

This room grows up with your boys

Small children are fascinated by a room that's decorated with a theme that reflects their own interests, but too often parents forget how quickly youngsters grow up. Before you know it, you're faced with doing the room over again to keep up with their changing tastes.

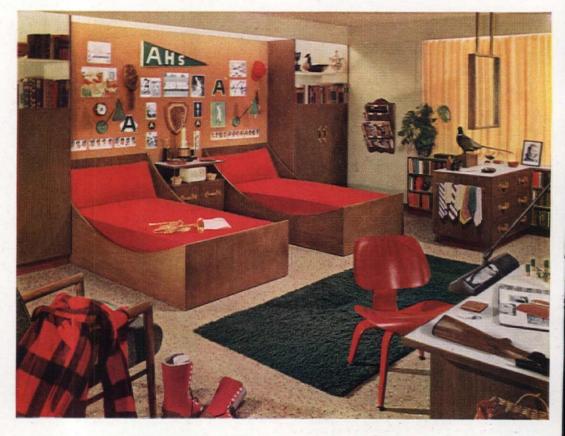

A happy solution is a room like this one that actually grows up with your children. Small fry are intrigued with the big-top atmosphere of the striped, tent-like ceiling, the clown beds, and the three-ring design in the floor of Armstrong's Linoleum. When the boys start reading adventure stories and collecting high-school pennants, it takes only a few minor alterations to adapt the room to your children's new interests. And the floor of Armstrong's Spatter Linoleum is just as perfect for teen-age surroundings as it was for the circus atmosphere.

Since growing boys are pretty rough-and-tumble tenants, it makes good sense to use a floor of Armstrong's Linoleum. Despite shoe scuffing, dirt tracking, and everyday horseplay, its smooth, shining surface will keep its good looks with the simplest of care. And if, after your boys are grown up and gone, you want to change the room to still another use, the spatter design of Armstrong's Linoleum will blend beautifully with any decorative scheme you choose.

Send for new book—"It's Easy to Decorate." This 32-page guide, illustrated in full color, is packed with decorating ideas for every room in your house. Send 10¢ (40¢ outside U.S.A.) to Armstrong Cork Company, 5401 Pine St., Lancaster, Pennsylvania

When they're little, youngsters love to sleep under the "big top." Striped tent effect is achieved with plywood valances, which are easy to remove later. Clown feet on the beds are also cut out of plywood; can be taken off when beds are refinished for older boys. The floor is Armstrong's Spatter Linoleum, Toledo Taupe, No. 5014, with ring inset of Plain Chocolate. Armstrong's Top-Set Asphalt Cove Base rounds off dirt-catching corners, makes the floor easier to clean.

When they're grown, your teen-agers still use the same furnishings, refinished as you see them below. Toy cabinets become bookcases and storage space. Beds, cabinets, and chest are refinished in natural wood tones, and the canvas-top toy table is replaced by a grown-up desk and chair. The walls and ceiling, now minus circus valance, are painted to harmonize with the Armstrong's Linoleum Floor—which is still practical and good for many more years of beauty and service.

THIS DREAM HOUSE GAVE A NEW LEASE ON LIFE

MILDRED McCLELLAN MELVILLE

In September 1951, nineteen-year-old May Hoover of Westminster, Colorado, wrote a theme as a routine assignment for a Colorado University English course. She entitled it "Dream House." But May's theme writing differed from that of other University freshmen because she wrote her assignment in Ward K—Colorado University's polio ward in Denver—and she was breathing with the aid of a portable respirator. She wrote of a dream house that became a real house, the only one of its kind in the United States, according to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Inc. This is, in part, what May wrote:

"About two months ago, the people of my home town became interested in building me a home. I had been told I could leave the hospital, where I have lived for two years, but there was the problem of finding a place to live, until my friends and neighbors secured land. Offers to build me a home came pouring in. Bricklayers, carpenters, plumbers, and others were eager to get started. Furniture stores began donating furniture to fill the house. The children of Westminster wanted to help, too. Their Riding Club staged a rodeo and raised money for the house. A colt was auctioned off to raise funds. Other benefits were planned. . . . To me, the walls, roof, floors, and furniture represent the good will and generosity of my friends and neighbors. Words cannot express the gratitude and appreciation I have for the people who are making me the happiest girl alive."

The Town Board assumed custodianship of the site Mr. Drumwright donated, and dedicated the May Hoover home to the use of any resident needing it—when May no longer requires it, there will be another occupant. Blueprints of the five-room house were drawn and volunteer workers built a $12,000 house in three and a half months

This Dream House

In 1949 May Hoover was a Junior in Westminster High School, a vital part of the incorporated town of 2,200. During her summer vacation, she was suddenly stricken with polio and completely paralyzed. As she lived on in an iron lung, her family was told she would never again move her hands or feet, and that she would never speak. But in six weeks, May resumed talking, and could move her left foot. At this time she expressed two desires: to graduate from high school and to return to her home town to live, although her family had by this time moved away.

May accomplished her first objective with the aid of tutors paid for by the Colorado State Board of Education. She used the iron lung as her upside-down study table, reading her assignments with a reflecting mirror, and by May 24, 1951, she had earned her diploma. The day before graduation exercises were to take place, Denver's Knights of Columbus sent to May, a Protestant, a portable respirator, so that, with the help of her nurse, Anne Moring, May left the iron lung to sit on the high school's auditorium platform and receive her diploma with her classmates. Aided by the respirator, which was to be hers for as long as she needed it. she regained enough use of her hands to join the hospital's ceramics class. Soon the doctors told her that she would be able to return to her home by Christmastime.

But home must be a place large enough for herself, her nurse, and her respirator (with batteries requiring from 8 to 24 hours recharging for service from three to four hours). Because her mother's living space did not permit this extra influx, the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis agreed to place the girl and her nurse in a rented house. It had invested $15,345 in May's hospitalization, and it wanted its investment dividend to be her rehabilitation into an independent citizen.

Rented houses were hard to come by, but Evert Drumright, a homeowner whose children had been May's classmates, conceived the idea that the community would build a home for May. He donated the site, and took his idea to Mayor Francis M. Day.

The site, at 7760 North Lowell Boulevard, was deeded to the town, and the Town Board assumed the custodianship. With their co-operation, building May's house did become a Westminster community project—a very worthwhile one. From the Saturday a local dozer service made the excavation, the house took shape rapidly. Plumbers, electricians, cabinet makers, linoleum layers, fireplace builders, carpenters, painters, all the workmen necessary to the construction of a home, worked weekends and nights. There is no church, civic, school, youth, or community service group in Westminster that did not make a substantial contribution to the building of May's house.

Actual building started in September, 1951. The local newspaper, the Westminster Journal, wrote the story of the project, and Denver papers also publicized the plan. Mayor Day and Mr. Drumright visited May in Ward K and received her enthusiastic approval of the blueprints of the five-room house with bath and

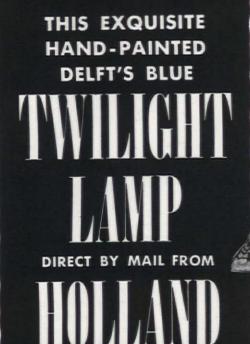

On Christmas Eve, May left the hospital and was carried over the threshold of her new home. There was even a lighted Christmas tree trimmed by Westminster's Brownies. Only six weeks later, May's physical improvement increased to the point where she was able to leave her respirator for eight and nine hours a day. By midsummer, for twelve hours.

And May's deep blue eyes shine when she takes inventory now of her life. She says, "When I was stricken, I thought it was the end of everything for me. Instead, it seems to be only the beginning. High school graduation . . . this home . . . my enrollment in Colorado University Extension . . . I want to be a journalist some day . . . But I would't have any of these things if it weren't for people and that something people have within them . . . Well, the inscription on my respirator tells it perfectly."

Engraved on the respirator, soon to be passed on to another sufferer, are the words: "For all humanity, regardless of race or creed-presented by the Knights of Columbus."

Dear Editor:

With a grin, I read the article "The Unexpected Guest." I took a quick survey of the living room, and my first thought was: "Heaven help Charlie if he brings in any unannounced friends!"

Unlike many other women who doubtlessly read the same article, I did not jump to my feet and start rearranging the toys on the floor, as this was the first chance I had had to sit down for five minutes. . . .

Not only four children keep me on the run, but my finger is in many pies. I teach ballet to 53 children. My basement is my studio. . . . I am also church organist and director of two choirs. . .

Take today for instance, an average day for me, really: A thorough house cleaning was on the agenda, and as I was arming myself with the weapons against a losing battle, Mrs. T. called to offer three dozen ears of corn. I'm not one to turn down such an offer for the sake of sanitation under the chairs. Four children were hustled into the car, a quick visit to the store for some aluminum foil, the next stop the cornfield. Home again, with a dash-get the freezing things ready, for this morning I don't clean, apparently, I freeze! This job is finished by naptime, so while the children rest, I do have a little while to do a quick clean-up job, even scrub up the bathroom and kitchen floors. Time out to dash downstairs and change loads in the washer-oh yes, today (and every day) is washday. Kids up from naps . . . start a stew simmering for supper . whoops! a call from the two oldest boys to come out into the woods and help with the house they are building. It has just fallen apart. Mamma shinnies up tree, ties guide rope to proper bough, and clips back into house to find the next to youngest at her favorite pastime, pers, haul out record player—time to practice while I peel potatoes. After supper, hurry through dishes in order to get to church in time to accompany a wedding rehearsal. Get back home around nine, descend to studio for more practicing. Take another hour to spend with Charlie so we can discuss the day's events and just enjoy being together with the children in bed; then drop into bed —Unexpected guest, stay away from

NO HELP, THANKS

Dear Editor:

I enjoyed your article, "A Kitchen Dates You," immensely and agree wholeheartedly! Who wants to relax in the kitchen when there's a living room, den, or the beautiful outdoors? And as far as people helping in the kitchen—I say, "No, thanks!!"

TIN MAN

Dear Editor:

Every Hallowe'en, the Rotary Club in Waterbury, Vermont, fills us up and wears us out, too. My mother showed me the picture of the grand-prize winner in The American Home for October 1952, and read me the article by Barbara Ollis. I decided to . . . make a Tin Man costume. I won second prize . . . three silver dollars.—John Backels (age 9)

I have a good proposition for men or women who would like to make an extra $12500 a month for spare

These 15 Utensils are all interchangeable. They fit into each other so as to make up to 23 different cooking combinations for "Waterless Cooking." They cover 99% of all cooking needs.

I won't make any fancy promises of $50.00 a day. And I'm not after any of your money. What I can do is show you a simple plan by which you can pick up enough extra money every week to help make up for the money you're losing in higher taxes and higher costs of living. I supply your working outfit free—no charge. Just your name is all I need. Read my proposition. It is honest and down to earth. And it won't cost you anything to try it.

By Frank W. Strong

Today, almost everyone needs extra money. With higher taxes and increased living costs you have to have more and more dollars—just to keep even. There are lots of ways to make extra money—lots of good ones. I don't say my way is the best. But I do say it's one of the easiest and most pleasant. In fact, it even leads to making new friends. And it doesn't call for any house-to-house canvassing, either. Let me explain:

I am the sales manager for a very big company. We make Stainless Steel Cooking Utensils, like those shown in the picture. We do an enormous business with hotels, restaurants, hospitals, and institutions. We also manufacture for the U.S. Army and Navy.

As a result of this enormous production we have very low manufacturing costs. We can sell a set of Stainless Steel Cooking Ware for home use for just about what it costs some companies to buy it! In fact, for many years, we did sell a set of home utensils to one Sales Organization who resold our cookware house-to-house under their own name. They got $120.00 for the same set that our people sell for just about half of that.

Well, one day I got to figuring. There are five good reasons why Stainless Steel is the kind of cookware that should be in every home. 1. It washes as easy as a drinking glass. No scouring, scraping or scrubbing. 2. It doesn't rust or corrode—and it doesn't stain from vegetables, meat or fruit acids. 3. It doesn't affect the taste of food. 4. The fourth big advantage is that Carlton Ware enables you to prepare food by the method called "waterless cooking" which keeps more of the natural minerals and vitamins in your food and makes the food taste better. 5. Buy it once and you're all through buying for life.

You can't wear it out. You see Stainless Steel is not a coated or plated metal, like the chromium plate on the bumper of your car. That chromium plate can chip or wear off and expose the raw steel underneath. Then the steel rusts. But our kind of Stainless Steel is stainless all the way through. It can't chip, crack, peel, or wear off. You could use a set the rest of your lifetime and then give it to your children. They could use it for the rest of their lives and it would still be good for their children.

Well, I figured that if the price was low enough every family could afford Stainless Steel Carlton Ware. So, I worked out this plan! We would sell a complete set of 15 pieces for a low price that would include only a small profit for the company. Then you add your profit and re-sell this set to your friends and neighbors for approximately half of the usual price charged by the house-to-house salesmen. You actually save your friends more than half. They are glad to get such a bargain and they feel that you've done them a real favor.

That's because the set they buy has in it only two profits, ours and yours. Both our profit and your profit is reasonable and fair.

Now, that is the thing that makes my plan like an endless chain. When a woman gets her first piece of Carlton Ware she simply raves about it. She gets so thrilled that she can't wait to demonstrate it to her friends and tell them all about it. She's so proud of its silvery sheen and so happy about how easily it washes that she just "bubbles over." So if you start by just letting your own friends in on a good thing, before you know it their friends are calling you up and asking you if you can get the same low prices for them. Then their friends call you and their friends' friends call you. It just goes on and on! To make an extra $125.00 a month, you only have to deliver seven sets and that's easy. Mrs. Montell in Pennsylvania took orders for $1400.00 worth in her first month. And Mrs. William Hanchow writes, "Got my set Saturday—I already have 17 customers."

Now, I'll let you in on another part of my plan. My company maintains a beautiful resort in the Florida Keys just so our sales representatives can enjoy a Florida vacation at company expense. If you take only ten set orders a month for six months, we will pay the expense for a Winter vacation in Florida for you and one other member of your family.

Whether you want to make this extra money now or at some later time, you should at least get all the information right now. I'll not only be glad to send Free Information, I'll also send you a complete demonstrating outfit that you can show to your friends and neighbors. And I'll give you exact instructions by which you can write up orders without making any house-to-house calls on strangers.

There is no charge now or at any other time, Everything I send you is free. When you qualify, I'll even furnish you with a complete 15 piece set of Carlton Ware that you can use in your own kitchen and show to your friends. It's an extra bonus I give you to encourage good earnings on your part. All 15 pieces will be shipped to you with my compliments.

Send your name today. You'll be glad you wrote. This ad may not appear in this magazine again, so don't take any chances on losing out. Send the coupon or just send your name on a postcard and say, "Send me everything free." I won't send any salesmen to call on you and you won't be under the slightest obligation.

Dear Mr. Strong: Please send me free and without any obligation whatever a complete selling and demonstrating outfit with exact instructions for making an extra $125.00 a month. I don't want to do any house-to-house selling, but I will show your products to my friends and give them the advantage of the low price.

I am already selling cookware and am interested in getting a line that can be sold at a lower price. Please send me your Distributor's proposition.

Album of Arrangements by Carl Starker. (Chieftain Press) Price . The author's name and $7.50 . . ability, already well known in the Pacific Northwest and to Oregon Journal readers anywhere, should gain much wider fame as a result of this handsome book. Concise, direct, and practical, its text is limited to a 10-page introduction and short descriptions of the more than 225 plates on 74 pages devoted to spring, 94 to summer, 30 to fall, 12 to winter, 30 to dried materials, 23 to Christmas, and 11 to wreath making. Its easy informality and disregard of "rules" in favor of guid-ing "principles" and the use of a "seeing eye" should be welcomed by beginners.

A History of Flower Arrangement by Julia S. Berrall. (Studio-Crowell) Price $6.50 . . . A wellconceived, splendidly executed, finely illustrated survey of practices since earliest times in Europe, England, China, Japan, and the U.S. Also lists of the plant materials employed. Skillfully chosen paintings and other works of art supplement the text, reflect social customs in flower usage, and indicate the influence of the past on contemporary arrangements. (It seems a pity that the 196 illustrations are not listed or indexed.) A handsome book invaluable to both students and practitioners.

warm voice called out: "Come in and have a cup of coffee!" I was picking my way cautiously down steep old 18th Street, the oldest section of our handsome Portland Heights district, and looked up in surprise. There, in the full flood of autumn sunshine. were Theodora Hosfeldt and her son, Danny, smiling down from the porch of an ancient house. It was one of those squat 1890 models of the tired type usually taken over by the 3-D's-disrepair, decay, demolition squad. But there was Teddy, dashing and modern, whose direct approach and sure style sense conjured up a strictly contemporary habitat. Just to give you an idea: Teddy can slip into a Degas ballerina skirt and star in the Junior League Follies; and the next week she can buckle down to sets and costumes for the Children's Theatre-once her own young are abed. Such activities are, of course, in addition to due attention to her husband, Art, to her children, household, and friends. Of all people, then, why should a young woman as modern as Teddy select an outmoded homestead?

I gave the place a long second look. It wasn't 3-D fodder at all! Something, clearly, had happened. In place of the usual tangle of weeds, the frontyard was paved with brick; a new wrought-iron lamp post and picket fence added a well-loved, well-tended look. Under the front porch, an ivy-laced lattice screen had the air of a freshly starched petticoat. New porch rails marched to the door, now painted cornflower blue, and promising (as good front doors should) interesting things to come once you enter the house.

Then we walked in! You know how you feel in the theater when the curtain goes up, and you are suddenly in another era? Well, entering Teddy's living room, you have the same sensation—the place glows, and the furniture has a long-ago charm (see cover and page 30). It takes a few seconds to see that the color flows down from the ceilings

The Marigolds

These pictures were taken last fall in the formal gardens of Miami University in Oxford, Ohio. Though now they cannot benefit your 1953 garden, keep them and their lesson in mind next fall when the days grow short, when evenings are still, with the feel of frost, and you know that soon you must bid the garden farewell. If you plant for late-season effect, a forecast of early frost can be distressing. But it need not be if you will expend a little labor—and water. Sprinkling succulent plants when the temperature falls below 36° F. is a common practice in the florist trade; it will work equally well in gardens. Even if the freezing point is reached, and the water transformed into ice, heat is liberated in the process. That is the secret of creating an amazing crystal garden, preserved by "deep freeze" to grow and bloom throughout the Indian summer that often lasts from the first frost to the first killing one.

Ask three gardeners to describe phlox and you may get as variable a set of answers as those storied descriptions of an elephant offered by three blind men who approached the beast from three directions and gained quite different impressions from its tail, its trunk, and its broad, treelike flank. For phlox is not a single type of plant, but several types, each with its special characters, uses, and charm. As a matter of fact, L. H. Bailey's Hortus II lists more than 50 species and subspecies not counting some duplications. And the most recent (1949) Plant Buyer's Guide gives more than 32 distinct kinds offered in catalogues, although some are sold by only one or a few specialists and are but rarely seen in gardens.

However, considering only a half dozen or so widely distributed and commonly grown types as given at the top of the guide table on page 89, the phloxes as a group are well deserving of the many enthusiastic terms applied to them. As the Cyclopedia of American Horticulture put it many years ago, they "are amongst the most satisfying of garden plants. Their neat habit, brightly colored flowers, profuseness of bloom, and ease of culture make them favorites everywhere." Contemporary writers similarly hail them as essential and most desirable garden material, and especially as bright harbingers of summer—which term, however, applies to only one of the groups or classes.

Let's Go Shopping for

To start at the beginning, phlox (which name is also given the plant family Polemoniaceae) is a truly North American plant; only one or two horticulturally important species grow wild as far beyond the borders of the United States as western Canada and Mexico. The genus Phlox (this is one of those convenient ones in which botanical and popular names are the same) includes mostly perennial herbs. But one annual species native to Texas is perhaps the best known of all to most gardeners, especially beginners. This is Drummond phlox (P. drummondi) and its many modern varietal developments, whose bright-eyed flowers in a wide range of colors (except perhaps a true yellow) provide such charming low- and medium-height border effects throughout the summer. Grown from seed best sown (as soon as the days warm up) where the plants are to bloom (though it can be started earlier indoors), this friendly flower makes no heavy demand on either soil or gardener, though it naturally responds to extra care and judicious feeding and watering. Two precautions are necessary, however: To prolong the flowering season, keep the flowers picked before they wither and seeds begin to form; and if dirty white signs of mildew appear on the foliage, promptly apply sulphur or some other fungicide. Any good seed catalogue will offer a choice of selected colors or mixtures; some will include decidedly dwarf sorts ("nana compacta"), or kinds adapted for fall sowing so that earlier summer bloom can be had.

All the other phlox species are perennial, but certain characters separate them into distinct groups or categories. Starting the season in late April in the New York region (and at a corresponding period in other places), the moss-please turn to page 89 for the extraordinary room, bath, and kitchen downstairs, headquarters for sewing, large parties, and house guests, was in itself our cover story in February, 1953.

The design of the street façade is very artful, for the use of several materials (cinder block, ledge rock, bright roofing) avoids monotony—yet the coloring is so skillful that there's no touch of the vulgarity multimaterial façades sometimes present. The rear has a view of the Maumee River—a view highly prized in Toledo—so it's here that windows are concentrated. At your right, see how it looks, and how a slope was cleared away and a terrace built to make possible a wall of glass in that wonderful downstairs room.

The planning reflects the owner's fine hand. For one thing, there's the storage which really works: a wall-long coat closet; a most unconventional, but practical, linen closet in the hall—extra long, but only a foot deep, so each thing has its own tidy nook. And you may be sure that the pink Tennessee stone fireplace wall was the object of very special attention from Mrs. P.

And where does Mr. Proctor come in? Well, that sagacious gentleman left the house and its décor to his competent wife. All the same, he took no chances—for it was he who bought that copious sofa and those enormous easy chairs. Just sent them home. And she decorated around them.

A Lady

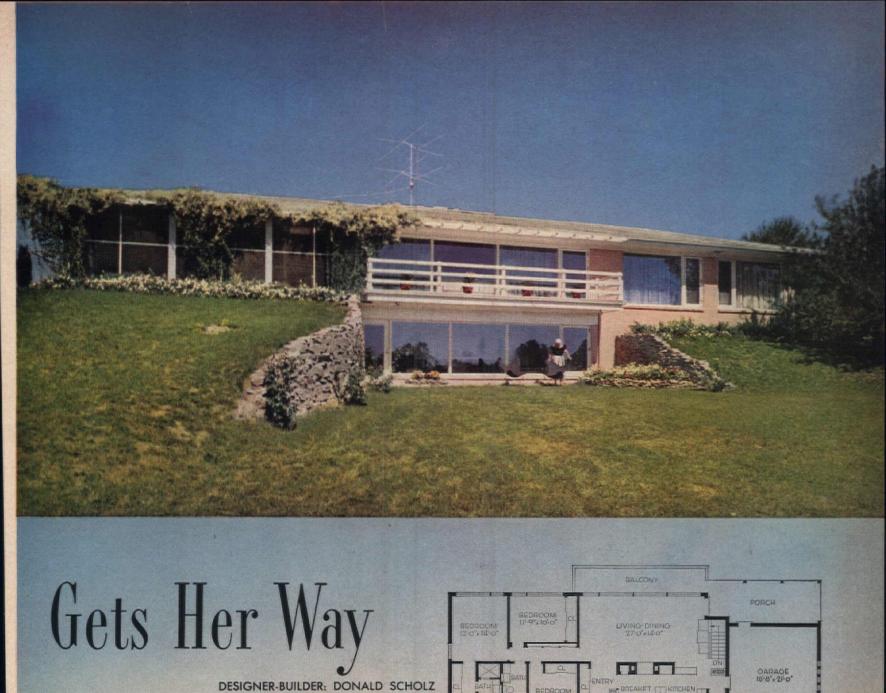

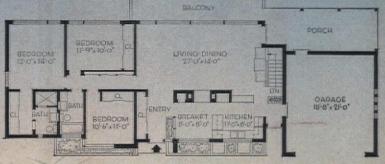

h BOY!" groaned Designer-Builder Donald Scholz, mopping his brow, when we asked about on-the-spot changes made in building this house. Said the owner, Mrs. R. K. Proctor, whose own plans Mr. Scholz had blueprinted: "I put 13,000 miles on my car, just traveling between my old house, 15 miles away, and this new one!" Pleading and cajoling, she spent as much time at the site as the workmen, and the changes she effected were plenty, costly—and, she is sure, well worthwhile. We agree.

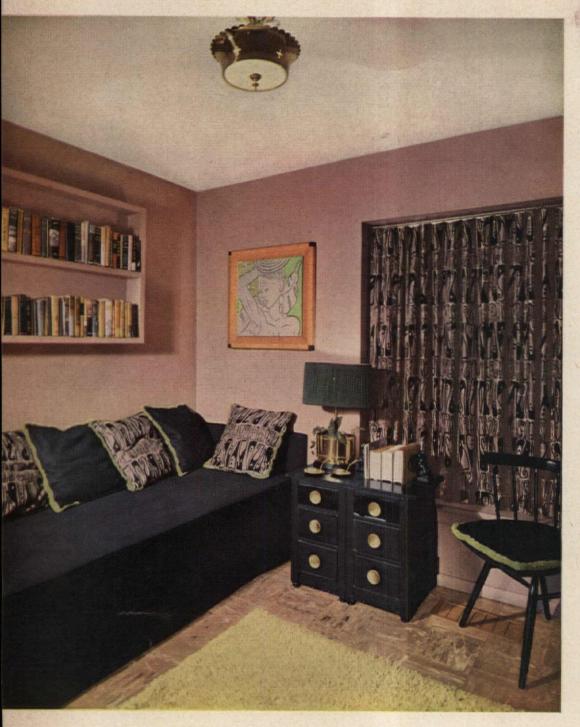

Now, perhaps, it would have been better to have made such revisions on a full-scale model before ground for the house ever was broken (see "Look Before You Leap," page 41). But when it comes to building a home, Mrs. Proctor is an artist, and just as no finished painting or sculpture keeps within the limits of the artist's first sketch, so it was inevitable that Mrs. Proctor's great opus, her home, should be perfected in the building. Perfect it is—so satisfying to us that we've shown you this house in two parts,

OWNERS: MR. AND MRS. R. K. PROCTOR

wasn't spared. There are cheaper floorings than the pink stone which paves the entry, dining area, and kitchen—but none more practical nor better suited to Mrs. Proctor's style. Rooms were designed for convenience, not convention. For example, you might expect a larger dining room in such a home, but the charming small dining spot at your right puts no strain upon hospitality, for big parties are welcomed by the big multipurpose room downstairs.

When you glance at the furnishings, you detect no sign of a budget. But take a second, closer look, and you'll see that it was not costly trappings, but a flair, an exceptional sense of color, an attention to detail (things costing nothing) that make these rooms so good. With rush rugs, wrought-iron tables, painted furniture, you could emulate them even if you were blessed with more taste than cash.

What's more, since Mrs. Proctor is our kind of gal, an inveterate do-it-yourselfer (not because she has to be, but because she likes doing things so), she made every curtain, drapery, and bedspread in the house—and she also made good new use of old things.

The striking chest in her bedroom was an old dresser, refinished, topped with marble-ized paper (smart details: mirror frame papered to match; fine pulls made from brass ash trays). Twin chests in the den were part of a dated dressing table; the guest-room headboard was an old footboard; two living-room chairs were rescued from an old three-piece suite.

Of course, it's color that sets the pace—color that's bold, but never hog-wild. The living room with its grays and its beiges, its warm and cool off-white effects, has just enough amethyst to spike it, just enough black to tie it together. Exactly the right amount of the right shade of blue sets off the purple in the master bedroom, for purple walls are not always sure-fire—they require both courage and taste—like our heroine's.

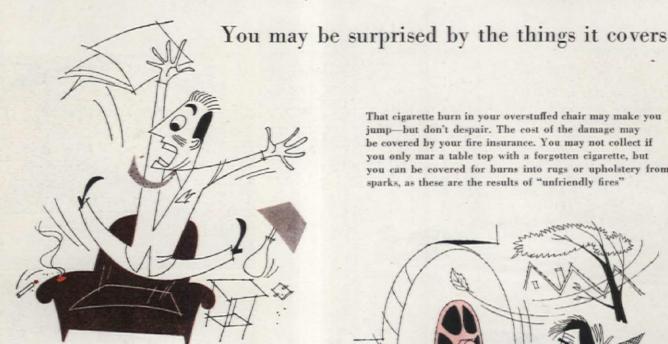

Are You Covered?

ED CONY

A truck run over your hat? Look at your fire insurance policy.

That cigarette burn in your overstuffed chair may make you jump-but don't despair. The cost of the damage may be covered by your fire insurance. You may not collect if you only mar a table top with a forgotten cigarette, but you can be covered for burns into rugs or upholstery from sparks, as these are the results of "unfriendly fires" you are like most people, there are probably many things you don't know about your fire insurance and its extended coverages-and what you do not know may cost you an unnecessary loss. It may be profitable, then, to take a good look at your fire insurance policy to find out just what protection is included therein.

First, let's talk about fire insurance on your home-on the building itself. The probability is that you carry a policy with "extended coverages." "Extended coverages," as the name suggests, protects your home from other disasters besides fireexplosion, windstorm, riot, vehicles, airplanes, and smoke. And so it is that fire insurance comes to your aid when a speed demon misses a curve and drives right into your living room, or when a high wind knocks down the TV aerial. Fire insurance, however, won't help you out when your wife (or your husband) crashes through the back wall of the garage-unless you have "additional extended coverage."

When a fire damages your home, will the insurance company pay every cent of the repair bill? In some cases, the answer is "no." Suppose, for example, fire destroys your five-year-old roof. A new roof costs $2,000. If the insurance company paid the full $2,000, you would profit from the fire by having, free of charge, a new roof in the place of the one that was five years old. To prevent this, the insurance company takes into account the depreciation on your old roof. If the roof had depreciated 25 per cent, for instance, the company would deduct $500 for depreciation and pay only $1,500 of the $2,000 bill.

There is an exception to the depreciation rule, however. If you insure your home against fire for its full value, you may get what is called a "replacement cost" policy. It pays the full cost of repairs. In the case just mentioned, you would collect the full $2,000, provided your policy is properly endorsed. Here is another

An attorney in Palo Alto, California, recently remodeled a fine 40-year-old home and insured it for $20,000. Its full value is $26,000. By increasing his insurance $6,000 (at an approximate cost of $8 a year) he would get a "replacement cost" policy.

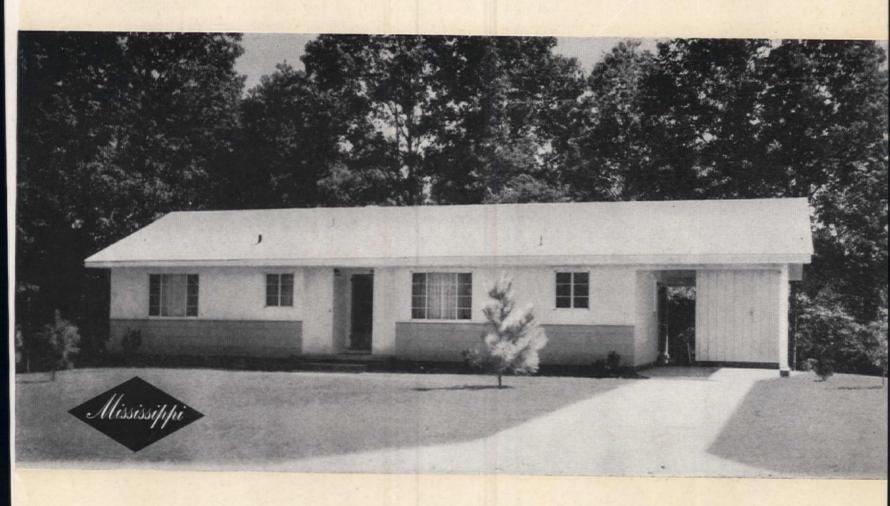

You're walking down Main Street when a gust of wind drops your new $12.95 hat under an oil truck. The truck rumbles by and your once-beautiful hat is a total loss. But don't give up on the $12.95. Look at your fire insurance -you may be insured by extended coverage endorsement on that policy even though the damage was not from fire

This means that on a $5,000 loss, the reimbursement would be $5,000. Under his present policy, on the other hand, depreciation on a 40-year-old house (even in good condition) is such that he would have to take some depreciation on his loss.

You should know the meaning of a "friendly fire." It is one you start yourself for some useful purpose, such as a fire in a fireplace. As long as the fire stays in its proper place, you are not covered for any damage it may cause. This makes it expensive for you to forget to open the flue. If smoke pours out into your living room and damages paint or wallpaper, you are not covered, because it comes from a "friendly fire." If the flames actually ignite the wallpaper or a spark sets the rug afire, then the firebeing out of its proper place-has become "unfriendly" or "hostile" and your insurance policy covers the loss.

Suppose your home is so badly damaged by fire that you have to move out and live in an apartment or hotel while repairs are being made. Fire insurance coverage in some states will pay up to 10 per cent of the amount of the policy for such rent cost. On a $10,000 policy you may get up to $83 a month, or on a PLEASE TURN TO PAGE 03

Were all the little things right? Would our furniture fit? Were the colors what we wanted? We knew that a house on the ground looks very different from a house on a drawing board. . . . Well, we found our answers so simply that we don't see why every home builder doesn't do as we did. Equipped with less than $5 worth of materials, and no previous experience, we built, furnished, and decorated a detailed scale model of the house. On the model it cost nothing to enlarge windows, shift doors, increase the opening between living and dining rooms, relocate equipment and built-ins, and make sure of our colors. In the actual house, such changes cost a young fortune. We made scale models of the furniture (just for shape, no detail), and we got our colors from water-soluble drawing inks mixed to match paint samples we had decided upon. In the furnished house, which you see below, we didn't have to change a thing! For step-by-step pictures of our model, please turn the page.

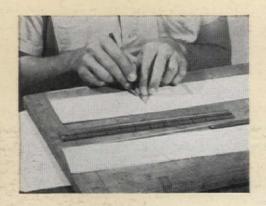

Look before you \\\\P!

Is the house you think you want really perfect?

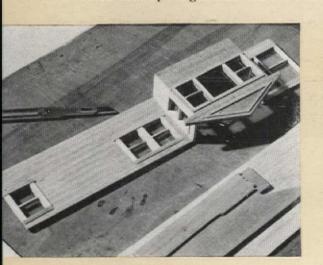

The Goodrums looked before they spent, and made all their changes on a scale model of the house. HERE'S HOW-

With the materials listed on the opposite page, my wife and I built our scale model in a week's worth of evenings—coloring, furniture, and all. Often, it's the furniture arrangement that dictates architectural changes in a room. The scale we used for our model was ½ inch to a foot, the same scale as in the architect's plans. We knew that both the roof and the front would have to be removable to let us fiddle around with the interior, but neither feature presented a problem, for the roof was made to rest directly on the model, and the front was constructed to fit snugly between the end walls. Each wall was constructed in its entirety before assembly. Using a ½" x 4" x 36" balsa wood sheet (the ½-in. thickness being roughly equivalent in scale to a 5½-in. wall), we first laid out the rear wall and, with very soft pencil, carefully marked off the openings, accurately transferring measurements from the architect's plans.

• Using a model-maker's knife and an engineers' celluloid triangle as a straightedge, we cut the wall from the sheet, and cut out window and door openings. Where necessary, we sandpapered the edges with very fine paper wrapped around a small block. We were fussy about window details and framed each opening inside and out with thin strips of 1/32-in. balsa. To simulate glass, we cemented rectangles of thin acetate sheet to interiors of window openings and drew check rails and muntins on "windows" with white ink. We grooved the exterior to resemble the asbestos siding we planned to use (exaggerating the grooves so they would show up under a coat of ink). We "screened" the porch with plastic sheet scored to resemble screening.

Look before You Leap!

• For the end walls, the only new problem was to simulate louvers, which we did by cutting deep triangular grooves framed with 1/16-in. square strips. We finished up all the details, and then assembled the side and rear walls carefully with quick-drying cement. Next, we laid out the floor on a ½" x 8" x 15" balsa sheet (two ½" x 4" x 15" sheets cemented together). With soft pencil, we marked the location of all interior walls, doors, windows, built-ins, and other details, following the architect's plans in detail. This was very helpful when we made the interior walls. When two people work together, accurate detailing doesn't seem tedious.

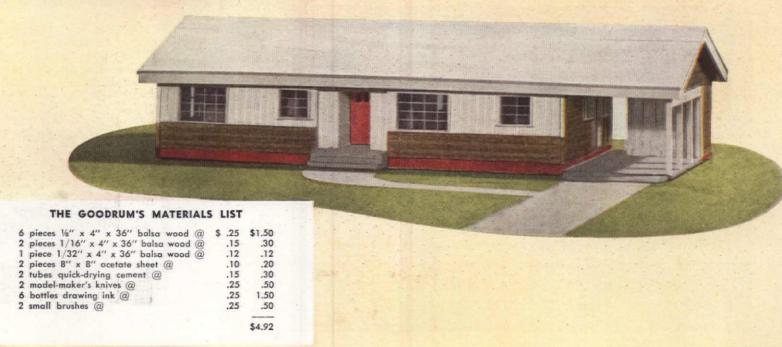

• To strengthen the model, fillets and diagonal braces were cemented on the under side of the floor. Then the floor was cemented into place. To give ourselves a choice between alternate designs, we made two different front walls, each one built to be removable, but to fit snugly inside the end walls at the front edge of the floor.

• Before we built the interior walls, we added a carport and storeroom. We made the carport floor and ceiling and joined them with ½-in. square posts. The storeroom was built of ½-in. balsa, and we simulated its board-and-batten construction by cementing narrow "battens" of 1/32-in. balsa to the walls. For interior walls, as for exterior ones, measurements were transferred from the architect's plan to the balsa sheets—but each piece, after cutting, was checked against the plan on the model's floor. We cut doors between rooms, and framed them with 1/32-in. strips, but we didn't bother with model doors.

Closet doors were grooved and framed, not cut out. Built-in cabinets, bookcases, and kitchen and bathroom fixtures were made of 1/16-in. and 1/32-in. sheet. Finally, we raised our roof, building it on the model, and holding its parts in place by straight pins until the cement had set. Then we lifted the roof off and braced it for strength so it could go off and on often. Of course, we included the roof's trim, in detail. With the addition of steps, the construction was finished. Then came the painting, inside and out, with water-soluble inks, and the "furnishing" with rough scale models of our furniture. We "lived" in our furnished scale model for a time and made quite a few changes which would have been too costly in the actual house. Finally the model below suited us to a "T." So we built a house exactly like it (page 41). And it suits us perfectly—as the house built from the original plans, without the changes made in our model, never could have.

Built-ins

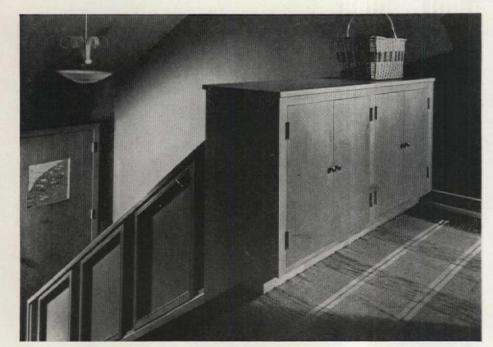

• When those precious cubic feet of space can work for instead of against you, why have a do-nothing dust trap under a bed? A drawer under a box spring and mattress holds pillows and quilts so your bed can be tidier by day. It also is an ideal spot for out-of-season storage. This one is in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Reid, Jr.

Building costs are higher, basements are fewer—and there's more gear to store every year!
So look for wasted wall space,
and build your storage in there.
A foot or so "stolen" from the length of a room can provide an attic's worth of storage in a floor-to-ceiling unit

for Music and Books

• In the days before built-ins, a space like this would have been furnished with a decorative table and a couple of chairs. But see what a wall-long built-in can do with very little floor space. There's a cabinet for a radio-phonograph and a whole collection of records; there's a storage cabinet, too; and, of course, there's a ceiling-high bookcase. What's more, the built-in "furnishes" the wall, "drapes" the window, displays the pretty things you'd put on a table—and the cornice which ties it together provides an excellent place to install concealed lighting. A companion built-in flanks the door on the other side. Home of Dr. J. Benton Egee.

for Lineus

 What goes on at the top of your staircase? In most homes there would just be a rail where the Harry Knights built this handsome cabinet, ready to hold linens for bedrooms and bath—and to free the linen closet for dozens of other storage jobs.

for Table Settings

• If only for the decorative drama it creates, this built-in, in the home of the William Wieners, would earn its keep. Its fluted-glass sliding doors play back every light in the room, and contrast effectively with the walls' mahogany paneling. But such a shallow cabinet, which requires no floor space to speak of, is most useful as a fumble-free place in which to store good glassware in safety.

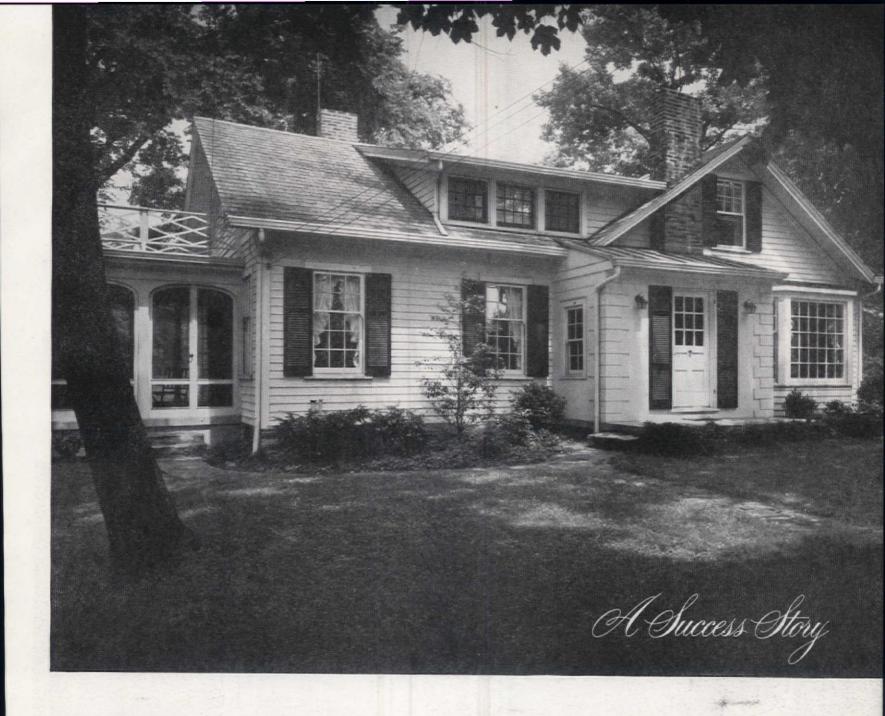

o With clever modern designing, a built-in storage unit often replaces a conventional wall. The one shown above does even better, for this exceptional divider between a living room and kitchen occupies little more space than a wall would, but it is a complete dining room itself. It is easy to use three times a day, but so planned that it frees the dining-room space for living-room use between meals. On the livingroom side, it is a partially mirrored wall. On the kitchen side, it offers all of the cupboard, drawer, and shelf space you would find in the average dining-room buffet, server, and china cabinet together-and it adds badly needed counter space to a small kitchen. A generous dining table comes into the act when the back of the unit nearest the fireplace pulls down to welcome a large family-and it vanishes as soon as the dishes are cleared away.

REMODELING IN A MINOR KEY

This is a story purposely selected for the more than one million of our readers who have made definite plans for remodeling their homes. Of that million, half—enough families to fill several large cities—will spend just about the amount of money involved in this story. Naturally, then, you can understand our enthusiasm for the realistic improvements which the Walter J. Thomases made to better their not-quite-good-enough home, for it represents the kind of lifting of a home's face and spirits which so many of our readers are about to tackle. Nothing spectacular. Nothing incredible. Just honest and practical minor-key remodeling.

To find such meaningful stories as this, AMERICAN HOME editors often climb into a car and go driving through the residential sections of cities all over the country. We spotted the Thomas house in a lovely woodland setting in suburban Cincinnati, and of course, it stopped us short. Because we are old hands at this game, we could detect under the improvements the lines of the original structure. Here, we could see, money had been well spent on things which mattered—but good cash had not been wasted on costly attempts to banish all signs of the "before." After all, it is the total effect that matters, and the total effect here is excellent. We were all the more delighted when we discovered that the remodeling was as successful indoors as out (pages 48-49).

Before remodeling, you reached the Thomases' front door through an awkward portico much too large for the house—and once through the door, you were smack in the middle of a smallish living room, for there was no entry hall. Fixit Step No. I was to enclose the portico and turn it into a roomy, welcoming foyer with an oversize storage closet. Next, an expansive bay window replaced the three too-small front windows in their living room, and another large window went into the side wall. Thus opened up, it's now a generous living room of good proportions. There are pine bookcase cabinets, and the walls are partly pine and partly a rich dark green with crisp white woodwork. No traces are left of the original "landlord tan"; no feeling now of the overly long and too-narrow room that was! A sweet red print is used for curtains and one chair; another chair is done in red leather; the couch is green, bright and nice against the curtains. The dining room is furnished to do its own job, and still add to the living room's sweep.

Finally a screen porch was built off the dining room and next to the kitchen so that meals can be served there. A very important addition to a house in the woods by a brook was this porch, for before remodeling, the Thomases had no sheltered place to sit and enjoy their unusually desirable land.

But the entry and the bay and the porch which so vitally improved the interior, were not just "stuck on," as so often happens. They were designed with an eye toward improving the facade as well, and they make it look handsomely (and newly) wide and low. The roof of the old open portico was uncomfortably peaked; the roof of the new entry slopes the roof of the new entry slopes forward to create a much needed horizontal line. To the right, the bay window adds to this horizontal effect; to the left, the porch, with its good detailing and its lace cap of a top rail, widens the house still more, and very graciously. The Thomases added a coat of paint, a garnish of shutters, and a little new, fuller landscaping—and then they framed the whole charming picture with a good, and appropriate, split-rail fence.

What better symbol of home than a gracious entry? Enclosing a useless portice gave this to the Thomases, and it shelters their living room from the front-door traffic to which it used to be subjected. A giant coat closet is papered to match the paper on the ceiling

Small living room was enlarged—a little in size, a great deal in use and appearance. New bay window to the front actually adds to its footage, and, of course, like the large window added at the side, it "opens" the room up visually. The furniture arrangement, too, is much better now than it was when the living room had to double as an entry

The dining room retains its independence, but it is furnished in such a way that its sweep is added to that of the living room to give this small house the great luxury of an enormous living area. Instead of adding their enclosed porch to the living-room side in the conventional way, the Thomases built it off the dining room where it enjoys a view of their brook, and is handy to the kitchen for the service of oudoor meals

Find of

See how poised it is in a living room—then watch it in action, and you'll know why we think that this is truly a terrific pattern! There is nothing like it ready made, but there is a great need for a cabinet which can hold everything required by sewers, and still be a decorative asset. So we dreamed this one up, making dozens of sketches, then "mock-ups," revised and re-revised until performance and appearance were perfected. Finally, an expert craftsman built it of fine materials and blueprinted it so we could share its blessings with you. (Pattern 2036). It's a find of the month, to be sure, but this pattern took long to develop. It may not be one Dad turns out in jigtime, but it is, we assure you, one of the most worthwhile projects he can undertake.

Other AMERICAN Home patterns make a fitting background for our pride and joy: "Fairyland Tree" screen (Pattern 1032), useful for hiding a dress form; Chinese Coin cornice (Blueprint Pattern 2035); and curtains decorated with our Chinese Coin motif (Pattern 1288).

This metal yardstick never gets lost, for it is set right into the top of the work surface. Of course, when the "sewing room" isn't in use, yardstick is concealed by the fold-over top

In repose, it's a treat to the eye; in action, this sewing-room-ina-cabinet considers only its user. Folding "butterfly wings" support a fold-over top to offer a big 4' x 4' cutting surface to your fabric, patterns, and such. Ball-bearing casters, masked by beautiful bracket feet, make it easy to move about so you can work on any side

This Builder's House Is

Living room isn't large, but good planning makes the most of its size. Dining room and entry extend its space, large windows open it up, one unbroken wall makes it easy to furnish (opposite page)

Still Up-to-date

Because its excellent design avoids fads and cliches, this exceptional developer's house, no longer new, is still "hot" news his is a happy exception, very different from most development houses which have erupted upon our countryside since World War II. There are good builders' houses, of course, but too many speculation builders outbid each other with gimmicks instead of good sense. Some have even gone so far as to advertise their wares as "Split-level Colonial Ranchelows" in an attempt to offer all things to all buyers. Such giddy mixtures catch slap-happy house hunters—but the house soon looks as dated as an awesome Victorian, and a great deal sillier.

Back when the housing boom was still new, George Rokahr of Lincoln, Nebraska, a builder of houses on speculation, had an idea and the courage to experiment. Why not, in ready-built houses, take advantage of the good new ideas in style, plan, and construction economy found in custom-built homes? He consulted with Architects Clarke and Enersen who came up with several excellent plans, including this one.

In appearance, this house is certainly up-to-date, but not so extreme as to scare away buyers who thought they didn't like Modern. For looks, it concentrates upon good proportions, good texture and color, softened by greenery—things which, after all, are more appealing than strained "cuteness." And because the architects knew their stuff, they were able to effect intelligent savings so that this house could be priced to compete with inferior ones. For example, the elimination of attic, basement, and fireplace made it cheaper to build, but really modern comfort was provided by excellent insulation and a combined heating and air-conditioning system. As you can see, the plan is excellent, incorporating sound modern ideas about space and privacy of a type seldom found in development houses.

The result? A house half a dozen years old which is still "hot" news—way ahead of many custom-built homes, and years in advance of the average builder's new product. The lucky people who bought it, Mr. and Mrs. James Carmel, knew what a bargain it was—and Mrs. Carmel, an art instructor at the University of Nebraska, furnished it as intelligently as the architects had planned it.

Not only did the Greeks always have words for it—they also had beautiful patterns for everything. And their most popular pattern for household pottery in their Golden Age (circa 500 B.C.) was the very motif around which we planned this well-poised setting—very American, circa 1954! In combination with a sprig of laurel (another ancient favorite) it crests the china and decorates the Irish linen damask. Greek Key is one name for it; scholars call it "fretwork" or "meander"; and in Grandma's day, it was known as "Walls of Troy," though its connection with that fabled city is mostly fanciful. In any event, though no ancient Greek ever dined from such wonderfully translucent ware as this "Dorian" china, he would have relished the simple beauty of its decoration and modern coupe shape. With it, hand-blown goblets, also bearing a Greek name, "Corinth"—just sheer beauty of shape. For drama, a flower arrangement in a classic container

(the design is Roman this time) which looks for all the world like marble. The Greeks had no such luxuries as these sterling sauce boats and salts and peppers (their shapes are our heritage from the 18th century), nor would they have known what to do with forks. But these forks, and their companion sterling flatware, in a pattern called "Reigning Beauty" are, like all beauties, joys in any era.

What—we'd like to know—what about winter food? Six months from now, just about the time the trees have turned decently green, you'll be up to your ears in news about summer foods concocted with hot weather in mind, for the term "summer food" has, long since, come to mean a species of food which rates very special attention. Well, we like the cold weather, too, and we like to celebrate it with the delicious. stick-to-the-ribs kind of fare especially designed to warm the blood and cheer the eye—and to make the most and the best of even a shivery January day. Proud we are to announce that five of the six hearties here were submitted by Cheapies Club members (how you gals can cook!), and that every one of them involves only common, garden-variety ingredients—but done up in a most extraordinary manner. We had a wonderful time taste-testing them in our own American Home kitchens.

A soup to start out with, Brisket Soup, full of meat and potato and corn, with a plus of cheese to intrigue the nose and the palate. With a salad, a hot bread, and dessert—it's a whole dinner. And of course, we have casseroles for winter days, two excellent ones. The first, our Hot Pot, includes nice big hunks of pork or beef plus plenty of cabbage, corn, carrots, and other good things, in addition to the barbecue sauce and spices which give it its name—it's hot all right, but, as the Bopsters would say, "Sister, it's cool." The second, we call Fisherman's Catch-erole to honor its good blending of white fish and shrimp for a change—mushrooms and parsley and onions enhance the flavors, and potatoes, cooked right with, make it a meal. The sauce is simple, but like so many simple sauces, it is superior.

Everyone knows about New England Baked Beans—so we give you Ohio Baked Beans: canned beans, plus crushed pineapple, plus stewed tomatoes, prepared in a whipstitch, tossed in a beanpot and heated. Moveover—and this is what women really care for—this is a family dish or a party dish which can stand in the oven for hours without being ruined.

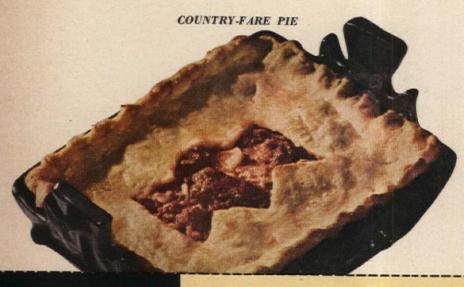

Honey Bran Bread is non-yeast sweet bread—almost a cake. Sliced with butter or cream cheese, you can't beat it. Preparation time for all this—10 minutes (your oven takes it from there). Knowing how pampered a hot bread can make a man feel, we'll bet a lot of smart gals will spend those 10 minutes over a hot mixing bowl to treat Papa so well—so easily!

To finish a cold-day dinner, a light dessert, Grape Imperial—a gelatin dessert that neither looks nor tastes like every other one. It's light for milady—but sweet, for milord.

Anne's Notebook

ANNE BARNARD

TRANQUIL DAYS should be ours again as 1954 comes our way and the hectic holidays retreat into memory. A pleasant memory, but a welcome change of pace it will be to tackle the New Year. Up pops that perennial question of Resolutions.

I've made mine regarding the family—and the food that I'll serve them.

Few are these guideposts of mine, but I'd like to share them (all but the secret ones) with you:

I SHALL PLAN MY MENUS A WEEK AHEAD (as I once did for six months)—a boon to a homemaker and her food budget this practice can be! Type menus on 3" x 5" cards, and plan them to use every left-over worth mentioning. Then check supplies, make out the week's shopping list, and do all that you can at a clip. Date menus, earmark those that win special kudos, and use them again later on—another timesaver.

THE FAMILY'S PET DISHES SHALL LOOK AND TASTE HIGH-HAT-BUT COST NO MORE.

I'LL COOK VEGETABLES WITH CARE AND NOT JUST BOIL UP AND SERVE. (See page 69.)

I'LL GET 'EM TO EAT SALADS AND LOVE
IT by serving salads as a first course or as a dessert—or by making the salads particularly interesting to the male palate when served along with the meat.

I SHALL KEEP SVELTE—BUT I WON'T SKIP DESSERTS! When whipped cream is called for, the family will get the McCoy, but mine will be made from dried milk. There will be plenty of gelatin desserts, low calorie in themselves, and lots of fruit—fresh, frozen, or canned—with which the family can eat cakes. I'll pass 'em up. (When Pop and Sis look bulgy, I'll encourage them to do likewise.)

BREAKFASTS WILL HAVE MORE FLAIR—
strawberry hard sauce with pancakes, for a change (page 69), or orange French toast (just add one tablespoon each of sugar and grated orange peel to your recipe).

ABOUT THOSE HIGH-HAT MAIN COURSES—
STUFFED, BAKED PORK CHOPS, instead of fried ones—and serve them proudly on your best platter, surrounded by crab apples out of a jar. To my stuffing, I add chopped peppers, onions, and celery.

LAMB BASTED WITH COFFEE offers a new twist. Fix a cup of good strong coffee with cream and sugar as if you were going PLEASE TURN TO PAGE 69

CRISCO HAS NEWS FOR ALL WHO LOVE ... YET FEAR FRIED FOODS!

Crisp, light, Crisco-fried foods are so digestible you can eat 'em 7 days a week!

New medical tests prove it! Yes, new tests by leading doctors and nutrition experts prove that foods fried light and right in Crisco are as completely digestible as if baked or boiled!

Look at crisp, golden fish fried in Crisco . . . or taste the delicate flavor of Crisco-fried potatoes. All Crisco-fried foods look and taste so light you know they'll "sit right" and be easy to digest!

Crisco is completely different from ordinary frying fats or drippings. Crisco is entirely vegetable. It's whiter, fresher, sweeter than any ordinary fat. Has no grease taste to "heavy-up" fried foods.

So fry away and fear no more! Use Crisco for fried foods you can eat 7 days a week without a worry!

CRISP, BROWN, DELICIOUS! CRISCO-FRIED FISH

Clean small whole fish or use fish fillets. Wash and dry. For a crisp crust dip in salted milk, then roll in a mixture of cornmeal and flour. Fry slowly in hot Crisco. Turn to brown both sides. Try this recipe, tonight!

to drink it. Roast the lamb as usual, using the coffee mixture for basting. Fix more coffee to use with drippings in making the gravy.

HOT SPICED PEACHES are good dinner partners for lamb, beef, or poultry. Buy them in a jar, or do at home. Pour juice in saucepan, add 1/4 tsp. ground cinnamon and 2 tbs. vinegar. Cook a few minutes. Reduce heat, add fruit, and cook 5 minutes.

MOUNDS OF CORNED BEEF hash baked on thick onion slices is a worthy dish that keeps the food budget in line. Break contents of a 1-lb. can of corned beef hash with fork, blend in 3 tsp. finely chopped green pepper. Pack hash firmly into custard cups. Unmold on thick slices of Bermuda onion, salt-and-pepper seasoned, and spread with butter or margarine. Bake 20 minutes (350° F.). Serve with hot chili sauce.

A GOOD CLAM MAIN DISH-Spaghetti with white or red clam sauce. With canned minced clams, you can whip this up in jigtime. For white sauce, drain juice from 7-oz. can of minced clams and combine with one crushed garlic bud and 2 tbs. olive oil. To make sauce red, add 1/2 can tomato paste. Heat thoroughly. Just 3 or 4 minutes before serving, add clams, 2 tbs. chopped parsley, and a dash of basil. Grated Italian cheese can go with this taste teaser. Serve with tossed green salad.

THE BOYS EAT THIS SALAD in restaurants and should do same at home: cold cooked string beans mixed with salad oil, vinegar, onion salt, grated cheese, served in lettuce cups. Refreshing with the main course.

ADD DASH OF THYME, marjoram, and chopped parsley to your tossed salads. It spikes them.

A SALAD DESSERT they like at my house is this: Grind r qt. fresh cranberries with 2 cored apples; add 1/2 cup sugar. Blend well. Dissolve package of lemon-flavored gelatin in 11/2 cups of hot water. Cool. When slightly thickened, stir in cranberry mixture. Chill. Serve with sour cream.

THAT STRAWBERRY HARD SAUCE on pancakes or waffles is elegant. Add 3 or 4 tbs. frozen strawberries or strawberry preserves to your hard sauce and mix thoroughly.

SOME HINTS ON VEGETABLES are in order. With fresh and frozen vegetables, start with one inch of hot water in pan; cover pan; bring to boil over heat. Reduce heat and cook until tender-don't overcook. Treat canned vegetables with respect-follow directions.

VARY THE REGULARS with these combinations! Use 1/2 can consommé when cooking green beans. Cook mushrooms, or pimiento, or sliced onions with green beans. Cook lima beans with tomatoes-brussels sprouts with chestnuts-carrots with celery.

Look They're NEW!

SO NEW, they're just off the press! . . . AMERICAN HOME MAGAZINE'S wonderful new series of cook booklets!

SO SENSIBLE, you wonder why no one ever thought of it before! Each little jewel of a book, 3" x 5" in size, is devoted exclusively to one kind of food—meats, cakes, pies, salads, casseroles, quickies. Each cook booklet contains 101 of the editors' favorite recipes, tested and retested in American Home's own kitchens so you know they're absolutely foolproof.

SO EASY TO USE! Every recipe not only lists the ingredients and tells you how to combine them, but also tells preparation time, number of servings, the vitamins you'll get, and how many calories per serving you can expect. (Except in the cake cook booklet—who wants to count calories there!) Each book is printed on heavy paper with a tough washable cover. The spiral binding lets you open the book flat when you're working, and it takes up so little counter space.

SO DIFFERENT! Every single recipe is illustrated! You won't be cooking a pig in a poke with these cook booklets! Right next to the directions on the facing page there's a handsome photograph showing you exactly what the food looks like.

Beauties—aren't they? We show them off in this jeweler's-case type of display to call your attention to the fact that most good new coffee "pots" are worthy of appearing right at your dinner table. But to nothing more than to coffee makers does the "handsome is as handsome does" requirement apply. So, first off, we'd like to say that a good coffee maker of any type (drip, percolator, or vacuum, electrical or not) will do handsomely—if you feed it a good bean, and obey the basic rules (page 74). And vice versa: the best coffee beans in the world, lovingly roasted, blended, and ground, won't make a good cup of coffee in a stained, beat-up, poorly proportioned coffee maker.

Whether you want drip, percolated, or vacuum-made coffee is a matter of personal preference. Each type has slightly different taste characteristics; but, despite all the hocus-pocus you may have heard, each can produce very good coffee. So pick the type first, and then let your requirements, and your purse, decide whether your new coffee maker is to be the at-home-on-the-range kind, or electrically operated, or a superdeluxe electric automatic.

As to shape, we frankly don't think that it matters much. But the basket does matter—baskets should always be large enough to permit the coffee to expand without edging over the rim and into the brew itself.

THE AUTOMATICS: These usually are the most expensive coffee makers, well worth the price, and you'll be well rewarded if you invest that Christmas check in one. They differ from the less-expensive electrically operated types in that they will brew coffee, then turn themselves offand, of course, they keep the coffee at drinking temperature without boiling. There is such a thing as an almost foolproof coffee maker-and this is it (only the measurements are subject to human caprice), for with every other type you may ruin perfectly good coffee by overcooking, or by boiling when you reheat it. Some models have a strength-control gadget, and some have a little signal light to tell you when the coffee is brewed. Automatics come in percolator and vacuum types. You can buy extra visual luxury in the form of silver-plated models which resemble celebrated silversmiths' designs.

tomatic, lower in price, and a good buy. Their advantage over the range-top type is that you can use them any-place. Also, they will never boil over—although, if you don't watch it, a nonautomatic percolator might "perk" too long. If you happen to own an electric timer, this type of coffee maker, plugged into it, behaves almost like an automatic—it will turn off when the coffee is finished, but, of course, it won't be kept at drinking temperature. They come in percolator and vacuum types.

Coffee Makers (Begins on page 72)

HOME-ON-THE-RANGE TYPES: Use a drip, a vacuum, or a "perk"-but within its class, buy the best you can afford-and keep it "like new." An old, or too-thin, or a beat-up coffeepot, whatever its symbolical homely virtues may be, is apt to boil over too easily, or otherwise spoil your coffee. Of the range-top types, the drip pots are the most foolproof because the actual brewing operation doesn't take place over heat, and needn't be watched-it's in the warming-up that the trouble may come.

WHAT SIZE? For home use, you can buy a one-cup drip coffee maker, a 25-cup electric percolator-or any size between. Some manufacturers maintain that you can make a good single cup in their pots. The Pan-American Coffee Institute disagrees. But whoever is right, it stands to reason that a small pot, in addition to a larger one, is a handy thing to have if the family is small, or if one member likes a good, fresh cup at odd hours. If you entertain a lot, we urge you to buy a big coffee maker-a 15-18 cup drip pot can be had for well under $10. It's so much easier to make one good big batch of coffee than to work your six or eight cupper in shifts, struggling to keep the first batch warm in a saucepan, to its great disadvantage.

MATERIAL: There are them as maintain that brewed coffee should never, never touch metal, that the best coffee is made by drip or vacuum methods, and that the part of the coffee maker which holds the finished brew should be made of glass, porcelain, or porcelain enamel. Whether or not these Sensitive Palates are right is a hair-splitting matter, but we assure you that you can make wonderful coffee in metal, which has the great advantage of durability. This is especially true if you keep the inside of your metal coffee maker as free from coffee stains as you'd keep a glass one you can see through!

WANT A GOOD CUP EVERY TIME? Then follow the rules. They are simple, and they apply to every type of coffee maker.

· Keep the pot scrupulously clean-and soap-and-water clean isn't enough. Thin layers of coffee residue, which you can hardly see, give a rancid taint to the pot. Baking soda is an old reliable for "sweetening" the pot, or use one of the coffeepot cleaning compounds now on the market. · Always start with fresh, cold water.

- · Don't use by-guess-and-by-gosh methods. Accurate measurements are important! Any cup and any spoon won't do. Follow the markings on your coffee maker if they are clear. If not, use a real measuring cup for the water, and a coffee measure (two level tbs.) for the coffee. Ideal proportions for ordinary coffee are one measure of coffee to three quarters of a measuring cup of water. For afterdinner demi-tasse (which should be extrastrong coffee, not just a small cup of ordinary coffee), use three measures of coffee to a cup-and-a-half of water.
- Never boil coffee when you warm it up for drinking. But never! · Always use fresh coffee. Coffee made from a stale grind is worse than no coffee at all. Perfectionists, of course, grind the beans before brewing each batch, and new adjustable electrical grinders make this easier. However, using a good vacuum-packed coffee stored tightly covered in your refrigerator is a lot less trouble, and produces a mighty fresh cup.
- · Be sure to use the correct grind for the type of coffee maker you are using. If you have a drip pot, pulverized coffee (finer than drip grind) will give you a stronger brew-but in that case, use a coffee filter, or improvise a filter from a facial tissue.
- · Serve your coffee piping hot, immediately after it is brewed. That's when it is at its peak in flavor.
- · Don't bother about the tricks. Some fine cooks stoutly hold that eggs improve the flavor of coffee. Others insist that a pinch of salt does wonders. We're sorry-but coffee specialists, who have tested these theories repeatedly, assure us that there is nothing to them. We blushingly admit to being something of coffee experts ourselves-and we agree with the specialists.

The house at your left is undeniably a dated one, but to the remodeling-minded it has much to recommended it. Its mien is on the cheerless side, and its living room, nestled under those eaves, about as airy and light as a cave. But it was well and solidly built, and its metamorphosis involved less expense than you'd think

IT HAS A GOOD NEW SLANT

When Mildred Bates came from Hillsdale, Michigan to Los Angeles and bought the 20-year-old house shown at the top of the page, she knew precisely what she was doing. The pros and cons of the purchase were perfectly clear to her. On the credit side of the ledger were the house's location—the heart of the Wilshire district—the general excellence of the property, and its possibilities for remodeling without extensive structural change. On the debit side were its old-fashioned, squatty appearance, its wide eaves, and the covered porch which made the interior gloomy and dark. For a number of reasons, the pros won out, so she acquired the house and made the practical changes shown here.

Mrs. Bates, a veteran of several remodelings back in Michigan, set about making profit out of loss with as few structural changes as possible. First thing was to remove the porch roof to brighten the living room. This left a sunroomentry on the right, and its roof's pitch was neatly duplicated by the roof of the garage which was added to the left of the house—a convenient spot for it, and one which made the whole structure look very much more imposing.

On garage and entry side both, slender wroughtiron supports, painted white and echoing wroughtiron used elsewhere on the porch, unify the area. The now almost-open porch was turned into a garden-terrace with a perennial planting of low evergreen shade shrubs and flowering plants in tubs and boxes. Short brick columns at either side of the steps were painted white.

A small window, with slatted shutters, was inserted in the garage door to break the flat expanse and make it part of the new façade. Not a single structural change was made in existing windows, but a metal awning was introduced to shield the center bank.

Pink paint worked magic with dingy gray stucco, and a judicious cutting back of old unkempt shrubbery lent new grace to the grounds. Finally, the driveway was repaired and treated with matching pink cement paint.

Imagination, a modicum of daring, and an eye for the basically good made possible this transformation of a nondescript old house into a good-as-new one—and that with minimum recourse to professional help and structural changes.

BETWEEN FLOORS .

Here's an effective treatment when annoying sounds pass from floor to floor: Ceiling of the lower room is suspended by metal hangers from the joists and consists of sound-absorbing acoustical tile over gypsum lath. The floor of the room above has a carpet pad and carpet — both good sound absorbers

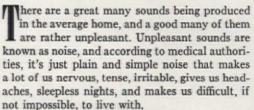

. THROUGH WALLS

An easy way to prevent sound passing through a wall is to fill the cavity with insulation—the kind used to prevent heat loss. An even more effective treatment is to build the wall with two sets of studding so that the wall surfaces are not in direct contact with each other

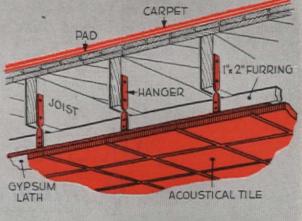

FROM THE OUTSIDE .

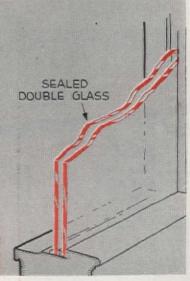

Sounds originating outside the house are more difficult to control than interior ones. Using sealed double glass on windows that face noisy streets will help. So will a dense row of shrubs between the house and the street, as these deflect and absorb the street noises

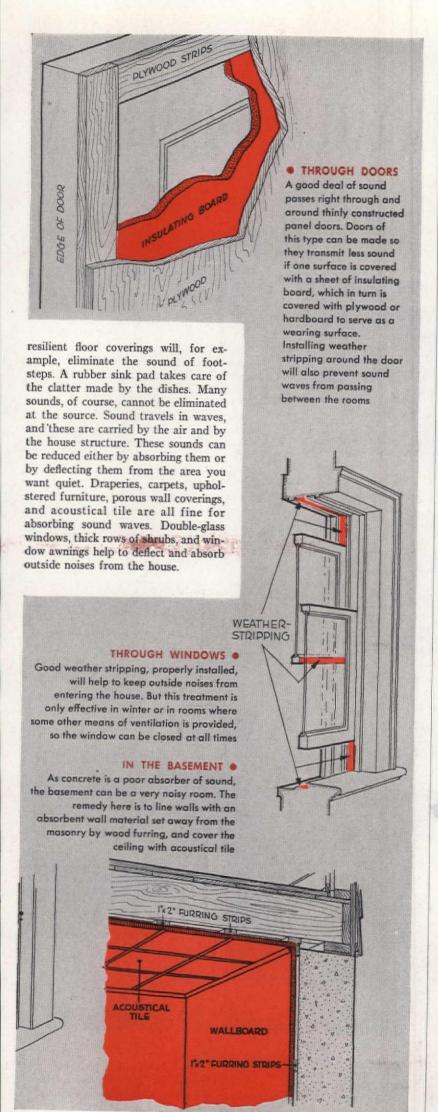

Years ago industry found that if factories and offices were made nice and quiet, the workers would feel better, get more done, and probably ask for a raise. In spite of the raises, the elimination of unnecessary and annoying noises has paid off handsomely for industry, and it will do the same for you in your home.

Many annoying sounds can be eliminated by catching them at the source. Carpets, rugs, and

Wooden shaft, a column of classic design, has rubbed white finish: base is metal: shade is natural-colored fabric over parchment. Ideal in an 18th or early 19th century setting, and equally appropriate with much modern furniture. Light is three-way, indirect. 33 in. high. $35

Sportsmen would be especially proud of this duck-decoy lamp, its base the image of a mallard, hand-carved in wood and hand-colored. But it is a good bit of sculpture, and a wellproportioned lamp for anybody's home. Shade, made of natural burlap, adds to homespun look. 22 in. high. $35

See "Where Credit Is Due" on page 92

Slender and aristocratic lamp of fine china is importantly high for its type, and well proportioned for any small table. Beige china is decorated with brown scrolls, metal base is antique-finished. Handmade shade of roughtextured silk boasts such knowing details as scalloped edge and brown braid trim. 29 in. high. $55

Made of pewter fired on porcelain, this cock-of-the-walk becomes master of a table top. Like the mallard duck above, the realistically modeled rooster is an authentic bit of modern folk art. Shade is off-white fabric laminated to parchment and bound in black. 32 in. high. $53

enry and Josephine Cole are city people who prefer the rustic atmosphere of the country for weekends-so when they saw this old house, whose dated architecture and neglected condition were just crying for modernization, they bought it. The old house certainly wasn't suited to modern ways of living and doing things; there was no plumbing, no heat, no electricity. But the foundations were sound, and the lines of the house were simple and direct-and not too far from what the Coles wanted.

As the Coles thought about this long-range remodeling program, which they were planning to do themselves on weekends. they wrote out their ideas in the order in which each improvement was to be made. Then they made rough drawings so they could see what their remodeled house was really going to look like when it was finished. (Following the old Chinese saying that one picture is worth ten thousand words.) They knew it would be much cheaper and easier to correct their mistakes on paper, than to correct them during the remodeling.

It took some imagination and vision to turn this very sad shack into the good weekend house below. The roof was raised and a small room was added to make the second floor more habitable

OWNERS: MR. & MRS. HENRY COLE

There is nothing dreary about the kitchen now, for the Coles love good food, and endowed their house with the wherewithal to produce it in comfort. Refrigerator and range operate automatically on bottled gas

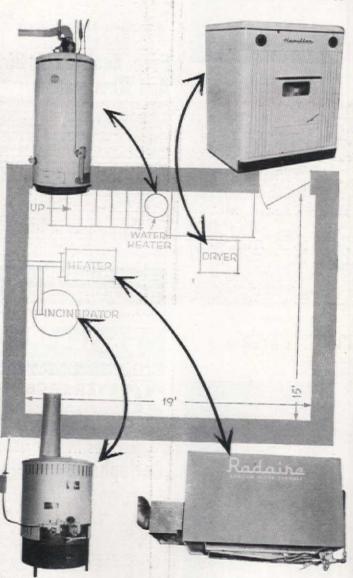

Are Cooking with Gas

Since the house had no fancy trimmings or awkward lines, they kept the remodeled house as simple as the old one. When the roof was raised over the kitchen, they kept the pitch the same as that over the rest of the house. (Roofs that join always look better if they have the same pitch.) This extra room, along with the new roof on the front porch and the addition of the porch on the kitchen, did much to extend the horizontal lines of the house.

But there were other considerations, besides the structural changes, that had to be made. The house had to be wired for electricity, and a fuel chosen to heat the house automatically. When the Coles found out that bottled or tank gas could be stored in a tank, buried in the ground and filled from a mobile tank truck, they knew that they could have real city comforts in their remote country home. Bottled gas also gave them another advantage—all their major appliances could operate on gas, a fact that cuts down on the fuel costs. In some cases, a buried gas tank isn't practical—for those who wish to use bottled gas, and want to store it in cylinders aboveground, we have some suggestions on page 88 for masking those bottles.

So if you are thinking about remodeling a house in the country, you'll find equally good results are possible with many old farm-houses, if you approach it in the Cole fashion.

PLEASE TURN TO PAGE 88

Now there's no coal bin in the Coles' basement, because they're heated with gas, even in a rural area (bottled gas is the answer). Gas is also used by them for drying clothes, heating water, and burning trash

Ways to disguise a bottled gas tank

The Coles found that the use of bottled gas made remodeling, and living in, their weekend house simpler. For weekenders or permanent rural residents, this fuel is a great convenience. But the gas cylinders, while they do handsomely, do not look handsome. The Coles store their gas in a sizable tank, buried in the ground-an excellent way, but sometimes expensive, and in some areas, difficult. If using small cylinders is easier for you, here are some ways to mask them.

· Just a single panel of wooden trellis covered by climbing roses or screened by shrubs does wonders. The plants hide the tank, but may be pulled away when you paint the trellis.

· Two sections of metal lattice or fence almost conceal the tank, and since the metal rarely needs attention, clinging vines can cover it-clematis, Dutchmans-pipe, or trumpet vine.

· If cylinders are in shady spots, screen the fence with shadetolerant shrubs, or use a decorative fence without planting.

· Without a fence or trellis, a screen of carefully trimmed evergreens can do very well, as you see below. For an informal effect, use hemlocks, yew, or arborvitae in their graceful natural shapes. If tank stands against a soil-topped wall, grow ivy there and let it make a "waterfall" screen.

Let's Go Shopping for Phlox

pink or ground phlox (P. subulata) spreads blankets of color over sunny borders, rock gardens, stone walls, etc. As the original shade (often scathingly termed "magenta") has been modified to a more appealing lilac shade and supplemented by white and pink varieties, this excellent, low, hardy ground cover has become more popular. Give it a place in full sun.

Next to appear (in early May) is the graceful, delicate, truly charming P. divaricata, called Blue Phlox and, occasionally, Wild-Sweet William. It bears, on stems a foot or more tall, somewhat looser, more open flower clusters and adapts itself to more shady situations than the foregoing; but it prefers and responds to a better soil than P. subulata needs. Soon after its season ends, there appears the first of the hardy, tall, summerblooming sorts which are what many people have in mind when phlox is mentioned. This outstanding and spectacular group of species and hybrids includes P. suffruticosa (sometimes called carolina) and the even more massive and colorful P. paniculata (or decussata). As with many garden plants, there is some disagreement among authorities as to preferred names.

In the suffruticosa group, one of the older but highly satisfactory and popular varieties is the statuesque, pure white Miss Lingard. In the decussata group—which includes both that species and many hybrids—a long list of named sorts exhibit a remarkable range of clear and combined colors and flower markings.

Because perennial phlox is easy to grow under average garden conditions, is durable, brilliant, and free-flowering, it is often planted and then left to shift for itself. (That it can do so is proved by the way it has survived in, and "escaped" from, many a neglected garden and become semiwild.) But another result is that PLEASE TURN TO PAGE OF

TWO-WAY STRETCH IN THE HOME FOOD GARDEN

he harvest is, of course, the payoff in any vegetable garden. How soon it comes and how long it lasts in your garden will depend largely on the planning you do—your choice of planting dates and of the kinds and varieties of vegetables that are to occupy your garden rows from invigorating early spring until frosty fall closes down on the harvest season. The first spring radish is, in its way, just as welcome as the first robin. So take full advantage of the hardiness and cool-season preferences of many vegetables—and start them early. But don't consider your season's planting finished when those early rows are sown. Follow them in due time with initial plantings of tender kinds that need frost-free nights; and, from time to time, make wisely spaced succession plantings of short-season kinds such as radishes, lettuce, and dwarf beans. Finally, because the characters that make some vegetables (such as cabbage) frost-hardy in spring, also make for heat-resistance, plant some of these hardy kinds again toward midsummer to provide superior quality produce for fall use and winter storage.

Successful application of this two-way stretch—namely spring-sowing and summer-sowing of crops—as demonstrated in the accompanying chart, requires both planning and basic knowledge regarding (a) the relative hardiness of different vegetables; (b) the usual safe growing season for hardy kinds in your locality; (c) the usual safe growing season for tender kinds; (d) the time usually needed by each variety to reach usable maturity; (e) the time that it remains productive.

These are some of the hardy kinds: beets, carrots, cabbage and its relatives, lettuce, onions, peas, radish, spinach,

These are some of the tender vegetables subject to frost injury: beans, sweet corn, cucumber, pepper, pumpkin, squash, tomato. (Plantings of early sweet corn varieties can safely be made a little earlier than can those of the other tender kinds.)

The chart on page 90 applies to those northern regions where garden soils can usually be made ready for seeding early in April, and where freezes damaging to hardy crops may not occur until early in November. In such regions, the soil is usually warm enough by mid-May to encourage seeds of tender kinds to sprout, and transplanted seedlings to start active growth; frost injury to these vegetables may occur late in September or early in October. Since the last and first frost dates vary widely in different regions and from season to season, it is well to consult the nearest weather bureau station, or weatherwise veteran gardeners in your neighborhood, regarding safe planting dates.

As to midsummer planting, here are some tips: In any garden, but particularly in small ones, summer-sown succession crops can take over rows vacated by early crops. Thus, a late planting of bush beans can follow early radishes; spinach can replace early lettuce; and late cabbage, early spinach. . . . Sow seeds a little thicker and a trifle deeper than in spring. . . . If planting time comes during a dry spell, it may prove worthwhile to run some water into each furrow as you open it and sow the seeds on the moistened earth. . . . Water newly sown rows thoroughly now and then during dry spells until the seedlings appear. . . . For better results with summer-sown lettuce, wait until a coolish evening to plant; for, while a 65° to 75° temperature may induce prompt germination, 80° heat may cause prolonged dormancy.

gardeners often complain that their carefully chosen named varieties have reverted to an unsatisfactory pink or cerise color after a few years. This is not true. What has happened in such cases is that vigorous plants from selfsown seed have grown up undisturbed and crowded out the more highly bred, less pugnacious, improved selections. So don't let your choice named sorts mature seed.

Once established, phlox can be a fixture for years. But usually it is advisable to lift and divide clumps every four or five years. To do this, in spring, if most convenient, or better in September, dig up the clump, cut and pull it apart, discard the oldest, woody portions, and reset the best of the younger small divisions. Depending on the size of the variety, these new plants should each be allowed two to three sq. ft. of uncontested space; the ground between can be covered with shallow-rooted, quick-growing, annual ground-cover plants. Plants of annual phlox, grown from seed or perhaps from rooted cuttings, can go closer together.

Variety selections, whether of annual or perennial phlox, must be based on personal preferences, the general color scheme of the garden, and any special combinations involved; also the extent to which you feel you must have the latest things. For new varieties are constantly being offered, some of which-though not all-will probably take the place of some of the old standbys. Once you get what you want, you can multiply your stock of perennial kinds by rooting cuttings during the first half of the growing season, or, in the case of P. subulata and other creeping kinds, by "layering." That means watching for joints or nodes of the creeping stems to touch the soil and take root, after which they can be cut free and handled as separate new plants; or the development of such increase can be induced by "pegging down" one or more stems and covering the joints with soil.

Except for the mildew already mentioned, and occasionally leaf-eating beetles or bugs, phlox has few enemies.

them on at 9 P.M. when the temperature reached 37°, on the premise that the relatively warm water (65°) would raise the air temperature sufficiently to protect the flowers.

Actually, by early morning the temperature dropped to 24° over most of the area, and to 21° in the lower portions. The entire dahlia garden, where an effort was made to protect the plants with heaters (called salamanders), was frozen black. No one was prepared for the picture it presented-or, for that matter, for the picture presented by the long walk in the annual garden where the sprinkling was done. There, the rising sun disclosed a fairyland. Trees, hedge, and flowers were all encased in more than half an inch of ice. Yet all retained their original colors, from the deep green of the arborvitae to the pastel shades of the zinnias and dahlias. The iridescence caused by the sun shining through the ice made the garden seem cast in crystal.

The day was clear and cool and, as the temperature rose slowly, the ice gradually melted and fell from the plants. In shaded areas, some of it was still in evidence on the ground 48 hours later. But after the plants were free of the ice, neither foliage nor bloom showed any ill effects. Even the petals of the delicate cactus dahlias remained in perfect arrangement. Only the tall late cosmos stalks, which could not support the weight of the ice-sheathed flower clusters when lower sections melted, broke down. The bedding-type flowers, when released from their coating of ice, returned to their original positions, and all that received the ice bath continued to produce beautiful blooms for two weeks until the eventual hard freeze cut them down. When heavy frost threatened the second night, portions of the garden were again sprayed with the same results as before. One interesting result was that the dahlias ice-encased during the frost period went on growing and produced larger, firmer tubers than those in the unsprayed dahlia garden. [Note: The experience reported by Mr. Conrad is especially interesting and encouraging in contrast to a portion of a bulletin, Frost and the Prevention of Frost Damage, published by the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture in 1929, 1940, and 1947 and now issued by the Weather Bureau. It says, "Spraying of trees with water to afford protection from frost has been proved impracticable," because of branch breakage by the ice load; also, "Spraying of low-growing plants may be effective if the temperature does not fall too low," and if spraying is continued as long as the temperature stays below the danger point. Well, we'd say try it anyway. Ed.]

Are You Covered?

$6,000 policy, up to $50 a month. In many states, if your home catches fire after you have been away for more than six months (the house being unoccupied during this time), your insurance may be voided, and you may not be covered unless the policy is endorsed to permit extended unoccupancy. The same rule applies if the furniture has been moved out of your house for an extended period.

Fires do not limit their destruction to the dwelling itself. They also take a toll on its contents, such as clothes, furniture, appliances, and so on. Insurance companies say that most people tend to under-insure the furnishings in their home. Clothes and furniture depreciate to varying degrees. This depreciation is reflected in the adjustment of the loss.

Making an inventory of all your home furnishings can save you money if you have a serious fire. Most people forget insured property when they try to list what has been destroyed by fire. They do not forget about the piano or the refrigerator, but they do overlook many smaller items. Inventory booklets are available from your agent or broker.

But the policy may not cover everything that happens to be in your home. Suppose fire destroys your home and burns up $150 in cash, 25 shares of stock, some expensive jewelry, and some promissory notes. Fire insurance will not cover you for these losses! You need other insurance to protect this property.

Frequently you can recover for losses which occur outside the home. Many fire insurance coverages will pay up to 10 per cent of face value for losses to covered property away from home, normally not above $1,000.

Suppose, for example, you flee a hotel fire, leaving $400 worth of clothes which are destroyed. If you have $4.000 or more insurance on your furnishings, you can recover full value (after adjustment for depreciation) of your clothes. And, of course, if you have "extended coverage" you may be protected from loss from other causes than fire-like the hat that gets blown away.

Standard fire insurance policies vary from state to state. A talk with a reputable local agent or broker will help answer any questions you have about your policy. It is important that you consult him whenever you have any loss or uncertain insurance problem of any kind.
