cordial welcome in a small hall

Even a little entrance hall can go a long way toward making your home more gracious and your guests more welcome. This one, for example, looks much more spacious than it really is because of the big wall mirror and the specially designed floor of luxurious Armstrong Custom Corlon Tile. A hall like this gives a cordial welcome in all kinds of weather, too, for tracked-in dirt or water can't harm this modern vinyl plastic floor. Footprints wipe away in a jiffy without leaving a trace. Years of coming in and going out won't fade the gleaming beauty of Custom Corlon Tile, for the rich colors go all the way through. There's a score of colors to choose from, colors that are perfect for today's new decorating trends, colors for all through your home. So beautiful, so practical, so utterly luxurious, Armstrong Custom Corlon Tile is the modern fashion in plastic floors.

Free portfolio describes this small but impressive entrance hall and adjoining powder room. Sketch plan and list of furnishings included. Just write Armstrong Cork Company, 5602 Plum Street, Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

This new ceiling quiets noise, won't crack

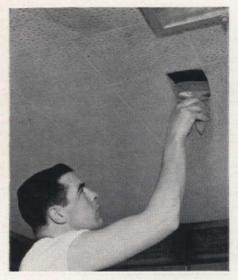

Decorative new ceiling material is a permanent solution to cracked plaster. You can put up a 10' x 12' ceiling yourself for under $25.

Repair and redecorate cracked ceilings at the same time, with a modern sound-absorbing ceiling of Cushiontone. Its Full Random styling adds new beauty to any interior. Cushiontone won't crack or peel. Unlike ordinary ceilings, it eliminates messy repair jobs. The handy $12'' \times 12''$ and $12'' \times 24''$ tiles can be installed over your present ceiling by stapling, nailing, or cementing.

Youngsters seem quiet when your home has a sound-absorbing ceiling of Armstrong Cushiontone which softens the sounds of children at play. You'll enjoy a more relaxed atmosphere, and quiet is an inexpensive luxury you can really afford. With Armstrong Cushiontone, you can quiet a ten by twelve kitchen ceiling like this yourself for about $25.

Easy to maintain, a Cushiontone ceiling requires no more care than painted plaster. It can be repainted — in any color — as often as you like without losing its sound-absorbing efficiency. And Cushiontone's smooth, white surface can be cleaned with a damp cloth, too.

Send for free booklet, "How to Make Things Quieter at Your House." Write Armstrong Cork Company, 5602 Clark Street, Lancaster, Penna.

DECORATING HER INTO DELINQUENCY?

"Don't Decorate Your Kids into Delinquency" was extremely interesting. I agree 100%. I am sixteen, which is why I agree. Dad fixed up our basement and I really liked it. My friends brought their parents over to see it. Now they have nice amusement rooms and I don't.

Mom and Dad took over within a few short months, set up a small business in it. Now they wonder why I don't stay home as much as I used HUSBANDS TO SUPPER?

After two wars, any wife should be glad to stand in the doorway of her undisturbed home, smell new-mown grass, see her husband working on their grounds, fix the steak while he is washing up, and not crab about ten minutes. And there are many ways to make the dinner hour interestinglike setting bread at noon to bake at five. The delicious fragrance does much more than words.

ur E. L. D. "Ned" Seymour has tended gardens for AMERICAN HOME readers for 19 years. He is only the second garden editor we have had in our almost 24 years. When, instead of following the path of the many great actors in his family, he chose the horticultural road which led to the AMERICAN HOME, the theater lost a top prospect. Are we glad! Ned, a popular lecturer, has edited many horticultural books and is up to his eyebrows in garden organizations. At the age when most of us think of retiring. Ned continues at top speed. He is retiring from magazine editing. but won't abandon garden work. We thank you, editor emeritus.

MEET YOUR GARDEN EDITORS

There's splendid tradition, too, in the background of our new garden editor, Theodore A. Weston. Ted's father was the late Thomas A. Weston, a famous horticulturist who inspired his son to love garden writing as well as work in the garden. The best editor is the one who writes about what he actually does himself, and we suspect that Ted's enthusiasm on the subject stems from the lovely garden that he and Mrs. Weston inherited and have cared for these many years. So we welcome you, Ted, to the AMERICAN HOME. We know you look forward to helping our readers to all the pleasures that finer gardening can bring them.

arge and Ken Dawson had agreed to get 12-year-old Butch a pup for Christmas. But only on condition that he take care of it himself.

In hoping that Butch would actually assume the chores presented by a new canine youngster in the household, the Dawsons were taking a chance-and they knew it. After all, a 12 year old with a bicycle, basketball, and a bundle of youthful imagination was bound to have a dozen things that needed doing. Not only that, but Butch was big for his age, and fast-growing boys are apt to be physically lazy between spurts of chasing rainbows.

"It won't last long," said Marge, when Butch and his dog were finally asleep that first night. "Let's take advantage of it until it wears off.'

Ken was quiet-thoughtful. "What seems important to me." he finally said, "is that we can't expect him to do this job right unless he knows how. But if he does know how to go about the job intelligently and has a reasonable amount of success, maybe he'll enjoy what he's doing and follow through."

"That means," said Marge, duly concerned, "that we'd better learn the answers ourselves and then make sure Butch gets the know-how without feeling he's getting pushed into it."

The Dawsons had bought Butch a four-month-old pup. The breeder had told them that pups could leave their mother at three months, but that at such a tender age they must be fed six times a day. At four months, though, a morning, noon, and night feeding are sufficient. With a four-month-old pup, the Dawsons decided, Butch could take the entire responsibility himself. Then, too, they'd been assured by dog-owning friends that by four months of age a pup would have had all his inoculations and would more likely than not be wormed and worm free, too.

The breeder furnished a printed sheet of instructions. It described the feeding at various ages and prescribed for Gremlinthe name that Butch had been saving for his first dog-a cereal and milk breakfast. And for lunch and supper he'd have meal or kibble soaked in vegetable or meat juices, and mixed with carefully screened table scraps or some meat-frozen, canned, or refrigerated.

The first day had been pretty much a co-operative effort. But Marge and Ken decided that a few logical rules and regulations would be best for all concerned.

Next morning they had a family conference and it was agreed that certain dishes would be Gremlin's-one for water, which should be available to him at all times, and another for food. A corner was chosen for his water dish, and his food dish was to be put down beside it at meal times.

THE HOUSE ... designed by Architect Giorgio Cavaglieri, A. I. A.

THE FINE WOODS ... preserved and protected by Johnson's Paste Wax.

Oak strip flooring adds charm to any home—and it's so easy to care for with Johnson's Paste Wax. It brings out the richness of the wood . . . keeps floors beautifully shining for months at a time, despite normal household traffic. Like a thin plate of armor, Johnson's Paste Wax gives floors long-lasting protection . . . and you'll find it is easy to spread. Always ask for the original Johnson's Paste Wax—for over half a century the best friend a floor ever had.

Blond birch wall panels are a keynote of modern elegance in this house. Polishing with Johnson's Paste Wax keeps them lovely to look at, while helping to preserve and protect the beauty of the wood. The wax takes the wear! Note how one thin coat of Johnson's Paste Wax (at right, above) acts as a tough, transparent shield—guarding precious surfaces against harmful dirt particles, scuffs, scratches and moisture.

1000 and 1 uses: All through the house, Johnson's Paste Wax imparts a lustrous, oil-free and dust-resistant surface to furniture, woodwork, linoleum, cork and vinyl plastic floors. It's best, too, for antiques, sports equipment, metal surfaces and marble table tops. Economical, there's nothing to spill... no waste. The cost? Mere pennies per waxing.

SEND TODAY FOR ARCHITECT'S SKETCH PLANS of this distinctive, duo-level, "idea" house.

Plans include interior views, floor diagrams and sketches of all elevations. You'll also receive a full-color booklet of tips on decorating and caring for floors. Just mail the paper insert (found inside every can of Johnson's Paste Wax) with your name and address and 50¢ in coin to: Johnson's Wax, Dept. A2-6, Racine, Wisconsin.

Heard what happened to the price of this one?

This is, as you can see, a spanking-new Buick Estate Wagon—a trim and tidy traveler with an all-steel body, which moderns definitely prefer.

It is powered with Buick's mighty 322-cubic-inch V8 engine — hitting a record-high compression of 8.9 to 1 in the small-car-priced Special, and 9.5 to 1 in the high-performance Century.

It offers the newest version of Buick's exclusive Variable Pitch Dynaflow Drive* and all the other basic features that make these '56 beauties the best Buicks yet.

It rides six with all the comfort of a limousine — and still provides ample and accessible luggage space in back.

But, at your option, you can get a doubleduty rear seat here, and do some extra-handy tricks, as the occasion requires.

You can fold down the seat-back, and have a covered platform 43.1 inches wide and 83 inches long with the tail gate closed—or you can fold either of the two sections, and have room for both rear-seat passengers and "freight."

Now a vehicle so versatile obviously deserves to occupy an important place in the fast-growing market for work-and-playwagons of this sort.

That's why you find that the 1956 Buick Estate Wagon carries a new low price — a price so substantially lowered, it puts this Buick smack on the heels of similar models of the well-known smaller cars.

Better check in with your Buick dealer right quick—this week, for sure—because the news is much too good to miss.

Who'll Bring Up the Dog?

most of the suggesting, and guided the discussion to logical ends. They insisted on only one thing that Butch figured wasn't necessary for Gremlin's welfare—a budget sheet on which every expenditure could be entered. This, they thought, would be good experience, and they planned to carry it further by establishing a weekly upkeep cost, adding it to Butch's weekly allowance, and letting Butch handle his finances so as to keep Gremlin's food supply in good shape. Butch would virtually become Gremlin's sole provider. The boy would learn the value of a dollar and become price and value conscious.

It was agreed that food would be purchased in quantity in order to have a supply on hand, and stored in a covered water-proof, vermin-proof can. Canned milk could be used and a few cans could be on hand should fresh milk run low.

Gremlin was a sheltie, a little collie-like dog with a carriage and manner as proud as his sheep-herding ancestry. Ken and Marge learned from "doggy" friends that for almost every breed there are one or more books that describe breed standards, outline breed history, and, what is more important, include many valuable facts about the special care of the particular breed. They lost no time in buying such a book for Butch.

The book recommended the proper collar and lead, and the most effective type of brush and comb. The Dawsons bought these things for Butch as he read about them and explained their need convincingly. The reward was more than ample when Butch used them conscientiously and took pride in the results.

But there were problems. Housebreaking seemed an insurmountable task. Neither Marge nor Ken had ever housebroken a dog. Butch solved the problem by spending the major part of one of his precious vacation afternoons with the breeder. He came home bubbling over with information he'd absorbed in the same quick way that boys learn airplane identification and automobile makes and models.

"Puppies at different ages require different ways of training," Butch began. "If your puppy is under three months old, it's better to break him to papers first and to outdoors later, because a dog that young can't go through the night without relief. If a puppy is trained to paper, it won't soil the floor at night."

Then Butch went on to explain that puppies at the kennel are kept on paper and are already using it.

"When a three-month-old pup is brought home," Butch said, "the owners should use a couple of window screens or boards to keep him in a small section of a room, perhaps just a corner. He should have room enough for a soft, warm bed in one corner, a space to play and a place for newspapers, and be kept in his own space."

Then Butch told them the breeder had said that the paper space may start large and gradually be reduced to the size of a single opened-up newspaper. And that after two or three weeks of successful use of the papers, the puppy can be given more freedom—not too much. And he can have more and more freedom just so long as he continues to return to the paper.

How We Retired in 15 Years with $300 a Month

"The day Nancy and I hit Arizona, we knew it was for us. The air itself felt alive, and the sunshine—well, it was wonderful. We bought a new ranch house that cost less than the price we got for our city home—and is lots less work. Every single morning I've waked up since, I've been thankful for the monthly check of $300 that makes it all possible.

"Somehow, in my forties it was hard to believe I'd want to slow up someday. Fact is, Nancy was the smart one. One day she came to me—back in 1940, it was—and took out the bank book. 'We've got to do something,' she said. 'Anyone who works as hard as you do ought to be able to plan to retire someday. We just aren't savers.'

"I knew that. 'Want to start a business of our own?' I asked.

"Nancy shook her head. 'You know we haven't enough money for that—experience, either. How much would we have to save up to retire on bank interest?"

"Well, interest rates were higher in '40, but I figured almost a hundred thousand. It was out of the question. And I shrugged it off.

"But not Nancy. A few weeks later she came to me with a little book called 'Phoenix Mutual Retirement Plans.' She said she'd read an ad about a new way to retire. It was for anybody of average means who had fifteen or twenty good earning years ahead. The ad offered more information, and she sent in the coupon.

"It was Nancy's little book that changed my mind. Here was a way I could retire—and in 15 years, if I wanted to. There was no secret, except to start soon enough. And I did. Well, my Phoenix Plan was a greater joy as time went by.

"My first check for $300 came last spring. With it, Nancy and I were off to the West. I feel ten years younger since I got here. I say it's the Arizona air. But Nancy winks and says it's being my own boss. Anyway, I wouldn't change places with our company president."

One of the nicest things about telephone service is "The Voice With a Smile." It runs all through the business.

Millions of times a day the operators send it singing over the wires. You hear it when you visit the Business Office or telephone the service representative.

The installer brings it to your home when he comes to put in telephones. The lineman has it as he works along the road or gives you the right of way at a busy intersection.

In talking about telephone people and the way they go about their work, we'd like to say a good word for you, too.

For it's your friendliness that helps us do the kind of job you want us to do. And that means better service all along the line.

'56 IS THE YEAR TO FIX!

In January, on behalf of President Eisenhower, Administrator Albert M. Cole of the Housing and Home Finance Agency proclaimed 1956 as Home Improvement Year. The entire building industry—manufacturers, service and installation industries, and financing institutions have organized Operation Home Improvement with the slogan, '56—the Year to FIX.

Spearheaded by your local Chamber of Commerce, Operation Home Improvement will make it easier for you as a home owner to make the necessary repairs and improvements to your dwelling by encouraging dealers, lenders, contractors, architects, and retailers to team up and work together.

You'll see a lot of the seal we show above — reminding you that '56 is the year to fix!

-THE EDITORS

Does your home, your neighborhood look run-down?

It's easier than ever now to make repairs

he cash value of the homes in America is around $250 billion. This, of course, is far from their true value. The true value of our homes cannot be measured in dollars, for they are the very essence of our way of life—the solid foundation of our social and political structures. Each time a home is lost to America, all America suffers. We pride ourselves on the number and the quality of our homes, but the unhappy fact is that one out of every 10 American homes is a slum dwelling. Four out of every 10 homes need repair and improvement; the rest require maintenance.

Since the end of World War II we have spent the major part of our effort in building new homes rather than caring for our existing structures. This is a great failing of ours. We have done it with our forests and with our land and with other national resources. The time has come when we must stop doing it with our homes. We can no longer afford to let one home that is worth saving slip down and become a slum house. Once an area becomes a slum it's hard to bring it back. But we can stop homes from becoming slum dwellings if we act in time.

Below, we show "before" and "after" pictures of a house in Tulsa, Oklahoma that was saved by the efforts of a group of women realtors. The house they selected for their rehabilitation project is typical of those found in any town in the country—too old, too ugly, and lacking in modern utilities and equipment. It was also too big to attract any family in its right mind. In that condition it wasn't far from being a slum.

The Women's Council of the Tulsa Real Estate Board bought the house for $8.938.97. The basic structure was sound, so the exterior was only given a face lifting by removing the massive porches and adding a coat of paint. The interior was divided into two complete, separate apartments. New wiring was added along with plumbing, new fixtures, and modern work-saving appliances. The cost of the entire project including the original house was around $16,000—not bad at all for a home with an income-producing apartment.

Remodeling Improves

HUBBARD H. COBB

In seeking a home of your own or an investment property, don't overlook the hot potential offered by sub-standard housing

• "FOR SALE: Forty-odd-year-old house with four railroad apartments. No central heating, no indoor plumbing, inadequate wiring, no foundations. Excellent location on Telegraph Hill. Nice view. Income from apartments $66 per month. A steal at $15,000."

Now this isn't the sort of advertisement to quicken the heart beat of the average investor. But when John Campbell, a San Francisco designer, ran across this sub-standard structure, it seemed to be just what he was looking for. He was in the market for a good remodeling project and one that would bring in an income. This place had possibilities.

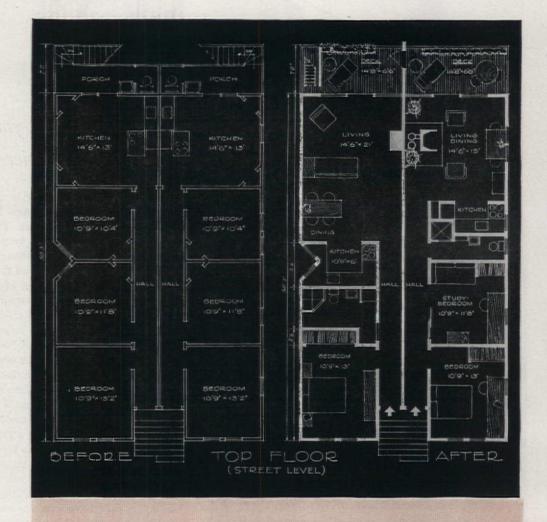

After inspecting the property, Mr. Campbell found that there were a couple of points on the credit side of the ledger. First, in spite of no adequate foundations, the basic house structure was sound. It contained a whale of a lot of floor space, and it was in a neighborhood—Telegraph Hill, San Francisco—that was once again becoming fashionable. The back of the house overlooked the city of San Francisco and the Bay—a truly worthwhile view.

So John Campbell bought the property for $15,000 and went to work as his own contractor. This building's purchase price is just about what a similar-sized lot alone would normally cost in this particular location. Foundations were put in along with central heating, baths, all new wiring, insulation, and fire escapes. The inside plumbing and heating took a big chunk of money—almost half of the $15,000 that it took to make over the units.

The original plan had four small apartments. The new layout has two small apartments and a large one. And there's enough space left over in the basement for a fourth unit—which is still to come.

In all, a dozen walls were moved forward or backward. The rear decks were entirely rebuilt, and changes were made in the rear windows to take better advantage of the view. The existing redwood paneling on the walls was taken down and run through a planing machine and then put back on the walls, but with an entirely different effect. Mr. Campbell also found happily that the entire building, inside and out, was of top-quality redwood.

MORE STORY AND PICTURES ON PAGES 102, 103

The "before" and "after" plans show how four old railroad flats were turned into three attractive apartments. Two units on street level (top floor) were remodeled into two small apartments. Entrance to these two apartments is at the street level. Above, you see it as it appeared before residing with cedar shingles. Middle floor, which is below street level, also started off as two small units, but was remodeled into one large apartment. In the process of remodeling building, a dozen walls were moved either forward or backward.

Before John Campbell took over, back of building (above, center) was a real stairmaker's nightmare. Middle floor was cluttered with stairs as well as two outside baths. New stairs are to the side of the deck; new baths, indoors. Remodeled house (above) minus enclosure on top deck. View is great.

Entrance (below) is for large single apartment on the middle floor. You reach it by walking through the patio and attractive entryway. Cedar shingles of entryway were put on over old clapboard siding.

TINA SATTERTHWAITE

Davys' Well-Spent $650 Buys

The Edwin K. Davys of Toledo, Ohio, wanted a custom-built modern house overlooking the Maumee River. But, with every step in that direction, the cost skyrocketed. So they built a partially prefabricated house on a city lot they owned. Then Mr. Davy, being an interior decorator by profession, proceeded to show that good taste and originality have no price tags. But that is a story in itself, and this one is about the garden.

Patio, fences, plants, and landscaping cost only $650 of the total $13,750 price of the house, furnishings, and setting. What the Davys got is a back yard with comfort, privacy, and convenience. In fact, it about doubles their space for entertaining, and includes an outdoor barbecue.

The brick-paved patio, sheltered by the garage wall and an eight-foot louvered fence with a "picture window" in one section, is two steps above a walk from the back door. From the patio, two more steps reach the garden area paved with crushed gravel, enclosed by a sapling fence, and brightened by wide borders of shrubs and perennials and an angled bed of petunias in the far corner.

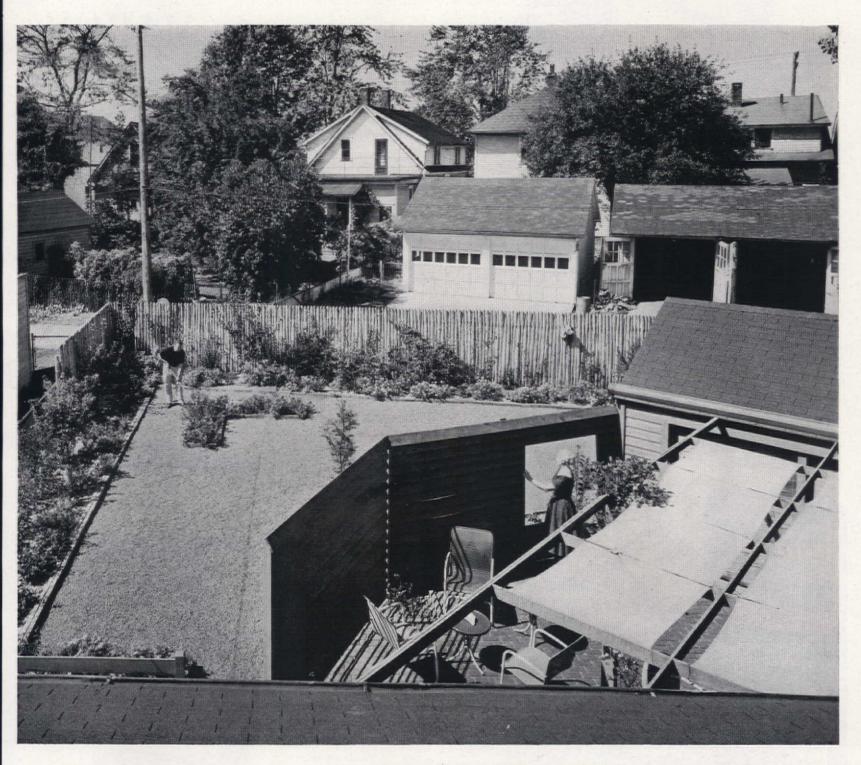

While the garden is but 15 feet wide where you enter through a gate in a low rail fence, the pie shape of the lot gives the garden a width of 100 feet at the rear. A service area behind the garage is shut off by paling fence.

Right now the patio is shaded by strips of burlap nailed to the overhead beams, out wisterias planted at the posts will in time replace them. The garage wall along one side of the patio has been hung with green split bamboo blinds. The neutral color scheme of the patio blends with the soft brown of house and garage. And porch furniture in green, yellow, orange, red, and blue provides cheerful contrast and accent. Best of all, this increased living space requires a minimum of upkeep.

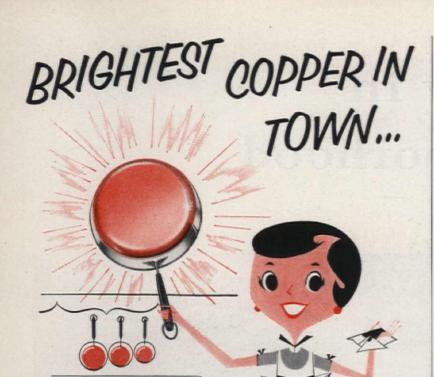

Absolute Privacy in Crowded Neighborhood

Above, you see patio with its burlap awnings, and louvered fence with picture window that looks out onto the gravel-paved and flowered-bordered garden area enclosed by a sapling fence. Right, looking directly toward garage, patio, house, and garden gate. Far right, patio where former garage wall (now hung with bamboo blinds) forms one side. Note picture window view and informal, old-brick floor. What the Davys have done, you can do to your home.

"But I need the car today!"

s there more than one driver in your family? If so, you often undoubtedly find yourself in this fix: the car is urgently needed in two places at the same time.

Earla and Hal Gwillim had exactly this problem. Until a year ago, they'd lived in Huntington Woods, Michigan, just north of Detroit. Transportation facilities were nearby. Then they moved to a brand new house in Birmingham, Michigan, where they were definitely in the country. Now the Gwillims were distant from stores, doctors' offices, friends, schools-and far from easy ways to get to them.

Those distances posed no problems for a time. When the Gwillims moved, Hal Gwillim was a district commercial superintendent for Michigan Bell Telephone Company, and a company car was furnished for his duties. So Mrs. Gwillim had the family car. But last May her husband was transferred to a post that didn't provide a car.

Almost immediately the Gwillims ran into the problem of needing the car in two places at once. The Charing Cross suburban train station was nearby, and many mornings Hal could go in on the train. But if he needed the car in town, his wife was left all but isolated. And there was a new baby in the house, twomonth-old Chip.

Several weeks of this convinced the couple that they had no choice but to buy a second car. Like 'most any other couple in their thirties, they figured a second car was somewhat of a financial problem. They had just built their country house—a pleasant, four-bedroom ranch home in the center of an acre of ground. There were new carpets and drapery materials to buy, and new furniture.

Like many of their friends, the Gwillims chose a secondhand car for the added automobile of the household. The older car is largely used by husband Hal. A good share of the time he simply drives it to the suburban train station, parks it there, and gets back into it when he commutes home at the end of the day. On the other days, he drives it into Detroit proper. When he needs to do some longer driving, he takes the number-one car, and the second automobile is used for his wife's errands.

Eight-year-old Jimmy, five-year-old Tommy, and four-year-old Julie are the other children in the Gwillim family. As every mother knows, four children are constantly posing problems of mobility. There are doctor visits to be made, trips back and forth between school and home every day, after-school activities that upset the schedule, too. Beyond that, there are problems of maintaining a house in the country that necessitate easy movement.

Then, too, Mrs. Gwillim is like any other normal American housewife. She has a bridge club and other personal interests that draw on her time during the day. That second car provided a means of meeting those obligations as nothing else could.

Since the second car was purchased last July, the Gwillims, just as a matter of interest, have been keeping track of the mileage covered by Mrs. Gwillim. She has been driving close to 1,000 miles a month-far more than either ever anticipated. Those miles probably represent $30 to $40 in actual expense, plus car CONTINUED ON PAGE 39 depreciation—which isn't so much.

But at least a small share of this sum was being spent in the days when Earla Gwillim didn't have a car. Birmingham proper is about three miles from the Gwillim home, and cabfare is one dollar each way. So trips to town were expensive. In any event, the basic cost of operating a second car, the Gwillims feel, is richly repaid by its convenience.

Consider a recent day this past fall. First Mrs. Gwillim drove Jimmy and Tommy to the school bus. It passes near enough to be visible from the windows, but far enough to be somewhat of a task for five-year-old feet, let alone any motherly worries that might accrue from watching young children walk along a roadway.

"Abraham Lincoln. . . . His heart was as great as the world, but there was no room in it to hold the memory of a wrong." —RALPH WALDO EMERSON

With the children put on the bus, Mrs. Gwillim drove over to Woodward Avenue, main north-south artery of the Detroit metropolitan area, on a short errand. Then she made a quick about-face on the mileand-a-half trip back to the house.

It started to snow soon after, and Mrs. Gwillim scooted out to the car and drove into the center of Birmingham, three miles away, for shopping; that day, as it happened, the family's occasional helper for heavy cleaning was in the home to keep an eye on Julie and infant Chip.

The car then sat idle till it was time to pick up the youngsters at the school bus. Then came another swing into Birmingham for some shopping that had been overlooked in the morning. Total travel: about 20 miles—and the car was not used nearly as much as it often is.

One other day, for example, there were four medical appointments, one of them with the pediatrician in Huntington Woods, 10 miles away, one for a Salk vaccine shot, another with the family doctor in Birmingham, and a fourth with the dentist. It was impossible to group them, and the home car was in motion much of the day. And that recalls the time Jimmy showed some suspicious symptoms. His mother had him in town in a hurry for a diagnosis that said "mumps" before she could have even gotten a cab under other circumstances.

There were other days, also, after the fourth baby came, when the health of the infant compelled twicea-week trips to the pediatrician. Total cab fares during that time alone would have added up to more than the monthly cost of running the car.

Mrs. Gwillim is finding the car particularly helpful in settling down in her new suburban home. Like every new householder, she has found a complex variety of little things constantly needed. The availability of a car makes it not only easy to get those requirements, but also to check qualities and values in a number of stores whenever purchases are large enough to merit comparison, rather than having to confine her purchasing to one compact shopping area.

The car enables her to lead a more pleasant social life, too. Had she not a car of her own, she would have had to resign from the bridge club meeting afternoons, else depend on others for lifts that would have been out of their way. And she likes to visit with old friends in Huntington Woods, too, and on days when a baby-sitter is available, she's apt to renew friend-ships which otherwise might languish.

This year, Jimmy is joining the Cub Scouts, and Mrs. Gwillim expects that she may undertake Den Mother duties. She is being drafted for Parent-Teacher Association work in the Pembroke School of the Birmingham School District—another activity that makes ready transportation nearly a necessity.

"I think one should do things like that," smiles attractive Mrs. Gwillim. "We should all do our part in our community. A car helps me do my share."

Her husband adds a hearty amen to that. "When I look back on those few months with only one car," he muses, "I don't see how we got along. It's a cinch we'd never try it again. We couldn't afford to." THE END

"YOUR CHILD'S GOT REAL TALENT!"

ARTHUR H. WALLACE

There's a natural tendency to dream of glory when the music teacher says, "Your child's got real talent! He can really go places if you spare no effort to help him develop his gift." Maybe you think about the musicians who recently appeared on a television program, played or sang a number or two, and for the few minutes' work got fat checks in the next day's mail. One of the musicians was only 35 years old; in the last ten years he has earned more than a million dollars from playing the violin. And his big earning days are just beginning.

Nice work for a young fellow. Perhaps it could happen to your son or daughter, if the music teacher has judged correctly.

But even if the teacher has appraised your child's talent shrewdly, you'd do well to think twice before preparing him for a professional musical career. For every musician who strikes pay dirt, there are many thousands who turn short-order cooks or soda jerkers to eke out a living between engagements. Obviously a lot of people give in to the temptation to try music as a career instead of just as a pastime.

Making music as a pastime should be encouraged among all children who show any facility for playing a musical instrument or for singing. Such music is one of the happiest ways to spend leisure time, and millions of people know this in many lands. They gather 'round in the living room with family and friends to sing. They form town or neighborhood bands. They play in school*orchestras or join local glee clubs. They sing at church, and some even spend a couple of evenings a week in amateur symphony or chamber music groups. And others toss off a riff or two in an informal basement jam session.

This is all to the good and points up the joy of living with music. And it's tempting to try the step from this easy way of having fun to music as a permanent occupation. Actually, though, the decision to follow music as a profession shouldn't be made until after some cold and hard-boiled facts have been carefully digested.

Altogether, more than 31 million youngsters in grade schools, high schools, and our nation's colleges are now playing some musical instrument. Not all of them—not even the majority—aspire to professional careers. But a large number of them certainly do.

Statistics can be an awful bore, but a recent six-month survey made by the Research Company of America for the American Federation of Musicians turned up some startling information. Of the more than 252,500 qualified professional musicians in this country, only 53,000—about 20 per cent—work full time. And their average weekly pay around the year is about $48.

How do the others get along? About 16,000 teach. Several thousand get most of their living from music but double up on non-musical jobs. Many more depend chiefly on jobs outside the musical profession and pick up an occasional dollar from music here and there.

"Mr. Bing, God Bless Him!"

JEAN AUSTIN

ay up north in the land of Idaho's lovely subalpine lakes and noble stands of pine, Mr. Crosby has built his newest and favorite retreat—a simple log vacation house to which he and his sons retreat after a hard summer's ranching in Nevada. The long, low, silvery log house sets comfortably on a bluff overlooking Hayden Lake—just over the state line of his native Washington. This is Bing's own country, for it was to Tacoma his mother came when still a young girl, later changed her name from Kate Harrigan to Mrs. Harry Crosby and moved to the lusty mining and logging town of Spokane when her son Harry (later Bingo and since Bing) was two years old. Here in Spokane, a few miles from his Hayden Lake home, Bing grew up, played ball, out-boxed a classmate who called his sister tubby (she was), worked as a janitor and on a farm, did K.P. in a logging camp, was poor at singing and good in elocution, spent time in The Jug—a penance room—at Gonzaga University, his alma mater.

Knowing this about Bing's childhood, when he told me this was his favorite of all his houses, I knew why. It is more than comfortable, casual living in a beautiful setting, this house nearby his boyhood home. Designed for Bing by Harold Grieve, who had done six houses for him previously, it is a perfect vacation house. It puts on no "front" and is deceivingly simple in appearance, both in its architecture and its furnishings. But let's take a tour of Bing's house—as I saw it and CONTINUED ON THE NEXT PAGE

A Special Story for American Home readers through the friendly co-operation of Harold Grieve, A.I.D., Designer and Decorator of Mr. Crosby's Hayden Lake Home

Home for lunch between golf matches, Bing checks on the story's progress with decorator Hal Grieve and Mrs. A.

Long, low lines of Across sheet of cobalt blue by immensity of sky as you see it on these pages.

You swoop down a big hill—a very big hill indeed—and there, at your right, through the trees, is what seems a very little log house—Bing's house! At the turn of his driveway is the only unhappy thing about the place—a big sign, telling you this is private, it is a home, and asking you, very politely, to call Mr. Crosby's business associates for whatever business you might have used as a brash excuse for barging in on a sweet guy who did not wall himself in with gates and watch dogs. A sweet, lovable guy who just lives like his neighbors and so naive he never thought it necessary to plant himself out!

Having got by the big sign—I should say the shock of the necessity for a sign to such a friendly little house—one drives in a naturalized, unland-scaped courtyard that is part and parcel of the countryside. One pushes a bell—and since no butler or maid answers the bell—a voice bids one come in and there you are—inside—a great sprawling, friendly room, the whole beautiful outdoors there too. Did the outside come indoors with you, or is there an indoors? This, of course, is the beautiful secret of Bing Crosby's Hayden Lake home. There is no "in" and there is no "out." It is of a piece. A continuing scheme is Hal Grieve's theory—interchangeable and therefore one! The same logs, lake, tall pines are dwarfed to low fringe of green newly stained but seemingly weathered by the elements, carry one from the front door right into the heart of the house—keep the eye following through to the beauty of nature outdoors.

The madder red that is used on upholstery and the flax carpeting continues on the overhang of eaves and facia. The contrast makes the blue of the lake and the blue of the sky bluer, the green pines greener, the winter snows whiter! But so subtly is it used as an accent color, it seems only a part of the warmth of Bing's Hayden Lake house. So, too, are the brassy gold accents of pillows. The contemporary approach of electrified brass fixtures in the guise of old hanging lamps, the hand-rubbed honey finish of the sturdy furniture, walls of Thermopane to let nature in, the native granite of nearby hills. Only the initiate would ever guess that this house of Bing's took consummate decorating skill!

As one enters, there is a game table, ahead of it the gorgeous view of lake and mountains, to the left a bookcase of ill-assorted autographed books and myriads of personal pictures-also autographed-that is a decorator's nightmare and Bing's delight. Ahead of one: a living area of chairs that swivel for TV viewing; a sofa on which the carefully color-schemed pillows are always askew; and a much-too-big table, scarcely big enough to take Bing's pipes, his hats, and again-more personal pictures. On the pianocleared for photographing only (Bing could hardly wait for us to leave to put them back)-hundreds more photographs. And at the end of this man's home—the dining room—a sturdy table surrounded by sturdy captain's chairs, each monogrammed for family use. Nothing that needs primping and doing, patiently for photographer Reynolds to get Bing in favorite outfit rakish Tyrolean hat and golf club

Son Linny waits

Pipe in mouth with pencil in hand, Bing is almost as happy at his piano as he is with club in hand! Piano is at end of living room area with full view of the blue water and mountains outside.

Bing's famous theme song, "Where the Blue of the Night Meets the Gold of the Day," (Copyright 1931, De Sylva, Brown and Henderson, Inc.) is motif on living-room draperies, done in square Gothic notes from 15th and 16th century parchment panels of church music that hang over piano. In his own bedroom (right) tune changes to "Home, Sweet Home."

man living in this land of great silent forests and the beautiful singing of woodland birds

Mr. Grieve has a definite theory about guest rooms! Because, of necessity, there can be nothing really personal in a guest room, a good decorator finds a human motif to decorate a guest room around. Hence, the St. Francis of Assisi motif and warm colors in Bing's only guest room at Hayden Lake. On a wall, not seen, is framed a bit of fabric "Aviary of Birds." In a corner (above) a shrine of St. Francis, and beside the guest beds, more memorabilia of St. Francis.

a house for a man—have I given you a picture of Bing's house? Because that is what it is—Bing's house! There is a bedroom for Bing, a bunk room for his boys, and one guest room—all of them pictured here. Now, no country house is worth the land it stands on unless there be acres and acres of storage. Mr. Grieve, knowing Mr. Crosby very well, has provided ample storage. Storage for music and records, storage for clothes, golf bags, golf clothes. All kinds of storage, but most especially, places for hats—for Bing is mad for hats! Hats all over the house—hats on the sofa, hats on the table—a Davy Crockett job worn by Nelson Eddy in Rose Marie, later by Gordon MacCrae in Oklahoma, given to Bing and in Bing's house. Straw hats, Tyrolean hats, riding hats, Indian—well, name any kind of hat and Bing has the hat!

There is of course a kitchen and maid's wing. But this is little Esther Lemmon's domain—Bing's little French housekeeper who apprenticed under ex-Kaiser Wilhelm's cook, who has to stand up very tall to see out of the high windows over her sink—but never fails to see "Mr. Bing" turn in the drive and exclaim, each time she sees him—"Here comes Mr. Bing—God Bless Him!"

Café curtains, on the lake-side view of kitchen, repeat in embroidery the pine needle motif of tiles.

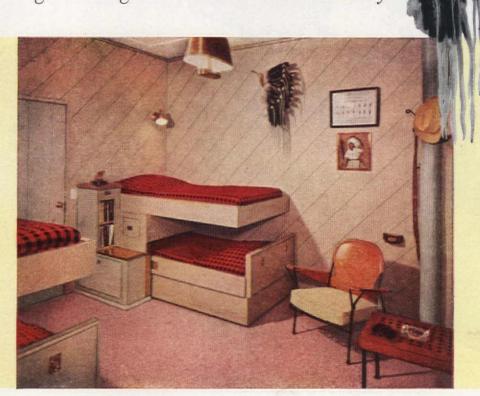

Mr. Grieve demonstrates his easy "stick" handling of pulling heavy draperies. Hats? Bing is mad for hats, hangs them, throws them all over the house!

To the obvious delight of Mrs. Lemmon, chef and major domo of Bing's Hayden Lake house, "Mr. Bing takes an extra cup of coffee."

When first you see that old painting of your Aunt Mame, you sniff disdainfully, but soon you're completely won over by "something" about it. All of us can't have an antique Aunt Mame, but we can get the same charm with hooked primitives. Sassy, colorful, and decorative, they're fun to do. young, energetic grandmother, Mrs. A. W. Macklin of Kentucky, is hooking a rug that is a beautiful record of the lives of five generations of her family. She initiated her project in June of 1952, and, for the benefit of the overly anxious, expects to finish it this year. Friends and neighbors keep kidding her about how long it is taking.

"Howdy, Mrs. Macklin. How's your rug coming along?" has become a routine greeting around her home town, but Mrs. Macklin takes these jests in stride.

"I'm not going anyplace," she says, "and besides I'm having so much fun doing it that I don't care if it takes me 10 years."

Mrs. Macklin works on this carpet only during the evening hours when she and her husband relax. Household duties, several clubs, and a few other constructive hobbies keep her on the run during the day, while jovial Mr. Macklin is busy with his corn, tobacco, barley, and sheep on the 541-acre farm that has been in the Macklin family for more than a century.

The landing mat that Mrs. Macklin made concerns itself exclusively with the present occupants of the household. A large red heart with the Macklins' given names and wedding date takes up the center space. The names and dates of birth of their three children are appropriately worked in clusters of forget-me-nots.

The six steps above the landing are completed too. They include the yellow pet canary in his cage, the red oriental poppies that thrive so well on the sunny hillside, the lazy sheep grazing along the old slave-built fence of stone taken from the overhanging cliffs at the fork of the creek, the purple iris that grow in profusion year after year, the full-grained ears of corn proudly displayed in their half-open husks, the brook's edge where the men fished for bass while the children wiggled their toes in the shallow muddy water, the picnic glade where fun and frivolity reigned at family outings.

It took hours and hours of meticulous handling of short strips, specifically dyed, to get the exact shading of the streams, meadows, and copses of trees in these scenes.

And now Mrs. Macklin is starting the bottom step on the lower section. The date 1799, the year the first Macklin was born in Kentucky, and the Macklin signature, in bold script, call for detail, precision, and patience. Space is left for the rug completion date to be filled in later.

The 10 succeeding steps will include a perspective view of the narrow, winding, CONTINUED ON PAGE 94

JAMES W. BRETT

Is There a Killer in

"FAMILY OF FOUR WIPED OUT!"

A silent menace turns happy families into tragic headlines.

Are you inviting this killer to visit your home?

Your home can be literally a death trap if you don't guard against the threat of carbon monoxide gas. Usually associated with automobile-exhaust suicides, carbon monoxide can also be made right inside your home. A dirty or poorly adjusted fuel-burning stove, space heater, furnace, boiler, or refrigerator can release carbon monoxide into the air of your home. You'll never be an accomplice to this killer if you know the facts and act accordingly. Better make sure you know the answers to these questions now.

Q Is carbon monoxide a threat to your family?

A Indeed it is. In 1952 (latest year for which figures are available) 933 people died from carbon monoxide, and 234 of these deaths were largely due to faulty heating equipment. These figures do not include deaths from carbon monoxide from automobiles. Carbon monoxide is probably the most widespread poisonous gas connected with everyday living. Daily exposure to small quantities of carbon monoxide can cause chronic headaches that will continue until the cause of the gas is corrected. For about every 200 persons that are exposed to carbon monoxide there is one death.

Q Is there any way you can tell if carbon monoxide is in your home?

A Because carbon monoxide gas is invisible, your safety lies in controlling the sources of the gas, not in the detection of it after it has formed. Carbon monoxide is also odorless and tasteless, so it is almost impossible to detect except by indirect methods. There is no simple test that you can make. Utility companies have scientific equipment that can test quickly, but they can hardly make a house-to-house canvass checking the atmosphere. The canary test, used by coal miners, is still a good one. These feathered monitors are so sensitive that they will fall off of their perch when as little as 0.01 per cent concentration of the gas is present in the air.

Q Does exposure to carbon monoxide gas always mean death?

A No. Death or injury from carbon monoxide gas depends on the amount present in the air, length of exposure, and the physical condition of the person involved, and on how soon he gets fresh air—by artificial respiration, if needed.

A By combining with the hemoglobin of your blood, it prevents the blood from carrying oxygen to the tissues of your body. The hemoglobin in the blood combines with carbon monoxide 300 times as readily as with oxygen.

Q What are the symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning?

A Headaches, dizziness, dimness of vision, aching legs, hallucinations, depression, irritability, and nausea. A person asphyxiated by carbon monoxide can sometimes be recognized by the cherry-red color of the lips, eyelids, ears, and skin. This color results from carbon monoxide acting on the blood's hemoglobin.

Q How is carbon monoxide produced in the home?

A By any kind of a fuel-burning device that does not have enough air supply to burn the fuel properly and whose flue gases are escaping into the room. There must be adequate ventilation of the appliance so that flue gases pass freely to the outdoors. Space heaters, water heaters, furnaces, boilers, refrigerators, ranges and stoves that burn gas, oil, coal, kerosene, gasoline, wood or charcoal can produce this deadly gas if they are not correctly used and vigilantly inspected and repaired.

Some of these appliances must be connected to an effective chimney or vent. Others such as gas ranges or refrigerators do not require vent connections since room air changes will normally take care of the small amount of flue products produced. Vent stacks for gas appliances have a hood-like pipe connection that permits you to test the draft in the flue. After the appliance has run for 15 minutes, hold a burning match outside the bottom edge of the top, overlapping pipe. If the flame is drawn under the edge of the top pipe, you know the draft is working effectively to carry off the flue gases.

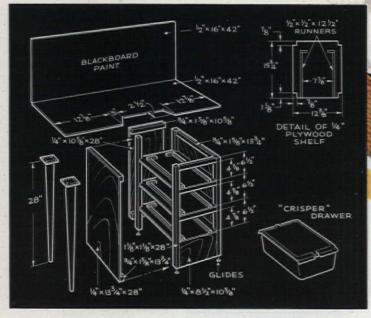

Q Are there any warning signs that show flue gases are escaping into your house?

A Look out for flakes of soot around fire door, flue damper, and even on the floor near the heating equipment. Also watch for an acrid aldehyde odor and a stinging of the eyes and nostrils that indicates flue CONTINUED ON PAGE 124

Corners can be awkward or delightful, depending on what you do with them. This dressing table fits right in, snug as a bug, and it will certainly make a hit with any lady in the house. The two drop-front compartments on top hold beauty aids out of sight, but handy. Wood furring strips fastened to wall hold table at back. Two legs you can buy or make will support the front. Tack snap-on tape at table edge, so skirt can be removed for laundering. Price for the complete job, about $16, depending on the fabric.

"WILL TRADE:

Old buttons, hat pins, salt and pepper shakers, button hooks, cups and saucers, and other items"

Rifteen years ago, Mrs. William H. Hough, Jr., of Freeport, Illinois, started a collection of butter chips. And in so doing she found she was also collecting a vast number of congenial letter friends. Mrs. Hough had long wanted to possess some rare pieces of old china, but she didn't have the money or space for large items. Then she had an idea: collecting butter chips would be an ideal hobby.

To begin her acquisition of these pieces, Mrs. Hough searched through antique and hobby magazines. She found these most helpful as guides. She haunted shops catering to collectors, and began the rewarding correspondence with other hobbyists who were eager to trade butter chips for buttons, hat pins, and other treasures. These congenial pen friends delight in exchanging their personal experiences and tales of just how their special hobbies are tracked down—all of which adds greatly to the excitement of the "treasure hunt" which doesn't rely on today's restaurants and hotels.

Mrs. Hough's historic pieces include a chip from the Kelly Tavern built in 1845 on the old stagecoach line between Browntown and Monroe, Wisconsin, two chips from the Barnsley Gardens near Kingston, Georgia, that predate the Civil War, and a Sandwich glass piece.

Another prize dear to her heart is the butter chip her husband gave her on their 27th wedding anniversary. It pictures a small cupid with bow and arrow. Her husband shares Mrs. Hough's interest in collecting butter chips, and he built the cabinets that hold them. The cabinets have glass shelves and doors, and special racks to display each piece effectively. Mr. Hough fashioned one cabinet of black walnut from an old organ, another of colonial pine, and the third from a butternut table from the Kelly Tayern.

During the years, Mrs. Hough has collected 715 pieces from 37 of our states and from Canada, Germany, and Japan. The chips are glass, china of all kinds, and silver. Mrs. Hough's butter chips vary from $2\frac{1}{2}$ to 4 inches in diameter. It isn't known exactly when these "miniatures" were first made, but there is a theory that they were originally known and used as cup plates. That would be in the early 1800's when the cup was set on such a plate while one drank from the saucer.

Naval architect selects a home port-

And a new Blueprint House is born

HUBBARD H. COBB

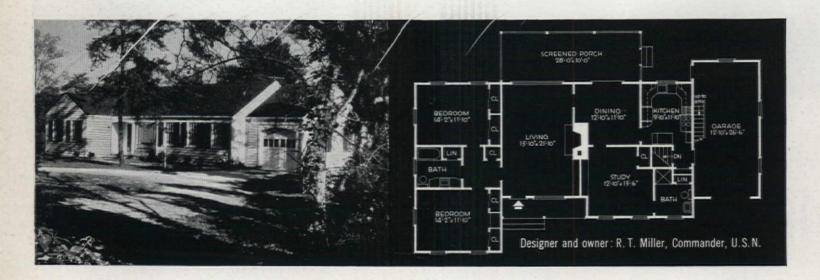

Home Blueprint House No. 49—happened to get designed and built.

Not so very long ago, Commander R. T. Miller, USN—a naval architect—was ready to build a house for his family in the tidewater country outside Annapolis, Maryland. Being a salt-water family, the Millers had selected an acre fronting on a cove of Chesapeake Bay.

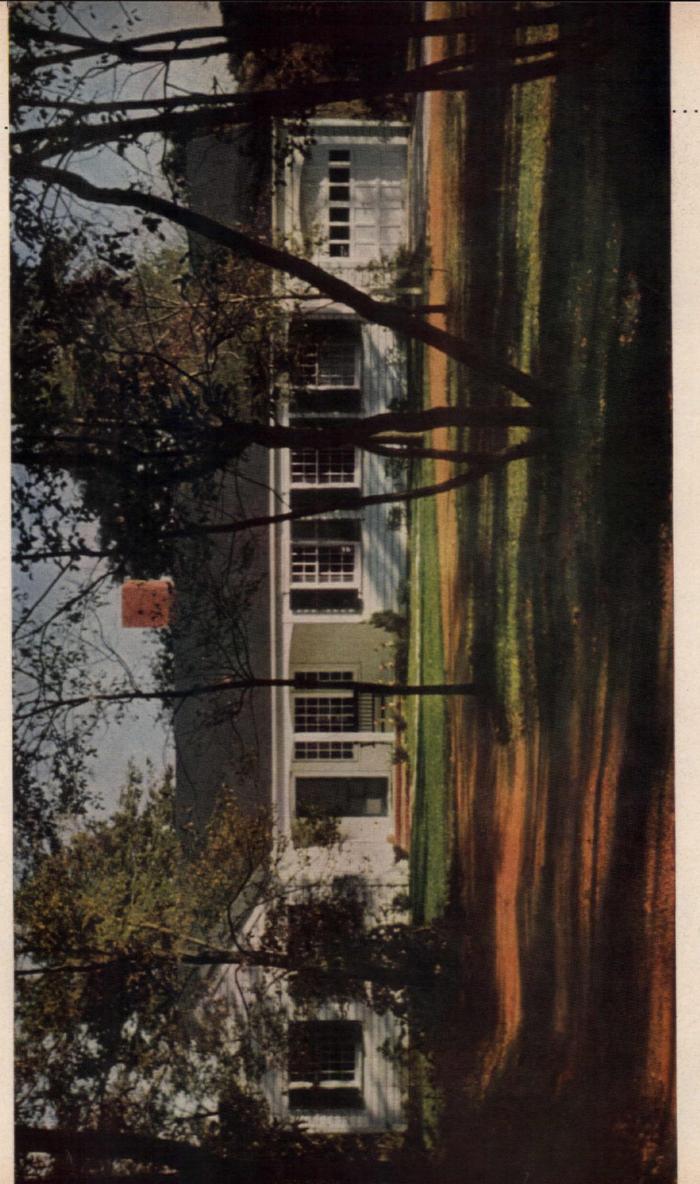

Now the tidewater country of Maryland is rich country—rich in historical tradition, rich in architectural tradition. If you love this country you don't build just any sort of a house. You build one that's going to fit in with its surroundings, and the surroundings are traditional. By a happy coincidence, Commander Miller ran across a house plan that was published some years ago in this magazine. It was our Blueprint House No. 10 and was designed by Bertram A. Weber. This was exactly what the Millers were looking for, but They wanted changes in the floor plan to suit their particular needs, and changes in the exterior to suit the architecture of this area. Commander Miller took out his drafting instruments and went to work.

Last summer Commander Miller was in town and dropped in to see us with a set of his revised plans. We liked them and asked the Commander to send us pictures of his home when it was completed. Last fall the photographs arrived, and, as you can see, it's a mighty fine looking house. Hurried editorial conferences followed. "Should we run this house as a revised version of No. 10 house, or should we consider it a completely new house?" It was finally decided that because Commander Miller had redesigned so much, we'd better keep the two houses separate. That's why on the blueprint order form on page 119 we offer two houses and two floor plans—the original No. 10, and Commander Miller's version which we call No. 49. Take your pick and build the one that suits your needs.

February 2nd your birthday? THEN SING A SONG OF

"The tissue of the Life to be, we weave with colors all our own. . . ."

Pollowing the trend of individualized living—of homes designed to suit your specific way of living—Mary Marfin, a Los Angeles color consultant, has gone a step further and worked out a plan of personalized colors based on birthdays. A birth color, Miss Marfin says, is individually yours, as much a part of you as the color of your eyes, skin, or hair. Each birth color has a complementary color, and the color consultant believes the use of either or both of these in your home will result in greater enjoyment of your home.

To have customers satisfied with their color preferences, Mary Marfin began many years ago to compile a chart of color reactions. She worked it out with the calendar year of 365 days, and used as a formula the full range of colors originating from the three basic colors—red, blue, and yellow. Since each day varies in birth colors under this method, it isn't possible to present all of them. And it's not possible to analyze her intricate method of determining the birthday colors. But let's take February second as an example. If this is your birthday, your color is a singing yellow. Your complementary colors are shades of purple, from lilac to deep amethyst, and accent colors are a zingy green and sharp coral. See what a lovely room these colors make?

Miss Marfin uses birth colors in many flexible variations, according to room size, climate, and individual preferences. Two people born on the same day may be entirely different, one an extrovert, another an introvert, one preferring cool, quiet colors, the other liking vibrant colors. In general, Miss Marfin finds that people are not dominantly extrovert or introvert, but a blend of both, so she uses both birth colors and complementaries.

Although birth colors are somewhat similar to season colors in nature, the similarity is more coincidental than actual. Your birth colors remain unchanged if you live in Kansas where June is a summer month, or in Australia where June is a winter month. A red rose is a red rose whether it blooms in Africa or in Alaska, and so your color is yours, independent of area or season. Black and white are not colors, so they may be used with any color. In fact, the birth colors on every chart have black or white added to the basic colors producing many variations.

February 2nd birthday colors form a lovely centerpiece for the dinner-party table.

For July, for instance, the birth color, Miss Marfin says, is violet blue. Add black to this and you have the gray blues, add white and you have the light sky blue. Complementary colors for July 11 range from sunny yellow to mustard and umber. Accent colors are magenta and turquoise. For May 11, the color ranges from delicate turquoise to deep teal, with red orange and warm pinks as complementaries, and brown and beige. Accent colors are sharp lime and delphinium blue.

JOOd JEAN AUSTIN VICTUALS

"A curious settlement of a matrimonial tangle is reported from Bellinzona. About a year ago the wife of a wealthy tradesman, named Pulchello, eloped with another man and a divorce followed in due course.

"Mme. Pulchello was recently deserted by her lover and left penniless, so she went back to her former husband and asked to be taken back, stating that she had made a great mistake and would do anything to please him.

"Mme. Pulchello is an excellent cook, and her ex-husband, who is rather a gourmet, had not forgotten this fact. He had suffered much, gastronomically, since her departure.

"'I am engaged to be married next month,' he said to her, 'so I cannot take you back as my wife, but you can come back as cook. If you accept I will pay your debts and give you good wages, but there must be no attempts at love-making because you killed my former love for you long ago.'

"The divorced wife accepted the offer, taking up her duties the next day."

What's wrong with it, you ask? I'd say the headline, as well as the reporting, was angled entirely wrong. In my opinion, Monsieur Pulchello lost a mighty good Saucier and what's more, Monsieur realized it. Engaged or no, bride or no bride, he was taking no chances on letting her get away again!

This press excerpt is from The Best of Boulestin, a Frenchman who devoted his best years to the education of the English in French cuisine. Edited by Elvia and Maurice Firuski, it is published by Greenberg. The first cookbook I have ever recommended in Good Victuals, it is certainly one of the very few I consider worth shelf space in a gourmet's kitchen, if for no other reason than that it does not talk down to you. I think you'll enjoy owning it.

But to get back to sauces and sauciers. Now it could be that a gal can put too much love into a sauce, but surely you must know that while many women are good cooks, a truly superb cook is one who has mastered the art of sauces. It is the very foundation of French cuisine—and to date the French have for Lunch!"

Family Food If your man is brave enough to bring up such a matter, don't throw anything at him—even a book. Instead, lower your lashes in the way movie stars do, smile submissively, then slide into your kitchen and subtly transform this unfortunate coincidence into a dinner that hasn't the slightest resemblance to his luncheon fare. Here on these pages are five recipes that make a pleasant escape from such predicaments. They can be prepared with almost as little effort as it takes to use salt and pepper. With your own imagination and ingenuity, revising the menu becomes a fascinating game. The possibilities are limitless and rewards so great that you'll hope "he had it for lunch!"

CORNED BEEF AND CABBAGE CASSEROLE sets pattern for the face-lifting of traditionally American corned beef and cabbage Dad had for lunch. Transform it into a casserole with some cream sauce and seasoning—it takes just 30 minutes—and he will wonder what genie could make foods taste so entirely different. This bit of disguise can work perfectly for leftovers, too.

SWEET AND PUNCENT FISH is a perfect example of the wonderful results that you can achieve when you set out to remake a dish. You can use any kind of fish in this tasty entrée—you can even use left-over baked or boiled fish. What is the means of changing the taste so that Dad isn't a bit perturbed about having it for two meals in a row? It's the seasoning that's the secret here, as you'll see in the recipe.

PEA-CO CHICKEN is another quick switch to remember on evenings when roast chicken is on your menu. Just reach for the carving knife and slice off some pieces. In 20 minutes you will have a new flavor that is a real prize winner. And if you have been racking your brain for a recipe that is really different, remember this also for when "Dad didn't have that for lunch."

DEVILED BAKED HAM is sure proof that menus are changeable. Here we show you an easy-to-prepare recipe. It's a top-of-the-range recipe that will really perk up that slice of ham. The time you have to spend in the kitchen preparing this dish is really amazingly short, as you'll see when you read the recipe on page 75. We hope you will try this delicious idea soon—your family will be delighted.

Recipe begins on other side of card)

You have been stirring all the time, of course. Now—add 1/4 tsp. salt (more if you have used sweet butter, and I hope you have) and a very little cayenne pepper. Blend again with your whisk and pass through a very fine sieve. If you used fresh herbs, chop the leaves and add now. If not, substitute a little chopped parsley. Serve at once. Obviously, not a recipe to do unless you give it your full attention—as do all fine sauces. Another caution! If fresh herbs are not available to you, dried herbs may be substituted. But be sure they are not old. Buy dried herbs in small containers, keep tightly corked, and when opening do as you do with coffee or tea—take out what you need and re-cap quickly!

If you have no other copper saucepans, invest in at least one small one for sauces! It holds heat without burning or too quick changes in temperature when you must add cold water to the pan beneath it. And one with straight sides, like the French use, if you can find it.

Unique Work Centers + Charming Color =

Capable Kitchen That's

CONTRIBUTOR: ELIZABETH CLEMONS

Electric range (far left) has charming brick-wall atmosphere. The copper hood with fan inside channels the cooking odors and moisture outdoors. Wall shelves hold spices and herbs. Movable cart next to range has a maple top. Shuttered doors to storage, outside.

Gay as a Butterfly

- Remodeled to suit a family with four kids
- As pretty and original as it is efficient
- Two-wall plan that lets Dad and the kids join in the cooking fun
- Two refrigerators organize food storage
- A scrapbook of ideas paved the way

See "Where Credit Is Due," page 117

As you enter this kitchen you feel as though you're walking into a white cloud with a pretty orange lining. And flitting through the cloud are lively, handpainted orange and black butterflies. But Mrs. Daniel Moos of Wayzata, Minnesota, hasn't settled for mere cheerfulness. Her family's kitchen is as organized as it is gay.

Refrigerator? This kitchen has two because Mrs. Moos feels that she can get the utmost in organized food storage in the two refrigerating and two freezing compartments. The refrigerators frame an organized, unusual mixing area. At Mrs. Moos' fingertips are all her baking supplies and all the needs and utensils for mixing salads. All her food preparation works toward the range and onto the kitchen's lazy-susan dining table.

Her complete laundry center has a deep sink, a washer and dryer, and an ironer that rolls to a free wall space for elbow room. On "ironing day," Mrs. Moos sorts clothes as they're ironed and places them on shelves of the kitchen cart. Then she rolls the cart to various storage places. Right wall of her laundry area has pass-through to living room which doubles as a beverage counter. Everywhere you look there's evidence that organization and beauty combine admirably to serve this family with four children.

TAKE STOCK-

refrigerator stock pot has saved the day for many a chef. And it can do the same for you. If you keep a stock pot on hand, you can turn out a bowl of delicious, appetizing soup at a moment's notice. Or the stock can be used to add body and flavor to many casserole dishes.

It is one of the thriftiest ways to stretch a budget that I know, Grandma always kept a stock pot bubbling on her wood-coal stove, but modern refrigeration makes it much simpler for you!

Meat flavor is a must to the stock pot. So save carefully every bone that comes your way. All leftover bones from roasts, steaks, chops, ham, or poultry can be used. You can use or add a raw soup bone if you like. But if you use the raw bone have it cracked so you get all the good out of it

Cover the bones with cold water. Add drippings from any meat you have on hand, sliced raw onion, raw carrots, celery and celery tops, parsley, bay leaf, peppercorns, and salt. Bring to the boiling point. Then simmer slowly for about two hours. Strain and cool.

I leave the fat on mine because my family likes it that way, but if you prefer, it can be skimmed off.

Don't allow the broth to stand unrefrigerated for any length of time unless it is actually cooking. When the cooled stock has reached room temperature, pour it into sterilized refrigerator containers. Cover loosely and place in the refrigerator. Save the meat and vegetables from the stock and use them in hash.

Practically anything can be added to this basic soup stock. Leftover vegetables such as carrots, peas, corn, string beans; any variety of dried beans, onion, celery, turnips; liquor from cooked or canned vegetables. tomatoes, tomato juice; any kind of leftover meat or poultry. Always bring the stock to the boiling point whenever adding any new ingredients to it, and then cool it slightly again and put promptly back into the refrigerator.

If you desire, other seasonings may be added while it is heating. It is really a dash of this or that seasoning that turns an ordinary dish into something special. Once you get started experimenting with seasonings there is no end to what you can concoct. Seasonings are really the magic wand that lends glamor to cooking, so don't hesitate to try your hand.

Uncooked rice, noodles, spaghetti, are all good added to the soup. So is a bit of grated cheese added just before serving. THE END

North, south, east or west-this Mazola-fried chicken whips up appetites at any table! And how that golden crust invites taking a luscious bite. Here's the recipe . . .

Small frying chicken, cut in 8 pieces 1 cup all-purpose flour 1 teaspoon salt 1/4 teaspoon pepper 1 cup Mazola Oil

Place chicken in bag with flour, pepper and salt. Shake well to coat each piece. Heat Mazola in large deep skillet. Carefully place chicken in hot Mazola, cover. Turn frequently. Cook until tender and golden brown, 25 to 35 minutes.

This recipe will prove chicken needn't be just "another dish." The difference, my lovelies, is simply in the frying. And exceptional cooks all agree, the secret of superior frying is golden Mazola Oil.

How is Mazola different?

Yes, it's true—of all the leading oils, Mazola is the only one made from golden corn. Why, it's the very best oil money can buy! You can fry with Mazola at much higher oil—for all your frying, salads, baking, intemperatures than solid shortenings allow. sist on Mazola, the delicate golden oil!

FOOD FANCIES FOR FEBRUARY

VALENTINE ICE CREAM CAKE

Let each serving of your cake say, "Be My Valentine" for you . . . and you will win a dozen hearts. It'll be a pretty pink and white dessert if you fill the cut-out hearts with strawberry ice cream. To give it a lacy appearance serve it on large paper doily. Pleating doily makes ruffle perky. Frost the leftover hearts.

HATCHET SALAD

Make Washington's birthday the reason for celebrating with a special salad. Oldsters and youngsters will all enjoy hatchet salads made of tomato aspic and asparagus spears. The hatchet heads are cut out of the aspic. Asparagus makes the handles.

CHERRY LOGS

Looking for a different dessert to serve on Washington's birthday? Then roll up cherry preserves in a rich pastry. Make the hatchets from leftover scraps of the pastry. Insert them in slits in the logs after they are baked. Serve logs alone or with heaping dishes of ice cream.

See "Where Credit is Due," page 117

HEARTY RICE

Instead of sending a paper valentine, serve yours to Dad on his supper dish. A mold of rice topped with creamed chicken will please him. Pack the hot rice into a greased mold, then turn it out onto the plate. For more festive appearance, add small pieces of pimiento to the rice. Be generous with the chicken and it'll be a holiday meal to be remembered.

CUPID'S CASSEROLE

Valentine's day or any other day, a Cupid's Casserole will capture the hearts of your family. Layer a casserole with rice and flaked salmon. Pour on an Indian curry sauce and bake in a moderate oven about 25 minutes. Just before serving, garnish the top with heart-shaped pieces of toast sprinkled with paprika.

POTATO VALENTINES

Want to give your man a new kind of valentine? Then serve his favorite potatoes in heart shape. Serve him a whole plateful of valentines along with a steak or hamburger. Cut hearts out of slices of raw potatoes, fry them in deep fat, and salt lightly. Then sprinkle with paprika for a "hearty" blush. Use scraps for vegetable soup.

POOR MAN'S HEART

A poor man's heart is the way to your husband's heart on the eve of Valentine's day. Prepare corned beef hash from leftover corned beef with your own recipe or a can of corned beef. Pack a greased mold with the mixture, unmold on a heat-proof serving platter, and top with tomato catsup. Place in the oven to heat.

LOVERS' DELIGHT

Have a heart—a potato cake heart—on Valentine's day. Serve the ever-popular mashed potato and frankfurter supper in a holiday dress. Make potato cakes of the seasoned mashed potatoes (leftovers if you have them) and you'll be able to pat them into hearts. Brush them with catsup and cross them with frankfurter arrows. Bake these crusty hearts to serve your family.

PATRIOTS' DRUM SALAD

All young patriots like drums for Washington's birthday; to keep the noise down, give them our drum salads made of cream cheese and tomato slices. (Using a moistened biscuit cutter helps in cutting the circles of cheese.) Decorate the drums with strips of green pepper. Set them on lettuce leaves. Make the sticks out of skewers and stuffed olives. Cross them over the drums.

PIERCED HEART SALAD

You'll score a hit with a spiced cherry salad molded into a heart shape. In honor of Saint Valentine make it of chopped cherries in a cherry-flavored gelatin lightly spiced with cinnamon. Unmold on shredded lettuce and pierce the heart with cream cheese arrows. (Substitute the cherry juice for the gelatin and add red food coloring to make hearts a real red.)

indisputably given the world haute cuisine.

I have chosen as this month's recipe Sauce Béarnaise—to me, the but perfect sauce to crown an exquisitely cooked—(and exquisitely expensive, too, may I add) filet mignon. If the length of the recipe makes it look difficult and involved it is neither difficult nor involved. At the risk of talking down to you and perhaps writing in too elementary a fashion for most of you, I beg your indulgence. It is the good cook who has not yet ventured into fine sauces that I wish to intrigue with this recipe card. I hope she—and you—will consider it a basic in your menu maker and use it often! It is a superb sauce for grilled fish as well as steaks.

IS YOUR DAUGHTER A COOK OR A

KITCHEN MECHANIC?

HARRY BOTSFORD

he is young, married only a few months, deeply puzzled, and a little angry. "I'm not a cook!" she admits. "I'm a champion table-setter. I can wash dishes and peel potatoes. I can prepare salad greens to beat the band. But don't ask me to cook the potatoes, for I can't do it properly. My Mom raised me to be a kitchen mechanic, I guess." She is only one of millions of girls blithely stepping into matrimony, willing to assume its responsibilities but lacking in knowledge of one of the most vital duties of a wife; the capacity to cook a palatable meal.

"Laura, please hand me the jar of sage and the one of oregano, set out the olive oil and the basil and the garlic vinegar. Laura, please hand me that yellow bowl and a large mixing spoon—no, not that bowl, the big one." No Army drill sergeant ever barked more orders than the average mother when she has an active and obedient girl helper in the kitchen. Mother, bless her indolent heart, is a great hand at giving orders. However, like the Army drill sergeant, she rarely explains why certain things are done. In some cases theory is expounded, but with no chance for application.

I've talked with numbers of girls, newly married, and only one told me that her mother had insisted she go marketing with her at least three times a month. It was an invaluable experience. Others admitted they had gone shopping with their mothers to "help carry home the packages." Only one said proudly, "Let the grocer try to saw off some wilted vegetables on me and I become a tiger woman. I can even face down a butcher when he offers me the wrong cut of meat, and I know one fish from another. My mother made a sort of game of it. After I had gone marketing with her a few times, she gave me a list of things we needed, and money to pay for them. If I made any serious purchasing errors, Mother took over, nudged me and told me how to correct the matter. I'm happy she taught me how to buy—it's darned important when you operate on a tight, hard-fisted budget."

I discovered that this girl's mother had also taught her how to cook. She knew when a roast or a stew or a chicken should go to heat, and she timed her vegetables so everything would be done at once. This knowledge is like gold and silver to the girl who works and who must budget not only money but also time. This does not mean that the more indifferent mothers are not good cooks themselves. Yet I regard any mother as lazy when she fails to indoctrinate her daughter into the fun of cookery.

Instead of asking the girl to bring celery seeds, Mother might say, "Add about I teaspoon of celery seeds to the slaw and toss it, Laura-the flavor will be better." But too often Mother measures out the celery seeds, drops them into the slaw, and tosses it herself. She tells Laura to set the temperature control on the oven at 325°, but she fails to tell her that this low-temperature roasting, though it takes a mite longer, does not shrink the meat. Laura is busy cleaning a bunch of leeks, and she doesn't even notice how the rib roast is put into the pan, fat side up, Mom will seethe when she visits the newlyweds for dinner, for she won't be able to recognize any of her favorite dishes. The truth is, Laura has a new tutor in the cookery departmenteither a cookbook, or some helpful tips from her mother-in-law, who knows just what her son likes in the way of food.

Mother, how could Laura follow a precept you had never taught her? Why not divide up the kitchen tasks? Show the gal how to make an honest stew, how to broil a slice of ham, how to prepare the steak before it goes under the broiler. Tell her how long it should remain there. Instead of giving her a printed recipe for pastry, sit down with her and show her how it is done. Next time, let her do it, and you'll be surprised at what a light hand she has. Indoctrinate her into the art of making a salad dressing, even encourage a little improvisation. If it's good, tell her so; let her feel that she is an important adjunct to the kitchen. It will be the best investment you ever made. THE END

DON'T COOK UP ACCIDENTS YOUR KITCHEN

You've never had an accident in your kitchen? Fine, but accidents can happen easily. For instance, you can be badly scalded putting custard cups in the oven this way.

You can also burn yourself while deep-fat frying if you don't use care. Thoroughly dry food to be cooked (use absorbent paper), for water causes grease to spatter.

water. Pour the scalding water into the pan after you put the pan in the oven, and you're in much less danger of being burned.

No matter what size knife you use. a sharp one is safer than a dull one. A sharp knife requires less pressure to do its work, so it slips less easily when you use it.

Memoirs

half-mile-long entrance driveway, the commodious white brick house sheltered beneath the towering ash and the sturdy walnut trees, the bright red Kentucky Cardinal and white dogwood, a field of young growing tobacco, the peaceful barn beneath a bird-filled sky, graceful yellow daffodils along the walk, a contented cow relaxing beside the snowy white board fence, the luscious-looking grapes like those picked from the arbor vines planted 90 years ago. All of these many, many minutia are executed in subtle tones and primitive art style to blend with the architectural interior of the magnificent home.

A continuous border, faithfully carrying out the graceful scroll on the bridgeboard of the cherry-banistered staircase, gives unity and coherence to this pictorial story of courage and accomplishment.

Mr. Alex Macklin the first, who cleared the land, was a farmer, planter, and banker—and he operated a flour and corn meal mill and manufactured rope from the hemp he grew. He built a dam which today is considered a masterpiece in masonry. His remark upon its completion was prophetic: "This is my monument," he said.

A vigorous oil portrait of this pathfinder hanging over the sideboard, a delicately hand-carved chair that his grandson whittled, a sampler that great-great-grandmother deftly worked, are constant reminders of the hardy nature and esthetic culture of these early Kentucky vanguards.

Indeed the pioneer spirit that has predominated over the years is reflected in every nook and crevice of this bluegrass estate. Glancing up at the ornate Adam's mantel, which was purchased from a Cincinnati wrecking company to duplicate the one that burned when the first house was destroyed by fire, or looking down at the rich grain in the irregular floor boards of hand-hewn ash grown on the farm, you almost feel the presence of these courageous pioneers.

Following the family tradition, Mrs. Margaret Allan Macklin relinquished the home to her son, Alex William, upon the death of her husband four years ago. Before moving into the homestead, the son had spent years as his father's assistant in tilling the soil and tending the sheep.

"My husband was truly a good shepherd and my boy is following right in his father's footsteps," the charming 82-year-old widow says with pride. She continues with a reminiscent gleam in her bright eyes. "A lot of affection went into the building of the home and improving of the land." That is easy to believe of these sentimental Macklins. They give and plant trees as anniversary and Christmas gifts, and for nearly a century and a half the Macklins have loved their rolling countryside—not for what it has produced, but for what it represents.

Each succeeding generation has contributed something of a tangible nature to the homestead. So it is no wonder the latest mistress of the household finds pleasure in creating what promises to be an heirloom, destined to take its place in the mellowed atmosphere of family tradition.

... HANDY AS A POCKET IN A SHIRT

PLANT POCKET is a fine way to keep the barren look away from a small entrance hall that even a tiny piece of furniture might clutter. In the home of the William F. Grabes of Tucson, Arizona, Architect Cecil H. Moore created this neat planting pocket, deep enough for drainage. Its metal surface was treated with tar to prevent rusting. When completed, it was painted a soft shade to contrast with the wallpaper, then lavished with plants that thrive in light "borrowed" from the facing window wall in the room beyond.

SINK IN A POCKET near a rear entry takes pressure off the kitchen sink by assuming many roles. Frequently used as a flowerarranging center, this one in the home of the Rolland Healeys of Tucson, Arizona, has tile counters; storage below for containers, flower holders, and such; and pegboard walls to provide pin-up space for illustrations of desired flower arrangements. But this sink also serves for vegetable cleaning, light laundry, and as a wash-up spot for the children. Designs, Inc., were the decorators.

The original apartments, like those in similar buildings on Telegraph Hill, had large kitchens such as this one (left), but no living room. (A forerunner of our modern living-kitchen, maybe?) The big kitchen was used not only for cooking and eating, but also for heating and general living as well. These kitchens were remodeled into large living rooms (below). Then a completely separate and compact kitchen was built right off each living room.

The minimum contractor's bid on the remodeling job was around $20,000. But by acting as his own contractor, John Campbell was able to reduce this amount to $15,000. This brings his total investment in the property to around $30,000, with one apartment still to go. The estimate for this last unit is about $4,000. Now while all this adds up to a good many dollars, the fact remains that to have built a new unit containing as many square feet would have cost around $55,000, plus lot.

Right now, Mr. Campbell's income from the units is about $400 a month—an increase of about 500 per cent over the $66 monthly income of the units before remodeling. When the fourth apartment is completed—this will be a large unit—the estimated income will be $550 per month.

With a little quick math you'll find that $550 a month equals $6,600 a year. A $6,600 annual return on an investment of $34,000 is a little better than 19 per cent. Of course, out of this must come taxes, insurance, maintenance, and depreciation, but it's still a handsome figure. And, as Mr. Campbell points out, through remodeling his $34,000 bought $55,000 worth of floor space.

In summing up this remodeling project, Mr. Campbell emphasizes something that anybody interested in a similar project for income purposes, or simply for a home of his own, would do well to remember. He says, "I feel the validity of this kind of remodeling is that comparable space could not be built for anything like the price of remodeling if the 'remodeling' is not overdone. In fact, if a building of like footage could be purchased that was not quite so sub-standard, that at least had foundations and plumbing, costs would be even less." THE END clients moving from one house to another were anxious to discard some items and anxious to retain and use others. In nine out of ten cases, the reason for this proved to be color. Draperies, old and faded, were sometimes made over to fit new windows, because the owners liked the color. And the color proved to be a birth color.

Birth colors have been given here for February 2, May 11, and July 11. If your birthday is close to one of these dates, the colors are somewhat similar, although not exact.

If you were born in October, perhaps October second, your birth colors are pink, ranging from magenta, and eggplant. Pink for this birth date is different from the pink of May II. It is a violet pink rather than an orange pink. Complementary colors are emerald green, fresh light green, and on through a rich forest green. Accent colors are orchid, tangerine.

A great deal of personalized color is still in an experimental stage, but each day is proving that you will enjoy your home more, Miss Marfin says, if you surround yourself with personalized birth colors. And the same holds true of your wardrobe and your everyday accessories.

GERTRUDE BROOKS DIXSON

The room shown on page 60 is a lilting harmony of color worked out according to Miss Marfin's chart directly above it. Happily for those born on February 2nd, the "birth" color is a clear singing yellow—the color used in greatest quantity on walls and on the floor to form the melody of your birthday color song.

When this clear color note is muted it becomes the warm golden brown of the furniture, giving tonal depth to our melody. The "objective" color is part of the purple family, the range from a delicate lilac to deep, deep amethyst. In its varying tones it is used alone or in combination with other room colors as an effective bass accompaniment. Accent colors—the brilliant, zingy green and sharp, yellowed coral—are the staccato notes that enliven an otherwise quiet melody, making it sing out in tune with our times.

So, as the color theme dictated, our February 2nd room is done in the contemporary manner. The furniture is a mellifluous blending of Colonial and modern designs. The pecan wood in which it is executed has a special warmth and glow against the yellow walls. The floor in a deeper yellow is one of the newest of vinyl plastics in a mottled design. The braided rug atop it is not only a remarkably skillful reproduction of an old art, but it also reproduces all the colors in Miss Marfin's "birth" color column.

In the lovely linen on the sofa are both the "birth" and "objective" colors. The hit-and-miss arrangement of the color blocks gives the design an unusual rhythm that works well with the other patterns and textures.

The stencil on the walls was—in its original version—an authentic reproduction in both color and application of a Colonial wall treatment. But here we've adapted it to Miss Marfin's chart, and to a more contemporary placement on these walls. Instead of the three colors of the original, only the golden brown (for the pineapples themselves) and the biting green accent color (for leaves of pineapple and those forming dado and ceiling border) were employed.

Accent colors were the greatest challenge. A collection of old Staffordshire decorated in the sharp coral and green is a handsome solution. Book jackets repeat the coral. Amethyst in modern glass and in bits of old china combines with a few yellow accessories to complete the color medley.

GERTRUDE BRASSARD

There's always a time that calls for special celebrating and really "going to town" in a big way. This means using the nicest things we have, extra-special food or more of it—extending ourselves. Formal dinners, conducted as they should be, are necessarily passé in most private homes today. But a semi-formal birthday dinner can flatter the honored guest, particularly if you use the color scheme belonging to her personal sign of the zodiac.

We chose one combination of the color scheme for Aquarius, but of course other shades, blendings, or accents of these colors will be just as suitable. We used much gold, as you can see on page 61, and captured the birthday yellow on white china. Crystal picks up the complementary amethyst beautifully. The birthday corsage? The orchid seems the perfect choice for February second. The same accent or color combination can be carried out in the centerpiece and in boutonnieres for the guests.

Last October, we showed how you could serve a semi-formal dinner with all its graciousness and elegance without a maid. It is for the benefit of those who have a full-time or part-time maid that we show this semi-formal setting. And we planned a dinner with more courses than are usually served nowadays, with soup, fish, roast, salad, dessert, and after-dinner coffee—just to capture a note of special festivity. However, three or four courses are now considered sufficient, with or without help.

In a small household, a maid, if she's quite adept and has adequate kitchen support, should be able to handle a dinner for eight alone. But the hostess must expect to assume some of the burden of preparing the meal, particularly when more than three courses are served. THE END

February 2nd Flowers (Picture on page 61)

BETTY B. MERRIAM

A poet's favorite subject has ever been flowers, especially those delicate blossoms that come to life in the spring. And what could be a lovelier arrangement for your home than one that pays homage to this glowing time of year? Here we show you a curved line of acacia, of which Thomas Moore wrote:

'... smiling there Th' acacia waves her yellow hair, Lonely and sweet, nor loved the less

For flow'ring in a wilderness,"

Flowers of the field have an outdoorsy freshness that lends itself well to any spring bouquet, so we have placed daisies "for simplicity and unaffected air" (Burns). And, amongst the decorative Hogarth curve, "... there is pansies, that's for thoughts" (Shakespeare). These modest blooms were referred to by poets from generations ago as Heart's Ease.

To carry out the purple-and-gold of this rich color scheme, insert a few irises, of which Tennyson claimed:
"In the spring, a livelier
iris changes

on the burnish'd dove."

How can you copy this arrangement? Just use a set of pottery that consists of two round rings, hollowed out, and a small container which can fit on top. Use in a tier formation.

Fill both rings about one-third full of Oasis foam and anchor to ring with modeling clay. Then place foam inside small round container, and fill with water.

When rings and container are stacked on top of each other, be sure that foam forms a completed circle on three levels so you can place flowers at varying heights.

Use acacia for background line in Hogarth curve. Cluster iris and pansies low at various levels. Complete with a few buds for rhythm.

For luncheon, dinner, or on a hall table, wouldn't this be a charming arrangement to convey a special February birthday color scheme? THE END

Your modern new small home needs just as fine a heating system as a larger home does, and when you choose steel pipe radiant heating you get it . . . at no more and possibly less cost than you might pay for conventional systems. Where space is a factor only radiant heating allows you to utilize every inch of floor and wall space for living . . . because the heating coils are concealed in the floor or ceiling. Truly "invisible" heat! More, you'll experience a new kind of comfort . . . warm, draft-free floors, no "dead spots," vital, spring-like warmth, greater cleanliness.

*Various surveys from all parts of the country indicate an average cost of $1.00 or even less per sq. ft. of floor area for steel pipe radiant beating systems.

CONSULT YOUR ARCHITECT, BUILDER OR HEATING CONTRACTOR BEFORE YOU BUILD

Because your radiant heating system will be an integral part of the house, and must be planned right down to the last valve and pipe coil before construction is started, tell your architect, builder or heating contractor in advance that you want "invisible" steel pipe radiant heating. He will plan accordingly for mutual satisfaction, savings, and your lifelong comfort.

Child's Got Talent (Begins on page 40)

of big names-the Benny Goodmans, Ralph Flanagans, Marian Andersons, Artur Rubinsteins, and Perry Comos -the best jobs are in the symphony orchestras. Total number of orchestras in the country? About 160, and they can employ fewer than 8,000 musicians for an average of 22 weeks a year. The typical salary for these men and women is below $90 a week.

Is the outlook any brighter for the 41,000 now working in restaurants. night clubs, or other places where you dine and dance? In any of these niteries the musician may look to earning, as a rule, about $65 a week.

Regarded as a whole, the gamble of a professional career as a musician seems very risky. But there are bright spots in the picture too.

For some reason, the younger generation has taken more easily to the trumpet, trombone, saxophone, clarinet, and drums than to the violin, viola, or cello. There is a chronic shortage of string players for the symphony orchestras and the people who manage the orchestras doubt that there'll be any relief for a long time to come. Here is one corner where the balance starts to swing the other way.

Teaching offers another good possibility. As the population continues to grow, the need for teachers of music, in and out of the schools, is sure to increase. And the tremendous interest right now in playing some musical instrument just for the fun of it is not likely to wane. So here's another corner where the balance again swings the other way.

Then, too, your son or daughter might make music a "second" occupation, and use it to find a little extra money in his spare time.

Perhaps best of all, however, is for your boy or girl to remain an amateur in good standing and play or sing for the sheer pleasure of it. There's always the local amateur orchestra, the local band, even the dance orchestra or the jam session made up of family and friends, and there's the neighborhood glee club or music in the church. All these diversified ways of making music guarantee the joy of music without adding the burden of worrying where next winter's coat will come from. THE END

Who'll Bring Up the Dog?

(Begins on page 12)

"But." Butch continued, "people can't expect him to go from another room back to the room where the paper is-and they can't leave a good newspaper lying around, or else he'll use it. The breeder said that if a young pup should make a mistake, the owner should take him to it and say, 'No,' in a shaming voice, and then put him on his papers. And they should not whip the pup with newspapers and then expect him to use them."

Butch pointed out that by this time the puppy will be so anxious to use the papers that he will climb over the sides of a flat cardboard box to reach them. And the box can be transported and renewed easily.

"From four months of age on, a puppy can be trained to the outdoors," said Butch, obviously warming up to his subject, since he was now in Gremlin's category. "Gremlin needs the leather collar and a light chain leash that he can't chew through. We'll have to figure on taking him out as regularly as possible every three hours-and this means that after I've gone to bed, you or dad will need to take him out the last thing at night. And I'll have to do it the first thing in the morning.

"After taking him out, we watch him carefully, and when it's about time for him to use his papers, we put on his leash and tie him to the door knob. This is so he'll learn that he has to wait, and that he should wait by the door. After a short time, we take him out. If he relieves himself, we praise him and bring him back in and release him. If he doesn't, we tie him to the knob and try him again in an hour.

"Maybe we'll have to take a piece of his used paper along and place it on the ground. If he does something outdoors, be sure that we praise him. Then we bring him in and release him. If he doesn't, we tie him to the door knob. He'll soon learn that he is praised and allowed the run of the house as soon as he relieves himself, so he'll learn to be prompt when he's "Soon a routine will be worked out, but it's best to keep him in some small area during the night so his mischief or mistakes are practically always under control.

"As he gets older, of course, we won't have to take him out so often and he'll soon learn to go to the door when he wants out."

It remained only for Butch to help his mother and dad during the trying housebreaking period. And by the time Gremlin was an acceptable member of the household, Butch had learned to feed and groom him, buy his food, and was ready to start elementary training. He had made good.

"It seems they've learned a lot together," said Marge. THE END

FLOORS

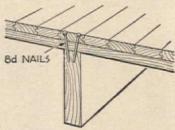

A CREAKING FLOOR, LIKE CRACKED PLASTER OR BROKEN WINDOW PANES, MAKES YOUR HOUSE LOOK RUN-DOWN

JAMES W. BRETT

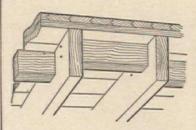

A creaking floor is sometimes advantageous. It can betray a night-errant husband or a trespassing burglar. But otherwise, a noisy floor is a nerve-racking reminder of poor construction. Creaks and squeaks wear needlessly on your nerves and make you wonder if the floor will some day give way.

But usually floor noises are harmless and quite easy to stop with just a few tools and a minimum of time. Often a squirt of graphite between the finish floor boards will do the job.

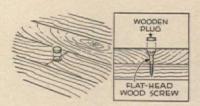

To locate floor noises from the basement, have someone walk across the floor until you locate the trouble spot. Or, if you are working alone, pace off the point from two adjoining outside walls or the chimney structure, and then repeat the process from the same bearings in the basement. When possible, repair your floors from underneath to avoid having to cover up nail and screw holes and hammer scars.

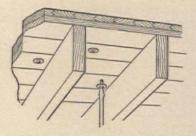

Loose flooring can be silenced by fastening boards to the subfloor and joists with 8d spiral nails. Drive nails at an angle so they will hold. Find floor joist by tapping floor lightly with hammer. There will be a solid sound over joists, hollow between. Countersink nails; in holes use plastic wood filler.

Floor joists installed without cross bridging often turn and warp, causing annoying creaks. The best way to straighten the joists is to nail a 2" by 6" between them, directly under the subfloor. Use 10d common nails. Alternate the braces straight across length of basement ceiling; nail through the joists and into both ends of the 2" by 6" braces. Cut braces individually.

If the ends of your floor boards are loose, you can refasten them to the subfloor with a 1" flathead wood screw that straddles the ends of two flooring strips. Counterbore hole with a drill, insert screw, and then fill the hole by gluing in a wood plug. This should end your trouble.

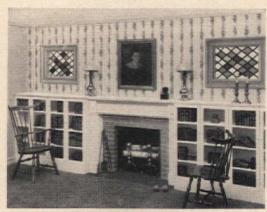

Noise caused by friction between the subfloor and finished floor can be stopped by pulling both floor layers together using 1" round-head screws applied from underneath. And fit a flat steel washer over the head of the screw before you put it in, so that it will have a wide bearing surface underneath subfloor.

Creaking Floors

A floor will squeak when boards in the subfloor buckle and pull away from the joists underneath. To secure the subflooring to the top of the joist, fasten a 1½"-square hardwood strip along the top edge of the joist, and then screw through strip into the subfloor boards. Drill pilot holes in the strip for the 2¼" screws.

When individual boards in the subfloor pull away from the supporting joist, a wood wedge can be driven into the open space to fill the gap and stop the noise. Dip the wedge in glue and then hammer it in tightly until it takes up the space between the joist and the subfloor boards.

Creaking floors can be caused by a major structural weakness like a sagging girder that supports the entire floor. To restore floor to its original position, the girder is jacked up and a steel column is placed under it. A new concrete footing is laid to hold the weight. If ends of wood girders are rotted, drive supporting wedges between sill and bottom of girder. THE END

UNDER THE LIGHTS

MARGARET O. GOLDSMITH

loxinias are such spectacular plants that you'd naturally think they couldn't be grown outside a greenhouse. Actually, they are as easily handled as African violets. Even without a sunny window you can enjoy their beauty for several months a year by buying a few good tubers (1½" to 3" in diameter) and a stock fluorescent lighting fixture, and giving attention to their simple cultural requirements.

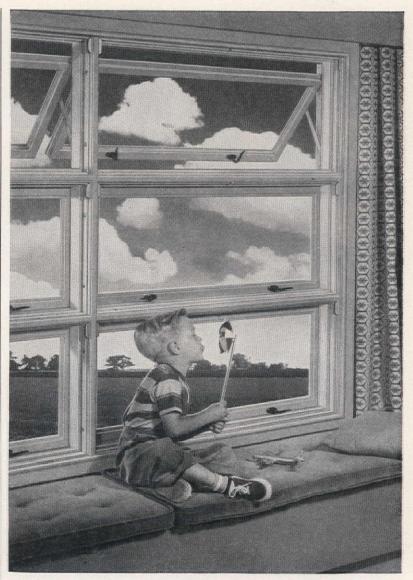

An amateur gardener friend of mine is doing it in her city apartment, in a passageway to the bathroom lighted only by a north window. Over the radiator under this window she put a shelf for a metal tray containing half an inch of pebbles. Above this, she suspended by chains from the ceiling a 24" reflector with two 20-watt fluorescent (daylight) tubes. The whole fixture, which can be held at any desired height, would cost around $12.00 at any good electrical shop.

To start with, my friend (Nora, we'll call her) put one tuber in each shallow (half) pot from 5" to 8" in diameter, depending on the size of the tuber. After covering the drainage hole with an inch of charcoal chips to insure drainage and sweetness, she had filled the pot with a soil mixture of two thirds black humus and one third good topsoil, with ½ teaspoon of bonemeal and 2 tablespoons of clean sand to each potful, all well mixed. In this she planted the tuber, concave side up, just below the surface, firming the soil around it. After giving it one thorough watering, she kept the soil just damp with tepid water until sprouts began to appear. All this time she kept the light fixture only 8" above the pots, with the light turned on for 14 hours a day. As the plants grew, she raised the fixture to keep a 9" space between them and the tubes. Had she used a stationary fixture, two feet or more above the shelf, she would have set the pots on other, inverted pots or other supports, lowering them as the plants grew. As soon as a tuber sprouted, Nora let the soil in that pot dry out between waterings which, however, were generous enough to saturate it; she took care not to splash any on the leaves. As the pots stood on inverted clay saucers in the tray, they were never in water, not even when the pebbles were covered. Evaporation from the tray and steam from the adjoining bathroom maintained the necessary humidity around the plants. Another secret of success is an even temperature ranging from 70 deg. (day) to 65 deg. (night), with no sudden changes or cold drafts. Ventilation is provided, not from the window, but from adjoining rooms. Now and then, to keep a plant shapely, she would cut off a leaf and root it by inserting the stem 11/2" into a bowl of damp sand and potting it in the soil mixture described above when roots had formed

The one troublesome pest of gloxinias is thrips, which cause rusty stems and mottled leaves. Spray for them with a 50% wettable DDT powder according to the manufacturer's directions on the package.

Several of Nora's first gloxinias bore twenty or more blossoms, many over 5" across. Some had velvety, and some shiny, satiny, leaves, but all were a joy to behold at all stages As the buds on a plant began to open, it was given a place of honor in the living room or, in summer, out on the terrace in partial shade. Whether indoors or out, a plant in bloom makes an enchanting centerpiece placed in a green glass bowl of pebbles.

After blooming for three or four months, the plants gradually wilt and die down, when they can be cut back, put in a dark closet or basement, and watered sparingly until new growth starts. Then they are repotted in fresh soil to start a new cycle of glamor. Of course, much the same procedure can be followed with other flowering house plants-begonias of various kinds, African violets, azaleas, Episcias, geraniums, etc. If you have room, you could install two 24" reflectors, or a larger fixture to hold a 40" tube. Such light is not only a supplement or substitute for daylight, but actually gives more constant and dependable illumination during the short, often overcast days of winter. If you grow several kinds, keep those of the same height together so they will all receive light of the same intensity from not more than 12" above them. Provide the same even heat, a tray of pebbles with water in it, and plant food for almost anything you try; be careful not to overwater or overfeed geran-THE END

Isn't it nice to be the very age you are! Young enough to be full of plans. Old enough to take advantage of them. Wherever you look, you see a series of enchanting tomorrows, a bright, shining future. Your whole life is before you.

May we offer you one bit of advice? Don't ever settle for needless discomfort. Millions of girls have found in Tampax internal protection the convenience, the comfort, the freedom they're looking for.

Tampax prevents odor from forming. Tampax is invisible and unfelt when in place. Tampax is readily disposable. Tampax is small, dainty, easy to carry, easy to insert and change. Can be worn in shower or tub. Can be bought at any drug or notion counter throughout the country. Comes in 3 absorbencies: Regular, Super, Junior. Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.

"Roots in the sewer line?

BUT OUR HOUSE IS LESS THAN 4 YEARS OLD!"

"I've seen it happen in months. Roots need only a pinhole — and your sewer is not cast iron . . . it's nonmetallic."

"Roots cause most failures in sewer lines. If they get in, they quickly cause stoppage — and very often a nonmetallic line isn't strong enough to be cleaned by electric machines. Then you need a new sewer."

"Only cast iron is really root proof. Joints are packed with oakum and sealed with molten lead. That seals out roots for the life of the building. Remember: CAST IRON IS FOR KEEPS."

Are you planning to buy or build? Or do you now own your own home? In either case, you want to know how to prevent sewer failure...add years to the life of your sewer line. You'll find the answers in "What you should know about Plumbing Drainage." Mail the coupon for this free booklet today.

HEARTS ON DISPLAY

MRS. J. W. CHILES

Here's an attractive way to display Valentine cards, and it costs you next to nothing in time and money. As you'll see below, this display form can be converted into a Christmas card tree with a flick of the wrist.

Just cut a three-foot-high triangular form out of corrugated cardboard. For Valentines, use form as shown above. Trim the edge with lace paper doilies cut in half. Round the doilies to make heart shape. Attach your cards with pins in a "shingle" effect begin pinning at the bottom so each card hides the pin below it.

We like to center our keepsake cards (some of them are 50 years old), arrange other old cards around them, and edge with the new ones. And we also find it fun to feature handmade cards, personalized cards, or the work of well-known artists.

Since the finished card display is very lightweight, you can hang the display on wall on small tack.

At Christmastime, just turn the form upside down to represent a tree. Pin Christmas cards on it.

This fireplace

circulates heat, will not smoke, damper seals air-tight!

Here is the only fireplace especially designed for modern homes. It is the new Heatilator Fireplace that gives you all 3 of these features . .

1. Circulates Warm Air. Cool air from the floor level is warmed in the double walled fireboxthen circulates gently to every corner of the room, and even to adjoining rooms.

2. Will Not Smoke. A scientifically designed steel form, the Heatilator unit does away with guess-work and rule-of-thumb construction methods. It adds little to cost of finished fireplace.

3. Damper Seals Air-Tight. The new Pressure-Seal Damper seals the chimney throat air-tight when the fireplace is not in use. No house heat escapes up the chimney to add dollars to fuel bills. No chimney downdrafts can cause cold drafts in the room. And in the air-conditioned home, it is an absolute necessity to prevent the loss of expensive summer cooling as well as winter warmth.

The Fireplace for Every Purpose

Ideal for homes, basement rooms, camps or cabins. Be sure you get the genuine. Look for the name Heatilator on the damper handle and dome. Sold by building material dealers. Mail coupon for free booklet.

OW TO GARDEN

Te garden as a hobby. At least, that's what we tell ourselves.
But I've found out that if a particular crop doesn't pay (in whatever we expect of it), we quickly lose interest in it. Hence, over the years, by trial and error, we have become simple gardeners. That is, we garden in the simplest way possible-nature's

The absolute first requisite for back-to-nature gardening, in our opinion, is a compost pile. (And not because we don't like to see leaves lying around until they rot away.) Between the garage and the back picket fence is a hole about four by eight feet, and five feet deep, which is about the hardest-working area in our vard!

Each fall, we rake up all the leaves we can and spread them in the hole alternating each six-inch-deep layer with an inch of soil. As the pile grows, we keep the sides slightly higher than the center to trap every drop of rain. At all seasons we dump there weeds and any plant refuse that isn't laden with seeds, bugs, or disease, and all our garbage (except grease and bones), stirring the leaves enough to cover it and to hasten the disintegration of the pile. Whenever the hose is connected at the garage, we let a few barrelsful of water run into the pile to hasten its decay.

Any unsuspecting fishworms that we unearth when spading or pulling weeds go onto the pile where they find good forage-and pay for it by turning it into fine humus.

Thus we put nature to work for us and find that, using no commercial fertilizers or decay-hastening chemicals, we get results more cheaply, just as fast, and, we think, more safely for our plants. Although we dusted our cabbages only once last year, and our tomatoes not at all, we had very little trouble with pests. We can't explain this scientifically; perhaps compost-fed plants grow so fast bugs don't get them down!

And the gardener's big moisture problem is much simpler when compost is used generously. It takes up every drop of water that reaches it, yet never crusts or gets hard. It doesn't become soggy, but seems always to hold just the right amount a compost pile, though many people hesitate to go to the slight trouble of maintaining one. They feel that, making so comparatively little compost each year, it would take a lifetime to give their gardens its benefits. We thought so, too, at first, when we merely scattered a thin film over our soil (which started as sickly looking fill dirt) and spaded it in. But we don't do that any more. Now we use it intensively and "full strength."

WITH NATURE

For each tomato plant, we dig a hole about nine inches square and six inches deep and don't put a bit of that soil back in it. Instead, we fill it with compost and set the plant in that. During the growing season, even in dry weather, several gallons of water run into this compost is enough for about a week. So a few bushels of compost go a long way, and two dozen tomato plants fill all our table needs and give us lots to can.

We set out cabbages, peppers, etc. the same way, governing the amount of compost used by their size so as not to waste any. Beans, peas, and other quick-germinating seeds we sow on top of compost spread in rows made a little deeper than usual, then cover them with good garden soil.

For smaller seeds, we make the rows the usual way but cover the seed with a light sifting of compost instead of soil. It does not cake, it stays moist with minimum sprinkling, and we get better germination.

When planting bulbs in the fall, I put compost in every hole; and I find it perfect for houseplants. I had never been able to grow plants from seed in the house, even in nice sunny windows; and, when bought each spring, they can be quite an item. Last spring, however, I had my own, early flowering annuals-started indoors in compost mixed with a little sand, and transplanted to pure compost when they were large enough.

In short, we're for compost gardening-nature's way-because it has proved easier, cheaper, and more successful than any other kind we have ever tried. You can start it, and practice it, at any time. And don't be discouraged if, at first, you find you haven't as much compost as you hoped you would. It's potent stuff; every little bit helps; and the more you use, the better your garden will behave and perform. THE END

TURN YOUR POINSETTIA INTO MANY PLANTS

THOMASIA SPENCER

Mrs. Robert R. King of Charlottesville, Virginia, grows poinsettias every year, without a greenhouse.

After the holidays, her plants begin to shed their colorful red, white, and pink bracts. (Bracts are actually modified leaves-flowers are small, vellow clusters at center of bract).

Mrs. King lays each plant, in its pot, on its side to "rest" in her cellar. The 50-degree temperature keeps plants from drying out too quickly (they need no watering), or putting out new growth.

In spring, after frost danger passes, Mrs. King puts the plants outdoors in a spot where it's shady most of the day. She waters the plants sparingly.

In a few weeks, shoots appear along the stems. When these are well developed-three to six inches long-Mrs. King cuts them off at an angle with a sharp knife. She dips bases in water, then in a root-stimulating hormone.

She sticks cuttings about half their length in a box of wet sand, which should be about 10 inches deep. She waters them sparingly, and adds new cuttings as long as the mother plant produces them.

When the slips perk up and begin to put out leaves, it means they have taken root. They are ready to be potted in good house-plant soil.

Mrs. King plants each one in a seven-inch pot. She sets all of themincluding the mother plant-in her sunny rose garden. Each pot is sunk until its rim is level with ground.

A teaspoonful of fertilizer per plant each month replaces any plant food washed away by rains.

Unless there's a drought, plants may be practically ignored until fall. Tust before the first frost, they are taken inside to a sunny window where temperature is around 70 degrees. Plants must be protected against drafts, or they may drop their leaves.

Plants are watered cautiously and -now that there's no danger of leaching-given a final application of fertilizer. By Christmas, they should be in full bloom. THE END ant decorative greenery in your home? . . . At no cost whatever, you can grow a windowful of lovely foliage plants. Start with a few grapefruit seeds which grow easily and successfully. Put about 15 in loose, absorbent soil in a flower pot or other shallow container, keep them moist, and most of them will sprout within a couple of weeks. Transplant the most vigorous into a ceramic or pewter bowl, or even (as I did) to an old teapot. Orange and lemon seeds take more patience, for they do not sprout as readily as grapefruit. However, seeds that have started to grow inside the fruits (as sometimes happens when they have been in the store for a long time) will give quicker results.

Shifted to large pots or tubs, such plants will become at least two or three feet tall, and may even bear fruit. But they are sensitive to temperature changes and drafts and, if kept outdoors in summer, must be brought into the house well in advance of the first frost.

readily from pits supported by toothpicks or otherwise so the base just touches water in a glass or dish. (See "Eat Your Pear and Have it Too" December, 1954, AMERICAN HOME-

If you are not in a hurry, wash and plant some date pits; one out of a dozen may finally germinate and, in time, grow into a lovely little palm tree with slender leaves. Grape seeds will usually sprout if softened in water for a week, and then planted in a mixture of soil and sand. Handle them carefully, keep them moist, and after the lobed leaves appear, feed them with a little plant food in solution. If tiny insects appear in the soil, disinfect it by soaking cigarette stubs in a little water over night; then strain and dilute the resulting liquid before pouring it around the little plants, not on them.

There is no limit to the seeds you can experiment with-cantaloupe and watermelon, which often sprout within 24 hours, cherries, prunes, and even nuts may hold surprises that will provide a new interest for youngsters, and you, too.

Killer in Your Home?

gases are escaping into your house.

Q What can you do to prevent carbon monoxide poisoning?

I. Don't burn any kind of fuel in an air-tight area. Open a window a crack if you are in doubt about sufficient air for combustion.

- 2. Whenever necessary, vent fuelburning appliances to the outside of your home.
- 3. Do not use unvented fuelburning heaters in a bedroom.
- 4. Operate the equipment according to the manufacturer's directions.
- 5. Have your fuel-burning equipment inspected and adjusted at least once a year.

Q What is the best way to treat anyone overcome by carbon monoxide gas?

- 1. Remove the patient to fresh air immediately. If not possible, ventilate room as completely and quickly as possible.
- 2. If the victim is not breathing, or is breathing weakly, start artificial respiration at once, but do not fight the victim's attempts to breathe. Time your efforts with his. Have someone call fire or police department for an inhalator to be used in conjunction with artificial respiration.
- 3. Keep body warm with blankets and hot water bottles.
- 4. Patient should be kept at rest to save his heart and be given plenty of time to rest and recuperate.

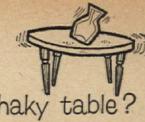

Q How should you care for an oil burner?

A Have a serviceman clean, inspect, and adjust it before each heating season. Carbon, dust, and dirt can interfere with the air supply. Vaporizing burners can collect carbon more easily than other types.

Q How do you maintain a coal furnace or stove?

A Correct banking of the coals is vital! Pull hot coals of existing fire well to front of fire box, letting them slant downward to the back of the furnace; second, put on sufficient coal, slanting it upward as it goes to the back of the furnace; third, make sure you leave a spot of uncovered hot coals about the size of your hand at the front of the fire box-this is to assure ignition of the coal gas as it is generated; fourth, open the air ports in the firing door and close off all bottom drafts; the damper in the smoke pipe should never be entirely closed.

At night, close all bottom drafts, open ports in firing door. Damper controls that depend on electrical power should be of a type that "fail safe," that is, remain in or return to a safe position when the electrical (Print name in pencil) (Print address in pencil) City State power fails. An annual inspection and cleaning will help assure proper combustion of fuel.

Q What steps are needed to maintain the safety of gas furnaces, boilers, and storage water heaters?

A 1. Inspection by serviceman should be made in accordance with utility company recommendations.

2. Learn from your utility company how your furnace or boiler flames should look when operating properly. Look at your flames occasionally. If they do not appear normal call your utility company or appliance service company.

Q What precautions are necessary with a gas range?

A Clean and check range burners to make sure the flame is burning evenly from every port. If the flames are not normal, there is danger of incomplete combustion. Clean burners with a stiff brush or soap and water. This will generally even up the flames.

The gas range should not be used for room heating. If needed in an emergency it should be considered like any other unvented gas room heater. Extra air may then be required to assure complete combustion and to remove waste gases. An open window will give you enough air to assure proper combustion and flueproduct disposal. Make sure there is no direct draft that will blow out the flame.

Q What should you know about gas refrigerators?

A Proper combustion in a gas refrigerator depends, as with other fuelburning appliances, on regular service and cleaning. The flame should be clear blue, centered, and not touching any of the parts. A peculiar musty odor, noisy burner operation, overheating and soot behind the refrigerator are all danger signals of improper burning. Failure to stay cold or make ice cubes may also, though not necessarily, be danger signals. If any of these signs are present, turn off the gas, open a window immediately, and don't relight the refrigerator until it has been checked by a competent appliance or utility service-

Q What part do chimneys play in carbon monoxide poisoning?

A A very important part. For whenever a chimney, vent, or flue pipe gets clogged with soot, birds' nests, snow, bricks, mortar, or other material, flue gases are not released outdoors and sufficient air for proper combustion of the fuel doesn't reach the burner. This combination presents serious hazards possibly leading to carbon monoxide poisoning. All chimneys should have a clean-out door at least one foot below the lowest vent connection to the chimney. You can see if the chimney is clear by holding a small mirror in the clean-out opening. THE END
