exposures, its terrace, and the porch which may some day become a den. But it has others, just as important, copied from some of the most advanced of modern houses.

For example, its longest wall was faced to the south so that t could take in the best view, and the view over which the Bitermans had the most control since their land reached farthest PLEASE TURN TO PAGE 98 Permaglas

Because they could control rear view, they faced new living room that way, and planted young pines at the end of the land. Rear garden is private; play area is convenient to house. Note U-shaped driveway for good off-street parking in that direction. But facing it south, meant that they could also have a true solar room. By checking up on the exact latitude of their house and the way the sun's rays hit it, they were able to arrange matters so that the south-facing windows let in no sun during the hot months (March 20-Sept. 20), but let the sun stream in during the cold weather. It was all done by the exact calculation of the height of the windows, and the height and amount of overhang of the roof. And it means that they need no awnings in summer, and do not heat the living room on sunny winter days!

The roof of the new wing is flat (but completely insulated) for several good reasons: the construction was inexpensive, adapts itself to additions, and permits this part of the house to be water-cooled in summer.

Birth Certificates for Houses

FRED DICKENSON

Babies have books crammed with astounding data concerning the fresh arrival, dogs and horses have their vital statistics duly jotted down—but not so with houses.

All too often, innocent houses are treated like something abandoned on the doorstep of a foundling home. From the moment that the painter closes the door, the idea seems to be to obscure as quickly as possible everything that future owners may ever want to know about the place. But there are good reasons why every house should have a birth certificate.

There are sentimental reasons, for example. Let us say you fall in love with a shy little bungalow of uncertain age, and decide to take her for your own. Feeling like a cad for not trusting her at sight, you hire a lawyer who delves into musty records in a basement somewhere and finally merges to say (for a fee, of course) that the title search is okay.

So you buy the house and move in. and your love deepens with every splinter in your thumb and every callus on your knee. Gentle snows and warming suns soften you up by turns until the time comes when sentiment overwhelms you and you wish you knew who first thought of building here, who planned the rooms, and who turned the first shovelful of earth. How long did it take to build. and was there a rooftree party where the first owners, shivery with pride and anticipation, plied the workmen with foaming drinks in the hope that they would spur them to greater efforts? What day did they move in and launch the home that is now yours on its shining career of sheltering the passing wanderer? You wish you knew, just for the fun of it if nothing else. And the chances are that you will never find out.

You can't count on the neighbors helping you because many of them came to the neighborhood after your house was built. Anyone who was there first is apt to take on a glassy stare and say, "Sure, the Egmonts built that house in 1928, or was it the Fitzmattresses in 1931? I think it was the Klamfoozels in 1935 because that was the year my tomatoes came down with bubonic plague."

It might be that your desire for intimate knowledge about your house is based, not on sentiment or nostalgia, but on more practical considerations. This is because the average dwelling has a number of pipes and drains which go looping out through the basement walls into the inscrutable beyond. They seemingly have

"It took 2 Houses to teach us the Value of Plywood Subflooring"

"Everyone profits by experience. That certainly was true when Chris and I built our first house. We helped plan it. Even helped select the materials.

"Some things worked out fine. Some didn't. We splurged on floor coverings—bought the best. But we economized—or thought we did—on things like subflooring. Mistake! After we moved in, we found our floors began to develop little humps and hollows. And they squeaked like a haunted house.

"It's going to be different in our new house. Our architect told us about plywood. It's far and away the best for subfloors, he said. Makes floors look better, last longer. The big panels lay flat and stay flat. That's because plywood won't cup, shrink, swell, warp or squeak. It keeps out drafts. Makes floors warmer, too.

"Our builder agreed—said you can't beat plywood subfloors for strength and firmness. It even means extra protection against windstorm and earthquake. And happy news! We found when you add up all the costs, plywood is as economical as it is practical. Our plywood subfloor was laid in less than half the time needed for other materials."

Ask your lumber dealer about plywood's advantages for every building or remodeling job. For more information about plywood subfloors mail coupon below.

been there, performing some noble function, for years, and you realize instinctively that it is the better part of wisdom to let sleeping pipes lie.

This is not always feasible, however. A neighbor who had been in his 10-year-old house for just one year took a decidedly detached attitude when I asked him about the drain in his cellar floor. He informed me that the water went down it, and that's all he cared about. I was interested because I had no nice drain-just a sump pump which had been installed at extra cost because there was no regular sewer system. Apparently some smart builder had provided him with a dry well or had hooked him into the storm drain which ran along under the curb.

The situation changed abruptly at the time of a big rain, and the hipboot definitely was on the other foot. My neighbor's nice drain, into which water formerly ran, suddenly took on the awesome aspects of Old Faithful. When last I saw him, the flood had subsided and he was kneeling on a rubber pad, peering thoughtfully into the inky depths of this traitorous drain.

Our house is not going to finish its days as an enigmatic orphan, baffling a succession of worried but affectionate owners, for I have a plan.

One set of blueprints of our house I have marked for posterity. As they stand, they tell everything anyone can reasonably want to know about the interior of the house. They also include a plot plan accurately locating the dwelling on the property, and it is on this sheet that I am doing my duty by future generations.

The course of each pipe, wire, drain, or whatnot that lurks beneath that innocent terrain is being charted in imperishable ink while the whole thing is still fresh in my memory. Sometimes the responsibility staggers me. Already, since various additions were made by different contractors, I am the only person in the world who knows where everything is. If I do not get it down on paper before some mischance prevents completion, the nation's roster of mystery dwellings will have added a dilly. By really great perseverance, I have acquired that rare commodity-a fuse list-and it has been typed out and pasted inside the box.

On the back of one of the blueprints I have noted the salient facts of our home's brief history-the conferences with the architect and contractor; the date when the bulldozer first bit into the earth; and that lovely rainy day when all five of us trooped through the mud and came home for the first time.

That birth certificate is being put away carefully, and it's going to be as much a part of the house as the front door and the chimney.

sketches, a simple key to the more common (eastern) visitors, and good lists of books, bulletins, etc.

Color and Design for Every Garden by H. Stuart Ortloff and Henry B. Raymore. (Barrows) Price $3.50. . . The authors are landscape architects who know the problems and needs of small-home owners. Though they call the book a sequel to their Garden Planning and Building, it can stand on its own feet. For it introduces the reader to the subject of garden planning which, as it insists, should always precede the actual making and planting. It provides both basic principles and detailed practical advice, including many excellent planting lists and diagrams.

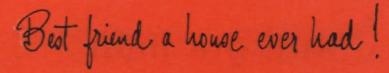

Flowers from Old Gardens selected and edited by Hal W. Trovillion (Trovillion Private Press, Herrin, Ill.) Price $3.00. . . A "library in miniature of some of the lovable old treatises touching on gardening," this collection of quotations from the literature of many lands and ages is a lovely bit of book-making; a most appropriate gift for a garden-minded friend, host, or relative.

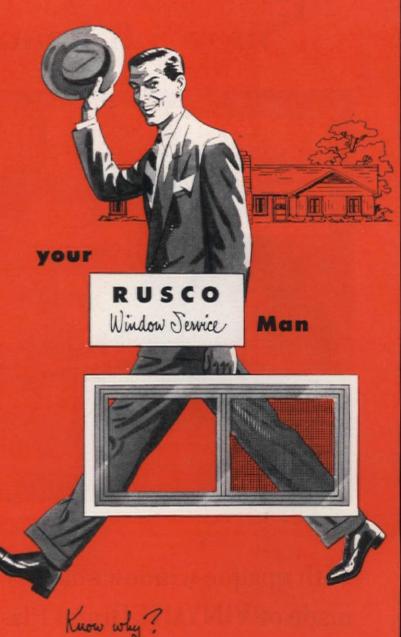

Family Gardening made and issued by Impco, Inc., New Milford, N. J. Price $30. . . Don't let the price scare you. This is not a book, but a set of six filmstrips (326 captioned pictures) dealing with Soil Preparation, Planting and Growing, Harvesting and Using, Preserving and Storing, Some Special Garden Problems, and What is Family Gardening? Prepared with the help of the U.S. Extension Service, it carries a jolly hypothetical family through the whole productive seasonal cycle in a colorful but practical way.

State Flowers and State Birds by Robert Sparks Walker. (The Sunshine Press) Price $3.00. . . By making the official state flowers and birds the subjects of these pleasant little poems, Tennessee's famous naturalist, philosopher, and author has made it easier for us to know and remember them. Handsomely printed and bound in a limited edition.

Don't Waste Those Wood Ashes!

ood ashes are valuable. Not to make soap with, as our ancestors did; nor for scattering on icy walks (sand or coal cinders are better). But worked into the garden soil next spring, either broadcast after spading, or around individual plants, they supply the essential food element, potassium (potash), which helps make crops vigorous, sturdy, floriferous. In his new lily book, Jan de Graaff says, "A tablespoonful [of wood ashes] for every lily clump is just about right." And that goes for practically anything.

As you collect them from your fireplaces (always leaving a few behind), don't dump ashes outdoors or on the frozen soil where rain and snow will leach their goodness away. Store them under cover, or in tight cans, tubs, etc., until soil-fitting time rolls around. Then use them freely.

"Burning Bush"

f your garden needs a spectacular splash of spring color; if you have a place for boundary shrubs that will give privacy to a portion of your lawn; if you like the idea of a twoin-one bush that is both beautiful and useful-then consider the crimson-salmon Japanese- or Floweringquince, also called "burning-bush" because of its profuse and flambovant bloom. It was formerly classified as a species of true quince, listed as Cydonia japonica, and therefore occasionally called "japonica"; those names are still used in some catalogues and by old-time gardeners, although the accepted botanical name is now Chaenomeles lagenaria.

By the first of May, in Vermont, and earlier as you go South, this shrub is bursting with bright buds, as vivid as a gay geranium. Crowded along every branch, they mingle with the graceful, glossy, olive-green and red-tinged leaves. Within a fortnight or so, the delicate apple-blossom-like flowers are open. Still earlier, for those who do not mind judicious cutting of their plants, blossom sprays taken indoors even before the buds show color will open and provide a delightful preview of spring; at any time they combine well with their own leaves or with other spring flowers in arrangements or corsages.

But in addition to being one of the earliest-and therefore one of the most welcome-examples of spring blossom beauty, the Japanesequince is, later on, generous in another way. As summer passes, hard, greenish yellow, highly fragrant fruits succeed the flowers. They can be left until all the other preserving is done and then made into a clear amber jelly that is deliciously tart to go with cold meat. Or they can be stuck full of cloves and made into oldfashioned pomanders to give perfumed pleasure throughout the year. And often they are merely placed in bureau drawers and closets to scent handkerchiefs, linen, and bedding as they gradually dry and shrivel.

The plants are perfectly hardy, and almost any kind of soil and situation, sunny or partially shady, suits them. In a rich, well-drained soil, they attain 5 to 6 feet or more, but are easily controlled by pruning, to be done after the flowers fall. Most nurseries carry them and some offer several varieties, ranging from white through blush and pink to crimson and salmon. They can be planted in either early spring or late fall. All are good-natured and effective, but none is more spectacular than the long-popular "burning bush."

their culture in northern gardens.

My husband and I pay particular attention to (1) preparation of tubers for planting; (2) preparation of the soil in both pots and outdoor bed; (3) staking, and (4) watering. Our method involves three steps, but we find it simple, not time-consuming, and definitely interesting. In early April we spread the tubers with the hollow side up (that is, where the previous year's stem broke off) on trays covered with a thin layer of peat moss or vermiculite; place them in any convenient room in a light situation (not in direct sunlight), and sprinkle them daily.

Step two (taken when the tubers sprout) consists of moving them to 4-in. pots (or milk cartons cut down to 4 in. high) that have been filled with a mixture of half good loam and half leaf mold or peat moss. We set them 1/2 in. below the surface. We first used the cartons when we ran short of pots; now we prefer them because, set edge to edge on a tray, they take less room, are as easy to handle as flats, and involve no danger of disturbing the tubers when transplanting them to the outdoors. At that time, we merely tear away the cardboard box and set the tuber with its now well-developed roots in a hole prepared for it. Meanwhile, we keep the pots or cartons in an east or west window, the soil moist, though never to the point of sogginess. (To start with, we had punched a small hole in the bottom of each carton and covered it with pieces of broken pot or gravel for drainage.)

When the plants are 3 to 4 in. high (about eight weeks after placing the tubers on the tray), and when danger of a killing frost is past, we take step three and set the plants out, where the bed has been well prepared. It must be well drained. Having a sandy subsoil, we have to prepare the soil only 6 or 8 in. deep. As begonias like a loose woodland type of soil that provides a cool, moist root run, we prepare ours by mixing 1/3 leaf mold or peat moss with 3/3 sandy loam, adding a tablespoonful of bone meal per plant. If rotted cow manure can be had, we use 1/3 of that and of each of the other two materials.

After setting the plants 2 in. deep and about 12 in. apart (being careful to have the leaves pointing toward us so the flowers, when they appear, will not be hidden), we sprinkle a peat moss mulch around them. As the stems are brittle, staking is very important. When the plants are about 10 in. tall, we give each one a bamboo stake, tving raffia first around it and then around the plant. We spray leaves and flowers gently once a day (or oftener on typical Midwest or Eastern seaboard "scorchers"), but are careful never to flood the bed.

As to location, although we are definitely amateurs, our experience leads us to believe that too much emphasis has been put on shade as a necessary factor. Our finest plants have had several hours of sun-sometimes until 11:30 A.M. and as early as 3:30 P.M. However, we recommend the north side of a house or hedge where there is only early morning and late afternoon sun. We consider sky light important, for plants grown where trees block it out have not done well. Nor is planting among evergreens satisfactory. A spot with some protection from wind is desirable, but begonias without the free circulation of air they need often develop stem rot. As we eat on the north side of our screened-in porch, we enjoy the magnificent flower display at every meal as well as when relaxing on the porch. And magnificent it is, for plants bear from six to a dozen or more blooms at a time, some of them up to 6 in. across. Last year, an 8-in.-deep window box on the north side of our white garage containing begonias set 9 or 10 in. apart was highly effective. The plants, although staked, tended to develop a graceful, trailing habit.

Formerly, bone meal and rotted cow manure (when we had it) were the only fertilizers we used. Last year we applied a cow manure solution about the color of weak tea every ten days or so just before the daily spraying, but we do not know whether that or the cool summer was the reason for our extra-fine specimens. Moreover, we have obtained beautiful flowers without such applications.

If you are a procrastinator, or find it more convenient, you can omit the first step, or the first and second steps, of our method. If you plant the tubers directly outdoors, the plants, when they flower, will be just as lovely, but the blooming season will start later and be shorter. If the plants develop so the leaves grow in the wrong direction, they can be lifted (carefully so as not to disturb the soil around the roots) and turned around; do this on a cloudy day to lessen the shock of the operation.

And finally, about storing the tubers. In the fall, before the first killing frost occurs, dig the plants, bring them indoors, and shake off the loose soil. Leave them in the basement, but not too close to the heating equipment, until the stems have dried and fallen off. Then put the tubers away for the winter in a cool but frost-free place, covering them with peat moss or vermiculite, just as you would handle dahlia tubers.

You see, there isn't anything especially difficult about it. And I am sure that if you try these adaptable, truly eye-catching flowers this year. you will share our enthusiasm.

	Raspberry	Red ones hardy as apple, less happy south; black peach belt. Luscious summer-to-frost crop
	Strawberry	Possible anywhere; prefers cool season, moist soil. Needs little space, yields generously erhaps there's no need to urge you to include fruit in you gardening. A recent AMERICAN HOME Consumer Panel Survey shows that of the homeowners queried who had bought nurs ery stock last year, more than half had bought trees; and o them, 61 per cent had bought fruit trees! But if you haven't, w don't want you to overlook an opportunity. Besides, 'way bac in 1941, the National Nutrition Conference urged Americans t eat more fruit because "the consumption of home-grown kind plus the purchase of those that cannot be grown successfully means improved diet and general health." Also, as shown farthe on, by growing fruit you gain not only at the kitchen end and i your budget, but also in all-season landscape effects.

Right now is the time to make plans. That means, first, selec

"I say this because you'll get more for your money in a Pennsylvania-the finest grass cutting machine on the market and the one that's easiest to take care of. On top of these two big advantages, you'll get the power mower that's built to last for many years."

PENNSYLVANIAS have many important points of superiority including (1) easy Push-Pull finger-tip control of throttle and clutch, (2) full-tempered, double ground hi-carbon blades, (3) designed for ease of maintenance,

(4) easy adjustment for height of cut, (5) Briggs & Stratton motors, and of course (6) Triple-A ball bearings. All this value costs you no more.

In hand mowers, too, Pennsylvanias are made intentionally better. In fact, they've been the choice of professional gardeners since 1877.

Fruit Testing Cooperative Association (Geneva, N. Y., $1.00 a year). Then, before long-as soon as your ground can be dug-you can start setting up trellises, posts, and other supports for the bush and vine fruits, and digging holes in readiness for the stock that will be sent at the proper time for planting in your locality. Or, if you want to lay an extra-firm foundation for success, you can take all next summer for developing your plans and improving your soil, and have the plants delivered for fall planting.

If you could follow an apple, pear, or other tree on its nursery course from seed to grafted seedling, to transplanted 2- or 3-year-old specimen, you would have a new appreciation of the thought, effort, and care that go into the production of good plants; and why it pays to buy only that kind, whether you order by mail or from a traveling agent, or buy from a nursery that will deliver (and even plant if you wish) or from a local cash-and-carry source. This whole story is admirably told in Circular 188 of the State Agricultural Experiment Station at Geneva, N. Y., entitled, "Selection, Care and Planting of Nursery-grown Fruit Trees."

It stresses, for instance, the wisdo of avoiding "so-called 'bargain' sto -trees which, discarded by relial concerns because of injury, imm turity or poor growth, are picked by fly-by-night operators and offer and sold at reduced prices."

The climate of your locality the location, soil, exposure, and pography of your property are v factors in your choice of fruits varieties. So are the tastes, pref ences, and capacities of your family the space available in your gard the time and labor that can be voted to the plants; and the extenwhich any surplus fresh fruit can canned or frozen so as to avoid wa Remember that, although fruit pla are no harder to grow than many namentals, you are asking more them than just attractive form, age, and flowers. The production crop of clean, perfect fruit is an vanced phase of gardening and o for more than average sunlight, quality, and protection against pe diseases, and other hazards.

told by Mrs. May F. McElravy: When we built our present house is says] our children were in college I soon to have houses of their own, we carried out ideas that come with turity. We knew we must gear both ise and garden to the tempo of our rs. Our site was a 75 by 150 ft. her commanding an uninterrupted w of the Rockies.

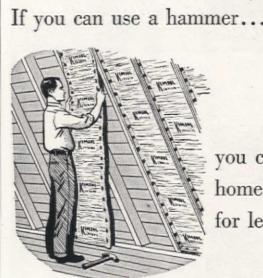

Vhile I concentrated on the inrs. Henry took over the yard. Bese he likes to watch fruit grow, he ded to landscape with fruit trees. studied his project as he would a -time investment. The beauty h would develop over the years pay dividends, give shade, be to maintain; in time it must afprivacy for our outdoor living . Not only did he get advice our County Extension Agent the N. Y. Fruit Testing Associabut, concluding that, as we had prints for the house, so he would them for the landscaping, he the horticulturist at the State ge to recommend someone who make them and supervise the tion and planting of the trees. years have proved the wisdom at decision. We have effective ings, privacy, shade, ever-changeauty and abundant harvests. In ront, or public, area, are red and Delicious apples, an early a red plum, and an Italian plum. But our prize orchard is rear where we have two Elberta peaches, two Polly peaches, an apricot, and a most satisfactory nectarine. And this is mile-high Denver!

In addition, we have three kinds of grapes on our side picket fence, everbearing red raspberries that hide the wire fence that separates drive from rear garden, and boysenberries in a corner of the vegetable patch.

No greater joy does Henry know than picking tree-ripened fruit in the morning coolness. The trees take some care, of course: regular spraying; cultivation when the soil crusts over; methodical pruning and treatment of any wounds that occur; and feeding with compost and plant food put into holes punched 18 to 24 in. deep in concentric circles around each tree out to the edge of the branch spread, then soaked with water.

Our fruit garden is a profitable investment aesthetically as well as economically. Instead of doilies, I use grape leaves under dessert plates or glasses. And my fruit plate wins general acclaim from guests. Listen: On a chilled green glass plate I put a large grape leaf and on it half a large peach, cavity up. At one side go several small watermelon balls; on the other side, some larger cantaloupe balls. Then half a nectarine, here and there wedges of blue or red plum, and over all a sprinkling of raspberries and boysenberries, the whole topped with lime ice. When all have been served, I pour sauterne over the concoction. Will you have some?

enturies ago, Greek artists, seeking motifs for their creative sk seized upon the big, deeply cut, graceful leaf of their native Ac thus and adapted it, but slightly stylized, in designing the C inthian column. It also forms part of more modern friezes and a permanent place in architectural tradition. But why isn't it fou more often in gardens? Though known in England before 1600, i hardly common there, and in this country, outside of California, i rarely seen. Yet it is easy to grow and, according to one source, stand a 20-degree temperature. It needs, says Bailey, a "rich, lig well-drained soil and much sunshine"; also "it must be deeply mulc north in winter," with long litter and evergreen boughs. But that little enough to pay for the big clumps of rich, bronzy green foli topped by strong spikes of white-to-reddish flowers somewhat turtle-heads (Chelone). The common name, bear's-breech, refers, sumably, to the rough, hairy nature of the leaves; names of the spe are also descriptive-A. mollis ("soft") for the best known, wa leaved kind; A. spinosus for the sharply spiny leaved type; A. s osissimus, for a much-cut, exceptionally prickly form. Wooden yardstic makes a good gu for cutting glass. Wipe one side o yardstick with w cloth-the damp wood surface stito the glass

How to Cut Glass

ROBERT M.

Put your yardstick, wet side down, on the glass. Using one edge yardstick as cutting guide, run glass cutter close along that edge This will make a cutting line, but will not cut through glass

To finish cutting operation, put glass cutter under the glass, directly beneath the cutting line. Using both hands, apply slight pressure to top of glass, on cutting line and on either side. Glass will break sharply along line

After cutting, smooth off sharp edges of the glass. For this purpose, use emery cloth or a piece of "wet and dry" sandpaper. Wrap the cloth or paper around a block of wood, and use it as shown here you hoped for: if an old chair looks as if it can give you $15 worth of service, pay $15 for it-you'll be in luck if it just happens to be worth $150, but you won't be in a jam if it doesn't.

Milton MacWhinnie joins in the treasure hunting these days, and even comes home with contributions of his own. But he didn't always approve. When that Welsh dresser, dreary and peeling, appeared on their front lawn one fine morning, he thought Inez was plain crazy. Then his boss came avisiting. Mrs. Boss must have trained him well, for he immediately saw the merits of that Pennsylvania dough box (it does have an unusually handsome apron) and said so. The beaming Mr. MacW. promptly recited its history and pointed to the accomplishments of some of his other possessions (Inez had thought he wasn't listening when she first listed them to him). From that day on, antiques were "in."

But for Inez, a delight in the old is nothing new. It dates back to her childhood in Maine where she fell in love with her grandmother's spinning wheel-it now stands in her own bedroom. Her mother's cradle (handmade by Grandpa) is a fabulous magazine rack nowadays, proudly nestled by the big chair in the living room. And her mother's hooked and braided rugs are the good foundations of the color schemes in the house.

But this collection didn't begin with family pieces and go on smoothly from there. There were several starts in other directions. Victorian came first, then reproductions of Early American antiques, before Inez realized that with time, a sharp eye, and a sixth sense at smelling out "finds," she could have the real thing.

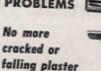

She has great faith in her hunches, and not without justification. There was the time that she picked up a blue plate at a family auction just because she liked its design and the color of its glaze-later she discovered that it is a rare example of early 19th-century Staffordshire, a museum piece worth a small mint.

Then there was that impulsive stop last summer at a barren-looking junk yard. Nothing there. But as they were about to leave, the junk man casually mentioned some old chests which had just arrived. One of them, solid cherry and in almost perfect condition despite its advanced age, now stands in the MacWhinnie's bedroom. But it may not stay there. Inez thinks its manners too citified for her other things and, since a high value | NAME has been placed upon it, she may sell it-and invest the profits, of course, in a new something old for CITY AND ZONE. the house.

Newspaper Valet

Easy to make with only a few tools, this handy chairside rack takes up practically no space, keeps your newspaper neatly folded within arm's reach. Why not make one of these useful little stands and end that habit of tossing newspapers carelessly on the floor?

It's simple to make a rack just like this one. You can have pedestal, crossbar, and legs turned at a mill and assemble them at home if you haven't the proper tools to make them yourself. Assemble by attaching the four legs to the narrow pedestal with screws, then glue the pedestal into a center hole cut in the underside of the crossbar. The turning on the pedestal adds extra maneuverability, but may be omitted

A boy is known by the room he keeps

FREDERICA THIGPEN

You open the door of your teen-age son's room and shudder. You stand in the middle of that strange conglomeration of oddities and equipment dear to the heart of a boy, and tear your hair. Or, as I have lately discovered, you roll with the punch and enjoy this room as an expression of his inner self and his growth toward maturity.

Does that sound impossible? Take a grip on yourself if you are the one who tries to bring order out of chaos in the welter of his possessions. With a more objective slant, you can find this task informative and entertaining. For here even a stranger can see reflected the personality, interests, and tastes of a growing man-to-be.

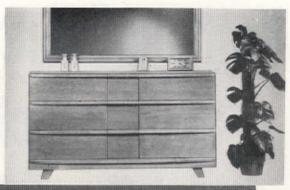

I took a mental inventory recently to break the monotony of the weekly bout with my 15-year-old son Jerry's room, and thereby gained a new awareness of him as an individual.

Skis and poles, golf clubs and balls, fishing net and rods, baseball mitt and bat, football helmet and shoulder pads, tennis shoes and racket filled most of a huge closet. This is a normal assortment for a boy of his age, though it might sound incredible to the mothers of daughters. It clearly indicates a love of sports and outdoor exercise that is evidence of healthy physical growth.

Old work clothes and boots, receipt books, route books, and rubber bands everywhere point to a paper route. This means to me a capacity for hard work if the reward justifies it.

Scattered throughout the room are record player and records, ukulele, trumpet, and radio. This points up his interest in music, both his own and that of others. His books and magazines tell a story in themselves. There are the adventure stories, there are the westerns, mysteries, and the one under the mattress with cover more lurid than story. (He should know by now I turn the mattress every week!) And then there are manuals on how to build a boat, how to repair a car, and other mechanical subjects. This may even forecast his vocation, for he is a boy interested in things mechanical.

It's his room, and he loves it the way it is. I no longer try to put his things out of sight. Instead I pick up, carefully dust, and replace the treasured article. And I walk away from a clean, if not orderly, room with a better understanding of this boy.

This Tree—Wasn't Moved

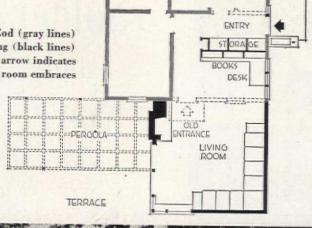

Data from Ethel McCall Head

Sometimes it takes real talent and training to find the straight line which is the shortest distance between two points. Given the problem of turning the prim Cape-Cod above into the lesurely modern home at your right, few people would have thought of the simple solution of adding a new modern living room right smack onto the front of the house—that just isn't where wings usually grow! In this case, however, the owner happened to be a Hollywood art director, Walter Holscher, whose experience had taught him that the conventional solution isn't always the best one. Here, the unusual, but logical, approach resulted in a house which not only performs as the owners want it to perform, but looks as if it had been planned that way from the start. Unlike most modern wings added to traditional houses, this one doesn't look like an afterthought.

Here's the story: During the housing shortage, the modernminded Holschers bought their house and planned its future. Its living room was too small and its provisions for outdoor living were nil, but it was well built, it nested on a fine corner lot among beautiful old shade trees, and designer Holscher could see its possibilities for expansion. Three steps did it. First, the new living room, designed to embrace part of the old one, was added to the front, which faced south. It has modern windows, but for the sake of harmony with the rest of the house, it was sided with clapboard. Second, the main entry was shifted from the south to the east, and an entry hall, divided from the living room by a splendid storage wall, was created at one end of the old living room. The doorway is modern, and a modern overhang shelters it, but it's all simple enough to be in keeping with the original architecture. Finally, a terrace and a trell's, built to the west and opening from the new living room, provides a wealth of private, secluded, outdoor living and dining space.

Plan shows how to turn a small Cape-Cod (gray lines) into a big modern house by adding a wing (black lines) to the front which faced south. Gray arrow indicates old front door. Enormous new living room embraces most of the old one as well. Entry was switched to the east. On the west side, pergola provides a sheltered outdoor living room where wasted lawn used to be

A corner of old living room became an entry graced by efficient, handsome storage wall. Closets are on hall side; bookcases and cabinets on living-room side; drawers at end. Note how well a modern front door can be made to fit a traditional exterior

"Modernfold" doors by New Castle Products. Furnishings—L. S. Ayres and Company, Indianapolis, Indiana

Modernfold door

See how simple it is to make your dining room double as a den . . . TV room . . . or study? You just close the "Modernfold" door—and get complete privacy without inconveniencing the rest of the family.

And when you want more room in every room —use small "Modernfold" doors instead of swinging doors. That way you get more room to place furniture where you want it... because a "Modernfold" door saves 8 square feet of space
a swinging door wastes.

Can I afford them? Judge for yourself. Large "Modernfold" doors cost no more than permanent partitions. And small "Modernfold" doors cost no more than conventional doors. That's because these folding doors come complete—ready to install—no need to pay for trimming, fitting, painting or hardware.

ave you, like most people, a collection of unrepaired electric wires, handleless pots, and broken costume jewelry sitting around, useless? With a soldering iron and a few inexpensive materials you can repair such broken metal articles yourself. It's as easy as spreading butter with a knife, and it isn't only a man's job.

Equip yourself with an 80-100 watt soldering iron (about $2), some acid-core and rosin-core solder (10¢ each), and either steel wool, sandpaper, or a wire brush. A pair of tin snips and a roll of friction tape are optional.

Before you can use the iron, the copper tip must be "tinned." Plug in the iron, and while it warms up, clean the flat sides of the tip with steel wool until they shine. Then touch the tip to a piece of rosin-core solder, and if the iron is hot enough, the solder will melt and cover one side of the tip. When all four sides are completely covered with a dull, silvery sheen, wipe off any excess solder.

The two kinds of solder suggested in the list of materials above look exactly alike; the difference lies in their cores. Acid-core solder is corrosive but easier to handle than rosin-core solder, which is non-corrosive. All jewelry work and all actual electric-wire soldering should be done with rosin-core solder since the small trace of acid left by acid-core solder may corrode wiring to the danger point. Any article soldered with acid-core solder should always be washed afterward.

In preparing any metal for soldering, the thin oxide layer which covers all metal must first be removed with sandpaper or steel wool. The acid and rosin in the two kinds of solder are what prevent this coating from reforming when the metal is heated; otherwise the solder would not adhere.

Any soldering job must be prefaced by the same preparations. The parts to be soldered must be cleaned to remove the oxide coating. The iron must be well tinned. Solder will not flow unless the sections to be joined are hot enough; this is done by holding the face of the iron against the work a minute or two before you begin to solder (Fig. 1). Never move the soldered article until the solder has set, usually a matter of one or two minutes.

Now let's take that dustpan with the broken handle which has been cluttering up the broom closet. Clean the adjoining metal parts, and remove the paint with sandpaper. The best way to solder two parts together is to tin them first (use acid-core solder here) exactly as you tinned your iron tip when you first bought it. Fit the two parts together and brace them, then bend a piece of solder around the seam and apply the iron (Fig. 2). Be sure to let the joint set, and remember before you repaint to wash off any excess.

the joining of electric wires-in splicing, connecting doorbells, radio aerials, and ground wires. To join two electric cords, carefully cut away 1/2 in. of the covering on each. Join the exposed wires by twisting them together, one from each cord at a time. (Fig. 3, circle inset.) Use rosincore solder, and make sure the solder penetrates all spaces between the wires. Keep the iron in place for a 1/2 minute or so after the solder has flowed in so that the remaining rosin will vaporize and not block the current. When cool, tape the joint with electrician's tape.

You probably have a broken umbrella in a corner of the hall closet, and you can use your soldering iron to repair it, too. For a broken or weakened rib, you'll need a reinforcement, and an extra-heavy darning needle is just the thing (Fig. 4). Bind the needle in place with clean copper wire and apply the iron and acid-core solder until the needle is completely covered. Test the joint for strength after it has cooled.

If your favorite piece of costume jewelry is missing its pin, you can make it wearable once more with your soldering iron. Examine it to see whether it is made of solid metal or whether its parts have been soldered together. If so, you must be careful when you solder so the pieces will not come apart. Lay the jewelry on a wad of wet cotton. If the pin itself is undamaged and has merely come off, you can solder it in place. Or, replace the old pin with a new one from an art-craft shop. Tin the back of the jewelry and the pin and solder them together. Rosin-core solder is best for this job.

When patching holes, remember to patch with a piece of tin, since solder alone is not strong enough. It's easy to solder the steel, iron, copper, brass, zinc, silver, tin, and pewter, of countless household articles. Leaky watering cans, damaged pails, and lampshade frames can all be restored with a little time and solder. It's not only money-saving, but it's fun to be your own repairman, too!

Read how the Lowell Johnsons, after suffering a severe fire loss, decided that...

FIRESAFETY IN THE HOME BEGINS WITH

Concrete - IT CAN'T BURN!

During a 6-month period in 1947, several houses near Knoxville, Iowa, went up in flames. One of the houses that burned was the 7-room home of Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Johnson. Sorrowed by their loss of costly property and treasured possessions—and the losses of other families in the community—the Johnsons decided to rebuild and to make their new house as firesafe as possible.

They built the attractive and comfortable house shown in the views above. It features firesafe concrete construction—a concrete foundation with concrete footings, concrete masonry walls, concrete subfloors on precast concrete joists and an asbestos cement shingle roof. A basement provides space for a recreation room for the children as well as a work room, sewing room and storage room. The Johnsons not only have stopped worrying about fires—they find that they live better the year around in a concrete house.

Firesafety is only one reason why concrete is today's best construction value for homes of any style, size or floor plan. Concrete also offers maximum protection against storms, decay, termites and vermin. It is moderate in first cost, requires much less repair and maintenance and serves for a lifetime. The net result is true low-annual-cost shelter.

HOW TO GET A FIRESAFE CONCRETE HOUSE ... and what will it cost?

Phone a local concrete masonry manufacturer for names of architects and builders experienced in concrete house design and construction. Have the architect of your choice show you how any style or size house can be built economically with concrete walls, concrete subfloors and a firesafe roof.

Heating of course, with modern baseboard panels

Naturally, you're planning a beautiful home . . . but plan, too, for comfort!

Remember that the areas ground large lower large.

Remember that the areas around large low windows must be adequately heated—and that a B & G Hydro-Flo Forced Hot Water System with baseboard heating panels is the ideal way to do it.

Baseboard panels replace the usual wooden baseboards and are just as inconspicuous. They fit neatly under low windows . . . raise a blanket of warmth against incoming cold.

Heated water is circulated through the baseboards by a B & G Hydro-Flo Booster Pump—automatically controlled so that the heat supply is always matched to the weather! No wasteful overheating—even in spring and fall, when only a little heat is peeded.

Plenty of hot water, too, for washers, baths and showers. The Water Heater of a B & G Hydro-Flo System provides all you can use—winter and summer. And not least, you'll be amazed at how little it costs for both heat and had water!

Ask your architect or heating contractor about B & G $Hyd\tau o ext{-}Flo$ Heating.

Gown by Kiviette

Before entering marriage, every young woman should be fully instructed on the practice of internal feminine cleanliness. And it's of vital importance that her information should be based on modern scientific knowledgenot outdated, handed-down advice. Thanks to the great ZONITE principle-developed by a worldfamous surgeon and scientistyou can now instruct your daughter with assurance.

First, you'll impress on her how important frequent douching is for her health, married happiness, after her periods and especially as a precaution against offensive odor. Then assure her that no other type liquid antisepticgermicide of all those tested for the douche is so powerful yet safe to tissues as ZONITE. It's positively non-poisonous, non-irritating!

One of the Greatest Advancements in Hygiene

For years many women were forced to rely on harmful poisons. Then many foolishly went to the other extreme and used weak, ineffective homemade solutions -which couldn't possibly offer them the powerful germicidal and deodorizing properties of ZONITE. The advent of ZONITE put an end to all this confusion and has furnished women a dainty yet powerfully effective and safe-touse antiseptic-germicide for important intimate feminine cleanliness.

What ZONITE does...

ZONITE removes odor-causing waste substances. It helps guard against infection and kills every germ it touches. As you know, it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract, but ZONITE does kill every reachable germ and leaves one with such a refreshed dainty feeling.

WHY NOT

SWITCH

TO TAMPAX

Tampax and make up her own mind about this modern internal form of monthly protection. Investigate it right away! Tampax is important for you. Here are the reasons-

Decause this Tampax is dainty, hygienic, comfortable. Invented by a physician, it requires no belts, pins or external pads. Worn internally, it causes no odor or chafing. Wearer cannot feel its presence!

Decause you can be socially at ease with Tampax. No bulge or ridge-line can betray you, even in close-fitting formals or a "brief" swim suit. And no embarrassing disposal problems. (It's really small!)

Decause Tampax is made of pure surgical cotton contained in slender white disposable applicators. It's easy to insert, quick to change. Your hands needn't touch the Tampax. Average month's supply goes into purse. Buy Tampax at drug or notion counters. Choice of 3 absorbency-sizes: Regular, Super, Junior. . . . Tampax Incorporated,

Too Bad Dad-

Mother is right again and here goes your last excuse for not planning a Formica Vanitory* (combination vanity-lavatory) for the bathroom.

YOU DON'T NEED A BIG BATHROOM . . . Yes, even the smallest bathroom can have the beauty, color, long life of Formica and the convenience and utility of counter space around the wash bowl. Such built-in features as towel storage, medicine chests, and laundry hampers are practical and often utilize wasted space. So don't die hard, Dad. The very first time you experience the luxury of a shave in front of your new Vanitory you'll be happy about the whole thing.

Look in your classified 'phone directory under "Plastics" for the name of a local Formica fabricator who can make a Vanitory just for your bathroom.
