Nancy Mitford's childhood in a remote English country house was unmarred by edu-cation-except French and riding. Despite this she has written five novels, edited two books of Victorian letters. She contributed the article on Lord Berners' house, Faringdon, appearing on pages 116 to 119 .

Hector Bolitho's 36th book. The Reign of Queen Victoria, is just finished, took 11 years ${ }^{\text { }}$ research, three to write. Echoes of it are to be found in his article on page 99. Since his war years in the R.A.F., besides writing, he has been lecturing and making broadcasts all over the U.S.A.

Albert Henry Hill was born in England of American parents, went to college in California and to Harvard to take his Master's Degree under W alter Gropius. Following service in the Army, he established his architectural practice in California, designed the house on pages 148 to 153 and the cover.

Eleanor Forbes heads the Design Studio at Gump's in San Francisco, created the dining room furniture, page 121, for Tapp, Inc. She has also turned her hand to jewelry, silver (including the great silver punch bowl for the U.S.S. Honolulu), lamps and pottery, wallpapers and interiors.

Bliss Moore, Jr., has for 34 years sedulously pursued a west-of-the-Mississippi career. He was born in New Mexico, educated in Idaho and W ashington, designed his own Seattle house, shown on pages 144 to 147 . Two sons and a Saint Bernard keep him busy at home after office hours.

W When "Art" has a great big "A" - Cezanne, Renoir or young modern - Kencork serves superbly: highlighting high art by the subtle flattery of its glowing tans and golden browns. When "art" means beauty in decorationrich drapes, fine furniture and accessories-Kencork floors and walls add the final touch of elegance. Kencork emphasizes the beauty of everything else. But Kencork doesn't stop there. Kencork tiles, made only of natural cork, make living pleasanter because they are so resilient underfoot-so comfortable, so quiet. And Kencork is practical, too-it insulates your rooms, means less slipping, lasts a lifetime. With all these luxurious advantages, Kencork probably costs much less than you imagine. - Unique ... exclusively yours ... will be your St. Charles Kitchen, custom built just for you. How can you tell if a kitchen is custom built? Look at the counter. Is it continuous, including the sink? If an L or U shape, does it extend around the corner without seam or crack? In the kitchen above even the range is built-in. Notice also the gracefully rounded end. Other things to watch for are the special purpose storage units found only in St. Charles Kitchens. Naturally, such a kitchen can't be made from stock units ... by getting some units now, and adding more later. Your St. Charles Kitchen will be made as a whole, after you approve the design. Even the finish is from one batch of enamel, sprayed and baked on every part at the same time for color uniformity. ## Cranés...the MRark of achievement in making fine papers

The colophon was the inscription or device formerly placed at the end of a book which contained the printer's name, date, and place of printing. It was the finishing touch, the mark of achievement, the acknowledgment of responsibility for the accuracy of the text from "title page to colophon."

The watermark of Crane is the mark of achievement in making fine papers, for it means papers of cotton and linen fibres only-the choicest and most enduring materials from which paper can be made. No other paper maker has held to this one standard of quality so continuously and with such fidelity. The Crane watermark reveals itself when the sheet of paper is held against the light. We suggest you look for it when next you buy paper for your social, personal, or business needs.

Blessed by nature with a variety of land/seascape, blessed by accident with the beginning of American history; that is New England.
From almost every mountain a dozen limpid lakes invite you down to swim, fish and sail. In maritime New England your activities are as various as the aspects of its 2,500 mile coastline: idling on sleek beaches, battling the giant tuna or fighting bluefish from an off-shore cruiser, thrilling to the freshening breeze as you crowd on sail, exulting to the drive of a spray-drenched speedboat over a choppy sea, or eating succulent baked beans and steaming brown bread, or live lobster broiled to order and served with drawn butter.

Canadian Pacific took me

 To CANADA'S WESTERN WONDERLANO!IN MY cozy, Canadian Pacific-designed berth, I rode in perfect comfort. Canada's Rockies...the scenery all the way to Victoria, British Columbia...take your breath away, but your apperite never...the food on Canadian Pacific trains is so good!

... ON MY STOP-OVER AT THE EMPRESS, I sailed, swam, played tennis and golf, fished for salmon and trout, shopped for English bone china and fine woolens. Even had time to relax and enjoy the acres of velvet lawn and the roses that are as famous as the English country-house atmosphere of this Canadian Pacific hotel.

THIS YEAR, my husband and I are honeymooning at the Empress, and you can be sure Canadian Pacific will take care of us in every way ...to and from the Pacific Coast. It's this special service that has made Canadian Pacific the world's most gracious travel system.

NO STATISTICS

LAST YEAR there were nearly $2,000,000$ marriages in the United States. Stacks of invitations packed U. S. mail boxes from Abbeville, Alabama, to Zumbrota, Minnesota.
Champagne corks popped and toasts were proposed. Cakes were cut and confetti showered the air. But of the state of mind of the young men and women who signed the registers, we have no statistics. How many of them sensed the responsibilities which faced them? It is impossible to know.

Did one in a thousand realize that marriage is a bitter-sweet mosaic . . some of the pieces bright, some humdrum?
It is hard to say. We in America have fallen prey to the fairy-story ending-the happy-ever-after myth.
We are apt to forget that a good marriage is made not in heaven but at home. It is the sum of wisdom and forbearance and humor, backed by common sense and sound management.

The issue of House & Garden which you hold in your hand presents many of the facets which make for a good marriage-including a Bride's Manual for entertaining, the essentials for small and large kitchens, a collection of small houses and basic plans for one-acre gardens.

An English biographer considers the elements which make for happiness in marriage

Three days ago I sat in the office of the editor of House & Garden, looking out at the towers of New York, washed by the pearlgold light of an April morning. The editor leaned forward and said, "You have traveled the world and written eight biographies. You must know something of human nature and human relationships. Would you write an article for us on the spiritual values of marriage?"

There are some themes that embarrass even writers who are supposed to live through self revelation. Unless he is a sentimentalist trading in emotional gush, an author feels that love and sincerity are like religion; to be practiced and never preached. While I was still looking out at the startling beauty of New York, three thoughts trailed, untidily, through my mind. For two years I have traveled the great spaces of America, from Erie to Dallas, from Seattle to Boston, from the James River to the Canadian border. The dominating impression that stays is of the disillusion of the younger generation: their lack of faith, with the stink of one war in their nostrils and the clamor of another war coming nearer and nearer. The second thought was, "How can we ask them to believe in anything . . . in these mysteries we so glibly call spiritual values . . . when every newspaper they read is sour with anger and suspicion; when every conversation they hear is dark with threat?" Then my mind turned back over the years of my life and I found myself saying, truthfully, "I still believe in the capacity for nobility in human nature. I still believe in the forces of love-the love that transcends desire and reaches the awful heights of sacrifice." I said to the editor, "Yes, I would like to write that article for you."

Some weeks ago I received a letter from a friend who was present in Westminster Abbey when Princess Elizabeth was married. My friend recalled the words of the Archbishop: "Notwithstanding the splendour and national (Continued on page 198)

How to plan the perfect wedding

The information in this article was provided by Mrs. Chester Burden of the Burden-Littell Bureau,an authority on weddings, parties and matters of etiquette

Small or large, a wedding is a show, and for a day its organizer must be an impresario. Because usage and taste have created a series of well-understood conventions, there is every reason why your daughter's wedding should be perfect of its kind. Planning and attention to detail, not large expenditure, are the elements which make for perfection.

As a courtesy to your guests, mail invitations at least three weeks ahead of time. This will also facilitate an early checking off of acceptances and arrangements with the caterer. Lists, submitted by both families, should be gone over by everybody to avoid duplications, etc. Because a wedding is a family affair, relatives should figure on the list ahead of all but your most intimate friends. Any good stationer can supply you with the stock phrasing and format of the conventional invitation. Today, single envelopes are as correct as double ones which, though they lend importance, augment costs considerably. The addressing of the invitations can either be undertaken by the bride's family and friends, or can be turned over to professionals. If the ceremony is strictly private and only announcements are sent out, these should be mailed as soon after the wedding as possible.

In order to insure accuracy in the newspapers, it is a good idea to send them a purely factual announcement of the wedding, giving full names of bride and groom, the schools and colleges they attended, their business if any, the full names and addresses of their respective parents and the wedding party names. To this you can add any relevant social facts and a photograph of the bride. Do not, however, describe dresses or details of the entertainment. If the paper is interested in these, it will probably phone and ask for them.

To create a satisfying ensemble, plan the church wedding as a whole, and harmonize (Continued on page 199)

The bride outfits

 her kitchenVersatile housewares chosen to fit into three sizes of kitchens

THE three schemes shown on these pages are geared to the needs of the $1,700,000$ couples who are expected to get married in 1948. A majority of them will set up housekeeping with a kitchenette, such as you see at right (1). Another big group, a little more prosperoue will bake their first batch of biscuits in an apartmer kitchen (2). More fortunate (but fewer) are the brides and grooms who move into a house or apartment with a large kitchen (3). Under the first picture are shown the minimum pots, pans and appliances needed in the kitchenette. By adding the second group to these, you can outfit your apartment kitchen. The large kitchen makes use of every item shown on this page. This cumulative plan is keyed to the recurrent American theme that the average young couple will improve its living and will move, once, even twice, to larger and more comfortable quarters. If you keep this aim in view, there should be no discards and duplications even after long years of housekeeping. (The necessary accessories to go with these three schemes are listed on page 178.)

In choosing your equipment, consider first personal tastes and preferences, and modify these lists accordingly. Buy quality; it pays (Continued on page 205)

This kitchen works well with (or without) servants

TTHIs kitchen is not only a center for housework, it is also planned as an inviting place where the family can foregather. The room's colors (rosy beige, forest green, chalk white, celadon and natural, light wood tones) are pretty; its textures (porcelain, marble, serrated Weldtex, nubbly fabrics) are interesting. It has all the advantages of a large kitchen, incorporating the butler's pantry. yet it is so practical as to plan that not an inch of space is wasted. The activities once allocated to five rooms are here concentrated into one open area with two subsidiary alcoves: kitchen, dining room, office (in the center) ; laundry (left); larder with quick freeze equipment and storage space (right). Focal center is the island counter (14) in the middle of the large room. This counter is more versatile than it appears at a casual glance; being equidistant from refrigerator (17), range (9), and sink (22), it is a convenient assembly point for the serving of meals. In its base are kept the most frequently used china. silver. glass and serving trays. Generous, continuous work surfaces are strategically arranged and made of the materials best suited to each type of work. Food is delivered to the house at the back door, sorted in the larder. It then moves along the arc of counters, through the various phases of preparation, till it is ready to be served. All the steps of laundering are segregated in the small room (left). All windows, of which the smaller ones pivot, are angled to the sweep of the garden outside. For a decorative note, upright bamboo poles are brightly decked with flowers, leaves or plants (set in metal containers). You can see this Westinghouse kitchen at Namm's, Brooklyn, New York. ## Faringdon House

by Nancy Mitford

editor's note: As third in House & Garden's series entitled "The Most Beautiful House I Ever Saw," the author of "In Pursuit of Love" describes Lord Berners' charming house.

When Mr. Wood of Bath built Faringdon House, about the middle of the Eighteenth Century, his customer was Poet Laureate Pye (generally supposed to have been the worst poet laureate England has ever had and described as "eminently respectable in everything but his poetry" by Lord Byron who, of course, knew all about respectability) Pye ordered the house to be built and Pye paid the bill established himself there, wrote reams of dreary long-forgotten verse in praise of his master George III, and brought up his dreary long-forgotten children beneath its roof. But I believe that Mr. Wood, gifted with second sight, saw 200 years beyond the laureate and built it specially for Lord Berners, its present occupant. For those who are lucky enough to be friends of the lord and therefore visitors to his house, he being the most (Continued on the next page) hospitable of men, find it impossible to think of one without the other, so much of a piece are they, both standing foursquare on English soil but both formed in all their essential proportions by European classicism.

Faringdon is a real country house for all its elegance, not one of those pretty old-maidish town houses that sometimes occur in the English countryside, looking sweet but silly and exhaling an atmosphere of afternoon tea. It is plain and gray and square and solid and is as much a part of the rolling Berkshire landscape before it as of the little old market town of Faringdon to which it turns its back and which is hidden from view by the parish church and huge clumps of elm trees. Faringdon House has very little in the way of a flower garden, Lord Berners is not fond of flowers growing in beds, and considers that such things as herbaceous borders are more suitable to the half-timbered houses of Surrey stock brokers than to a classical house which should be surrounded by a plain expanse of lawn to enhance the perfection of its line. Indoors, his house, as we shall see, is always buried in flowers but they are large brilliant tropical flowers in vases, not buttercups, the little children's dower.

A broad space of lawn runs from the house to the church -it is bordered by elm trees and, until it came down in the gales of last March, a big cedar stood there. Cedars are crashing all over England now. As the fashion for planting them only began in the (Continued on page 202)

Brook gardening

offers two

choices

Shall the brook or its planting be more important?

Opposite:

THE CURVE of the brook is continued in the curve of the path, its stepping stones edged with pansies.

IF you are fortunate enough to possess a brook and want to make it a landscape feature, you are faced by two choices: shall you leave it as nature made it, or mass its banks with plants that thrive in damp soil? The decision depends on the brook itself. Brooks have character, individuality. They are apt to have pleasing curves. They have movement-some slow, silent and meandering, others swift, purposeful and chattering. If the banks are swathed in planting, much of this character may be hidden from the eyes. Certainly a brook running through a fairly flat meadow should be given only low and occasional additions of such plants as like their feet in water-here and there a clump of iris, drifts of trillium, primulas. In his Bryn Mawr garden, Mr. Knode has fringed the banks and pathsides with pansies, an unusual treatment and one requiring care, since pansies must be constantly cleared of dead flowers if their beauty is to continue for long. On the other hand, the character of a brook may call for turning its bankside into a series of colorful and varied plantings for season effects -cardinal flower, iris, gentian, primula, fern, high-bush blueberry, clethra, elder, spice bush and dogwood.

Fences with a purpose

Has your fence a mission in life? Decide what its job will be before you buy or build it

BY DON GRAF

Fences serve any or all of three purposes. They may be designed to keep children, livestock or pets in. Or they may serve to keep intruders, dirt, dust, noise, objectionable views, drifting snow and prying eyes out. Last, they may be used solely for aesthetic effect because they contribute an important element of design to the architecture of a house and planting.

There is no limit to the combinations of materials from which fences may be made. Rails, boards, stone, hedges, barbed wire, woven wire, brick, pickets, stockade saplings, plywood, concrete, iron and even glass (see picture below) have been used.

The fences near your house should be in key with its architecture. Formal houses need formal fences. Natural materials, by their very unobtrusiveness, contribute charm to country settings.

Economy is something to balance against appearance and use. When the beautiful old dry stone walls of the northeastern United States were built, it was as much for the purpose of clearing the land as to enclose it. But these fences harbored rodents, insects, and often sprouted brush and weeds. They were built because labor was cheap and the stone was at hand. Today, it would be expensive to duplicate them.

The split rail fence, either zigzag or straight with posts, is common in most states east of the Missouri River and some of the western states. These can be treated so that the wood is very durable. The zigzag type presents a legal problem when it is used as a partition between the boundaries of neighbors, and would probably require an agreement fixing dividing line.

Many board fences are found in Virginia and Kentucky. They require maintenance because it is customary to whitewash or paint them at fairly frequent intervals. The board fence is particularly suited to the enclosure of fields where horses are kept, since they cannot easily harm themselves by contact.

Whether you need a short length or a whole lot of fence to enclose an area, don't fail to examine the many factory-made kinds that are available now. We show you six of them on pages 224 and 225. On these two pages we present seven fences that have been specially designed.

THIS informal surrounding of lawn areas by shrubbery affords a large play space. The little flower garden is formal for contrast and easy to work. Grass cutting is the major job.

Inormal

design for a

small garden

Informality in garden design generally consists of an absence of straight lines and marked balance. It produces a garden of curves and, in this particular instance, curves that afford a succession of changing glimpses. The shrubbery is massed along the property line to assure privacy in the rear of the house. Lawn (2) forms the vista from the terrace (4) behind the house. The lawn is large enough for playing games. Beside the garage (1) and back of the garage court (5) is a drying yard. The unique feature of the plan is a Victorian flower garden (3) in an oval opening of the shrubbery, with a precise, old-fashioned pattern of paths and beds. This and the garden opposite were designed by Mary Deputy Lamson who writes further on small gardens on page 192.

THE FORMAL DESIGN divides the property into various purpose areas-playground, vegetable patch, cutting garden, drying yard and a well-patterned flower garden with shrubbery at rear.

Every foot of space in this formal design for a small property-an acre-is put to work. An informal layout of paths, drives, trees and shrubs before the house gives

esign for a

$\mathrm{F}_{\text {ormal }}$ no hint of what lies behind. Within low walls or hedges which mark property lines and garden divisions, there are provided: (1) a play yard; (2) a formal garden of lawn, shrubbery and matched flower beds; (3) a paved terrace behind the house on the axis of which the formal garden is laid out; (4) the garage court; (5) a cutting garden with drying yard (6) adjacent; (7) is a grape arbor; (8) a vegetable patch. Paths connect the various parts of the garden which are neatly related to each other. All these elements, contained in one acre, serve a diversity of interests. More information on page 193.

An outcropping of stone or a low retaining wall makes safe harborage for assorted Alpine plants

IT is not necessary to have an elaborate layout of stonework to grow Alpine plants and their modest associates successfully. Here and there a small property may have an outcropping of ledge rock that would furnish the desirable environment. Again, some properties of sloping terrain are terraced with low retaining walls and little flights of stone steps lead from one to the other. These are ideal spots for rock plants.

After all, rocks are the least important part of a rock garden. True, they are necessary to afford shelter and cool root room. For some kinds of plants shade also is desirable. To be successful with Alpines, the soil mixtures are the essential contribution. An amazing number of plants will thrive on a mixture consisting of one part garden loam, one part clean sand, one part leaf mold and one part limestone chips. Such soil worked behind, under and between rocks and laid in the miniature valleys to the depth of a foot, will satisfy practically everything this side of the most fastidious and difficult Alpines which only experts can raise Sime years ago in Boston, a young mother of three sons was excited and concerned when her three boys, ranging from nine to thirteen, went off to the Conservatory of Music to take musical aptitude tests. The mother was deeply interested in the possibilities of the outcome because she was convinced her boys were musically inclined.

The three boys showed remarkable talent in their tests, and as a result their mother sold her engagement ring to meet the price of a large-sized harp, a cello and a set of drums. Place was made for the instruments. The small living room was turned into a miniature conservatory of music. Time was set aside every day for practice. When the children grew up, one son became the conductor of an orchestra, the second became a concert cellist, the third a teacher and composer.

Similar incidents are not uncommon, but where will you find a parallel of a mother willing to do as much in the interest of her children's education in art? A child's need for encouragement in art is just as vital as it is in music. Yet what are parents doing for their children who love to paint-need to paint? Although painting is part of the regular school curriculumimportant to the development of growing childrena child's entire art experience should not begin and end in the classroom. # Gelatin dishes that will simplify life for the summer hostess

BY MARIAN MAEVE O'BRIEN

WTith this month comes that lovely lazy time that we've been looking forward to all winter; the foxgloves and the Canterbury bells are just beginning to come into their beauty in the annual bed and the long green spikes that have sprung from the lily bulbs are two or three feet high in the background. The trees are in full leaf now, and their shadows are long and dark and invitingly cool as the sun still soars high in the sky at cocktail time.

To most of us, this is a period of contradictions; we want to spend hour after hour beside the swimming pool, soaking up the good sunshine and resting our eyes on the leafy canopy above us. We find summer evenings beautiful with a star-studded velvet dome above. But the evening is infinitely better with six or eight of the nicest people we know sitting around the table enjoying supper! We all know that even the summer sun won't invalidate that oldest of hostess axioms: i.e., that friends mean food and, in these days when most of us at least take a hand in the household chores, food means work. And work is the last thing we're looking for once summer is upon us. With this in mind, consider ways of having our friends and of feeding them well Continued, with summer menus and recipes on page 213.

> Chintz, all through the house when you byy dimint, pou re in in god med hisoric company. For chintz was originally "painted or stained calico" and its name is related to the word for the small leopardlike spotted cat-the cheetah-and means spotted or bright. Ever since the Eighteenth Century in England, chintzes have hung (often unlined) in the drawing rooms of great houses. Today chintz has taken a new turn, while relinquishing none of its former distinction. By the Everglaze process, it has achieved a satiny surface which can be wiped clean, is sunfast, washable and not apt to wrinkle. This makes it practical for hard-wear rooms such as nurseries and kitchens. But it is still a decorative asset to formal rooms. Beginners in housekeeping will find these Everglaze chintzes suited to every part of the house. All three are 36 " wide and $$ 1.50$ a yard. Made by Kandell. # My little Indians

WTooden Indians, or rather their great granddaddies, were the darlings of the Seventeenth Century. They were one and all of English origin and date back to tobacco's earliest days, the first actual Black Boy (to give him his proper title) dating from 1614. They were also known at the time as "Virginians," England's first and finest tobaccos having come from Virginia.

That America, in those days, was famed for its Indians, was a fact known to pretty nearly everyone. Likewise, it was generally known that Negro youths worked on the plantations. Thus, the carvers of these figures hit upon a happy compromise. The result: a beguiling little black boy, some two or more feet in height, garbed in redskin fashion, with a headdress and apron of tobacco leaves painted in brilliant colors. In his extended right hand he usually held small clay pipes, while neatly tucked under his left arm were carved rolls of tobacco leaves. Encircling his neck, in most cases, was a narrow colored band. This bore a tag or medallion, the symbol of the brand of tobacco advertised. Oak was the usual wood employed in fashioning these little boys, though now and again they were hewn from elm and occasionally birch. Their accustomed post was outside a tobacconist's door, several feet above the pavement, though sometimes they stood inside on the counter. Their owners often looked on them as mascots. To prevent theft, the "Boys" were fastened with a chain and padlock. Though a certain resemblance to their fellows exists throughout this friendly tribe, each boasts a distinction all his own.

In those days, signs were even more important than they are now. For houses then had no numbers, but were known by their own special emblems. A bunch of wooden grapes hung in front of a tavern and a wheat sheaf was the sign of a baker. The blue ball was a mercer's sign, and a knife advertised a cutler. Glovers hung out huge metal hands, while grocers favored sugar loaves. The barber's trademark was a shaving dish and the blacksmith's an enormous horseshoe. A carved and painted sheep was the woolen merchant's symbol; and a key of gigantic proportions the emblem of the locksmith.

Animals, birds and fish all played roles as shop signs, along with those of insects, (Continued on page 186)

The charm of the small living room, above, derives from the various collections that cover the walls, table tops and bookcases. The two wooden Indians flanking the Queen Anne clock are good examples of tobacco figures. On the walls hang montages in which Mr. Shaw combines playing cards with old colored prints. Hanging beneath the cupboard, right, is an ancient sign that once hung over the doorway of a Paris glove shop. Below it crouches a South African wood lion; on the top of the cupboard is one of the smallest Scotsmen ever made.

Set for a party

The apartment of an artist who lives in two rooms and likes to give informal dinners

Mr. Michael Lowe decorated his New York apartment primarily as a setting for entertaining. Since he works during the week in the art department of a magazine and spends week ends out of town, either flying or skiing, the amount of time he uses his apartment is negligible, and that mainly at night. So he planned a décor that would look its best under artificial light, using a formula popular with night clubs, of dark walls and subdued lighting. This formula also served to minimize the undistinguished architectural features of a remodeled brownstone, and made it possible for Mr. Lowe to obtain a rich effect without expensive accessories. To bring in a bit of the outdoors of which he is so fond, he has filled his window sills with pots of ivy, and, on a large folding screen, reproduced a jungle scene after a painting by the French primitive artist. Henri Rousseau. Next to the screen, augmenting its leafy character, he has placed a large plant. While glamorizing his apartment, Mr. Lowe has seen to it that each piece of furniture serves a purpose, sometimes two. The cushions of his pigskin couch, for example, are covered underneath with ticking so they can be turned to form an extra bed when one is needed.

MAKING THE MOST OF A LITTLE SPACE
With the exception of two Chinese tables, the furniture in the narrow living room is placed near the walls to increase sense of space, and to allow a traffic lane from kitchen to bar table between the windows.

Frederick Gutheim outlines the four phases of family life

and tells you how to plan for them

THE EARLY YEARS: TWO YEARS TO PLAN FOR FORTY

Between the moment you say " $I d o$ " and the arrival of a hospital nurse bearing the red-faced, wrinkled-up bundle that is yours, you have-so the punch cards saysomething on the average of two years. These brief early years are your chance to prepare for the 40 years of family living that lie ahead. They are your chance to learn how to get the most from family living, to avoid its pitfalls, to enjoy its pleasures. Some would even say in these years lies your only chance. The earlier experiences of courtship can be written off as a dead loss-interesting, even memorable, but irrelevant as a background to family living. With the arrival of your first baby, you will have embarked on a new career so full of the immediate and demanding NOW, there is little time for the past, the future or even for regrets!

During the early years, husband and wife should decide what they want as nearly as they can. Your goals for family living cannot be a self-centered, individualistic catalog of interesting things you want to do. Husband and wife must plan together. Both want a large number of things. Each must share sacrifices and responsibilities. If you want to enjoy the security and the happiness of family living, you must face from the beginning the fact that each of you will have to give up some things you individually want so that you may have what you want together.

Don't rush off with the idea that you can plan the early years as one neat package. Up to a point you can-and should. But take a quick look at the whole span of family living. The estimated 40 years of marriage divide themselves into four periods, three of almost equal length. Each has a form and a flavor of its own. Each has its own problems, its own potentialities. If you master the problems, you can make the most of what each period offers. That's the "why" of your planning. So much for the early years.

Now come the crowded years, lasting from the birth of your first child until the

If you have three children and space them two years apart, you can readily calculate that one-third of your whole married life will be domenated by the cares and responsibilities of preschool chilldree in the home. You will learn that the house belongs to those who live in it, and especially to your children. Next come the peak years, lasting until the youngest child has left school and gone to work, or has married and left home. This is the time of teen-agers, a period of hollow legs, intense social life, approaching adulthood and courtship. Finally come the later years, which average a third of your life, and are steadily being lengthened by medical science. During these the husband and wife are apt to be alone again.

To make the most of your money, your time and the space you have to live in. the early years ought to be used for learning and preparation. Concentrate on mastering the budget, the schedule and the plan. These will be with you the rest of your life. Budgets help you get more for your money. Schedules help you get more time. Planning helps you make the most of the space you have to live in. But to use these tools to advantage you have to know what your family wants out of living. The early years are the time to make your decisions, to establish goals for living, to set the patterns, form the habits, buy the equipment, learn the things that will carry you to these goals.

Build on this foundation securely. Make your reality match your hopes. Your own thinking, requirements and plans are the

It will change from time to time with different activities, as your needs change. Your house will be planned to minimize waste and will contain no unused space. It will make each household activity convenient. It will be divided into centers of family living. It will have a work center, a living center and sleeping areas, no matter if there is one room or many. It will have a place for play and for repose, places for getting together and for being alone. All this will be your house, whether you rent, buy or build-if you know what you want, if you plan it that way.

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE SPILLMAN, owners

GORDON DRAKE, architect

YToung marrieds often think only in terms of renting, because owning their own house seems hazardous while their future is still unsettled. But many young people have found that if they build a simple little house patterned to the needs of other young couples (as well as their own) it can be sold without difficulty when more space is needed. This house in Los Angeles by Gordon Drake is a case in point. It was designed for one couple, built by another and is now owned by Mr. and Mrs. George Spillman. Although frankly money-saving, the house is not a scaleddown version of more affluent living. Instead, it concentrates on the essentials, and even makes a by a large masonry pier containing an ash pit for the fireplace. A fireproof closet ( $21 / 2$ by $51 / 2$ feet) for water heater, gas and electric meters, also has a storage rack for garden furniture.

virtue of its economies. The property was inexpensive, a pocket of thickly wooded land cornered by rock cliffs on the north side of a precipitously steep road. To avoid a dark ground floor, and because the buildable area was just 30 by 35 feet, the house was raised high into the tree-tops for sun, view and privacy. The main floor is only 15 by 39 feet, but few partitions, much glass, variations in ceiling height, built-in furniture and a balcony extend its dimensions. The materials are simple-fir, plywood, hardboard and brick-but they are used with an imagination which, together with its ingenious design, won Second Prize in House & Garden's 1947 Awards in Architecture.

THE UPPER LEVEL is two main rooms separated by a partition containing a bookcase and desk on the living room side and a headboard on the bedroom side with a sliding door at one end. A tiny garden terraced into the hill opens off the bedroom.

LIVING ROOM is high in the treetops, open to the sun and view, but hidden from the road. It gains space from its full-length balcony and a series of different ceiling heights which focus the eye outdoors. Bedroom is at the right.

anchored at one end to a ledge in the cliff, the living story is supported at the other end by wood posts braced with plywood. From carport level, the road rises 8 feet to the hill back of the house. A ramp makes a bridge to the entrance.

A house for the crowded years

A couple with young children discovered where

to spend and where to save in a small house

THe Bliss Moores have found that sound planning is as good as found money, if the planning is realistic. In 1944 they could find nothing to rent and little with which to build, but their two-year-old son, Bliss, had to have a home. So the Moores took inventory. Their limited budget was balanced by the following assets: a two-and-a-halfacre property bordering Lake Washington, just 20 minutes from Mr . Moore's Seattle office; a willingness to do part of the work themselves; and a foresight into how they wanted to live now and later on when their family and budget expand. Architect Moore's interim answer is the minimum house shown on these four pages. It will retire to the role of guest cottage when they build a larger house for themselves higher up on the hill. Since children dominate the schedule of the growing young family, the Moores' major investment was in good mechanical appliances which will also serve the future house. The structure, built around this core, is of simple local materials in stock sizes chosen for economy and easy upkeep. But the plan is what makes it work. Comfortable living is combined with an intensive use of space (five rooms in about 18 by 40 feet). The house cost $$ 5$ a square foot to build in 1944. The design received special Honorable Mention in House & Garden's 1947 Awards in Architecture. More information on page 188.

owner-architect

THIS HOUSE, with its warm, unassuming quality, is keyed to a growing tradition of informal living which is especially successful in the Northwest. During the outdoor season, Mrs. Moore serves dinner out on the terrace which overlooks the lake.

BARN RED board-and-batten walls and clear yellow trim look cheerful in Seattle's frequent foggy winter days. The informal landscaping by Cash M. Beardsley, is appropriate to the setting, requires little care.

LIving room is large for so small a house, faces 15 feet of glass wall to the lake view through the trees. Open on two sides, the fireplace lends cheer to living room and kitchen alike. Utility room and kitchen may be closed off with curtains of split bamboo suspended from a ceiling track. There are bright color accents: emerald green chairs in the living room, persimmon counters in the kitchen.

Small house, left, does not meun small living. The entrance is sheltered and does not open smack into the generous-sized living room. In bedrooms, at the opposite end of the house, sound is muffled by closet walls. The passage from living room to bedrooms was made extra wide to hold a laundry, workshop, cabinets, bulky storage and seating space for the breakfast counter, which separates the hallway from the kitchen (detailed analysis is on page 188). The angled wall borrows unused bathroom space for storage in bedroom.

A house for the peak years

Because it adjusts gracefully to the varying needs of three age groups, this house offers many ideas for families with teen-age children. It won an Honorable Mention in House & Garden's 1947 architectural awards.

this house, high in the Marin Hills, 20 miles north of San Francisco, affords the most complete kind of living today. Cheerfully dualistic in personality, it turns inward to a pool, opens outward to a view of Mt. Tamalpais. It spreads its wings around patio and pool to break prevailing winds; lets you step outdoors from major rooms. Designed for Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Dettner by Albert Henry Hill, the house appears on our cover.

FROM ITS HIGH PLATEAU the house has a wide-angled view of surrounding mountains; but from the drive below all you can see is the long sweep of eaves topping the bank.

Zoned two ways:

for companionship within the family,

for privacy of the individual

MANY yardsticks have been devised to measure a good house, but the best rule of thumb is to ask the people who live in one. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Dettner, whose house in Ross, California, appears on these six pages, feel that they have exactly what they want, a house that holds the essentials of good living. "It is friendly and welcoming. We think it is beautiful," they say. Although not large for a family of five-parents, two teen-age boys and a grown son-it uses its natural assets to make the house seem large. And every member of the family has a share of privacy.

The architect, Albert Henry Hill, understood the owners' desire that their house afford easy companionship within the family. He designed the patio as an outdoor common room at the heart of the house. Also recognized was the parallel need for privacy. The three bedrooms are widely dispersed and have separate entrances. Near the pool the youngsters have a playroom which serves as their living and guest room. It has a soda fountain and laboratory for "ham" radio.

Nearly half the house is outside of its walls. The Dettners asked for a layout with as many outdoor rooms as their hilltop would hold. Except for the three bedrooms and kitchen, inside and out seem to merge. Architect Hill has used various devices to heighten the illusion. He has allowed the paving of garden paths to continue indoors as the floor of sunroom, entrance hall and passage to kitchen. Flagstone patio steps pass through the house to the terrace on the other side. Sheltering eaves are extensions of ceilings. A panorama of the valley and mountains, captured by 76 feet of glass walls, stretches out on two sides.

The house is wedded to the land. Color and texture of materials are true to the rocks and trees of the hillside. Warm tones of redwood, cedar and pine are in character with the trees of the property. Gray-gold Carmel stone echoes the shale bank behind the house.

Entertaining is easy because the house adapts itself to large or small parties with equal grace. Often parents and children entertain simultaneously: the former at the sunroom bar, the latter at the playroom soda fountain. Their friends like the house so well that the Dettners entertain frequently. A guest cottage is planned for a point below the house (see plot plan).

Glass walls on two sides of the living room parallel two views: one is expansive, the other intimate.

broad view of Mt. Tamalpais is the focus of the living room. Pine ceiling, stained dull gold, extends qutside as 8 -foot sunshade for terrace and windows. Away from the sun, at left, is a sounding wall for the piano.

INTIMATE VIEW of patio and pool is pleasant contrast to panorama of mountains. This is the quiet part of the house, separated from the playroom by the width of the patio. Row of columns and flagstone flooring indicate passage to east wing. It by-passes the living area. Glass flower shelves are set in masonry wall.

MASTER BEDROOM with recessed fireplace makes a pleasant sitting-room retreat. The colors-gray, rose, green and café-au-lait-harmonize with the natural tones of wood and stone.

DRESSING ROOM off master bedroom is also guest powder room. It may be reached from entrance hall by a short passage lined with coat closets. Windows face redwood grove.

SUN ROOM was intended for morning meals only, but the Dettners like it so well that all indoor meals are served here. Glass panels, curtains, separate it from living room.

MASTER bathroom is in a compact block ( $28^{\prime} \times 13^{\prime}$ ) including dressing room and two bathrooms. Storage ( $150 \mathrm{sq} . \mathrm{ft}$.) acts as soundproofing between bedrooms.

Graceful living and limited space are seldom boon companions. But they get on IT famously in Mr. and Mrs. A. Freydberg's fieldstone Colonial house. Designed for the owners after their three sons had married, it is small because they wanted less upkeep, less responsibility in the years ahead. They wanted to be free to travel, to come and go. At the same time they wanted a house of grace and character. They have achieved it here. Good floor planning and site planning provide amenities to turn household wheels smoothly, eliminate friction points. The entrance hall acts as a buffer to outside activity; the living room is where it cannot be a traffic lane; a pantry bars kitchen noises and odors from the adjoining rooms. The sleeping wing, segregated from general rooms for quiet, has ample storage, a bath for each bedroom.

You can avoid expensive alterations by learning the shorthand of blueprints before your house is built. First place a pencil at the entrance, walk it into your plan and travel from room to room, analyzing details in relation to your pattern of living. Plot traffic lines, and see that areas requiring privacy are off the beaten path, while those most heavily used are most easily reached. It takes an automatic water heater to feed the extra needs of automatic washers. The gas-

fired Rheem model in this modern laundry room is where streamlined housekeeping begins.   better KIOOW YOLR HOT WATER

These cold facts about hot water will help you to get the most out of the new antomatic washers...

By

R.C. Dames

The new laundry and dishwashing machines are fully automatic. Push a button or turn a knob-that's all you do.

But the convenience they give you is tied up closely with your hot water supply. If you have to light up an old-fashioned heater, wait for the water to get hot, then find it turns lukewarm after your machines get going-or there's not enough to go around for all the hot water taps, your labor-saving system is not going to save much labor.

So before you buy any automatic washing devices, be sure to get automatic hot water first. The new automatic water heaters are as compact, self-operating, and easy-to-install as the appliances they will serve. And, in most cases, they'll cost you a lot less too.

Dial For Degree

Take the Rheem for example. You can put one in your kitchen, basement, laundry, bathroom. Once installed, the thermostat control is set to the temperature you want. Say, $140^{\circ}$. And from that point on, you needn't go near the heater again.

The Rheem-Processed corrosion-resistant tank is always filled with a reservoir of hot water; ready at a moment's notice. Here's why.

As You Like It Suppose your water heater has a 30 gallon tank. And you draw 20 gallons for a wash. Upstairs, Junior is taking a bath and he draws off 10 gallons more. Does this mean if anyone else wants hot water he'll have to wait because you've already used up the 30 gallon capacity? The answer is no-the Rheem will continue to heat up incoming cold water at the rate of 42 gallons an hour.

He Wise, Check Size

How much hot water you will get depends upon how big a tank you buy. And this, in turn, depends upon how many washing appliances you use and how big your family and house are. Your plumber can tell you exactly what size to buy. As for the upkeep, it costs no more per gallon to operate a big water heater tank than a small one. Rheem makes automatic water heaters in a variety of prices and sizes for electricity,oilandall types of gas including the "bottled" type. A new Rheem electric Table Top model, that looks like a cabinet, fits into your kitchen snug against the wall.

Mother's Helper

SHIRRED EGGS WITH CHEESE
(Courtesy Just a Minute by Alice Wilson Richardson-The Procyon Press)
Toast bread on one side, butter well and place, toasted side up, in individual buttered ramekins. Edge each slice with $1 / 2$-inch strips of Gruyère or rattrap cheese. Break eggs into each, sprinkle with salt, pepper and curry powder. Bake in a hot over ( $425^{\circ} \mathrm{F}$ ) for about 10 minutes.

BISCUIT-HAM ROLL

Mix packaged biscuit dough as directed for standard biscuits and roll into an oblong $1 / 8$-inch thick. Brush lightly with melted butter and spread with 1 cup chopped boiled ham. Roll lengthwise like a jelly roll and slice into $1 / 2$-inch rounds. Bake in a hot oven until browned. Serve hot.

Frozen salad

Partially thaw a package of mixed frozen vegetables (it contains peas, corn, string beans, limas) and place in a wooden salad bowl. Drain once to get rid of melting ice crystals. Serve cold enough to be still crunchy with a sharp garlicky French dressing. Or, if you want different proportions, buy the individual peas, corn, etc., packages and combine as you prefer, not forgetting that cauliflower and broccoli are good raw, too.

EMERALD SOUP

(Courtesy A Meal in Itself by Mar Frost Mabon-Duell, Sloan & Pearce
Stem and wash 2 lbs . spinach. Put in an electric mixer $1 / 2$ cup canned chick. en broth, $1 / 4$ clove mashed garlic and $1 / 2$ of a small onion chopped as fine as possible. Turn to low speed and begin adding spinach leaves till mixture thickens, then cream it at high speed. Pour into double boiler and begin again with 1 cup milk, 1 cup light cream and the rest of the spinach, added slowly and churned first slow then fast. Add second batch to first, season, put in a piece of floured butter the size of a walnut. Heat slowly, then simmer for 5 minutes.

HUSSAR SALAD

Cut into juliemne strips 5 thin slices of boiled ham, 5 thin slices of tongue (canned will do), $1 / 2 \mathrm{lb}$. Gruyère cheese, 4 anchovy fillets, whites of 3 hardboiled eggs (save the yolks for the sauce). Mix in a salad bowl with the tender leaves of a large head of chicony cut into 1 -inch lengths, and serve with:

SAUCE VERTE

Mash in a bowl, with wooden spoon or pestle, 3 hard-boiled egg yolks. Add $1 / 2$ clove, scraped garlic, a scant tsp. salt,

1 tsp. coarse-ground black pepper and 2 tsps. dry English mustard. Blend well. Moisten with a little olive oil and a tbsp. tarragon vinegar to a mayonnaise consistency. Now add a cup of sour cream which has been passed through a sieve with 6 large, bright green spinach leaves, and mix well. If a larger quantity is desired, this sauce can be eked out successfully with bottled mayonnaise, preferably the unsweetened kind.

CAFÉ BRÛLOT

Pare the colored rind (avoiding the white) from $1 / 2$ an orange and $1 / 4$ of a lemon. Place in a metal bowl with 2 sticks of broken cinnamon, 6 lumps sugar, 8 whole cloves and $1^{1 / 2}$ demitasses of brandy. Warm over flame and ignite brandy, ladling it back and forth as it burns to extract maximum aroma from the spices. Extinguish the flame by pouring in 4 demitasses of extrastrong black coffee.

marmalade cake

Slice ordinary light fruitcake like a loaf of bread (easier if it's slightly stale). Spread both sides of each slice with marmalade, sticking each slice to the previous one, as you spread it. When the entire cake has thus been cut apart and reconstructed, press together from both ends and tie it around with string. Place in a buttered baking dish, moisten with a wineglass of dark rum and bake in the oven till outside is browned and the marmalade caramelized (about $1 / 2$ hour). Add another dash of rum before serving either hot or cold.

CHICKEN PAPRIKA
Cut two large Bermuda onions into rings and cook in olive oil in a large, heavy iron saucepan until soft but not browned. Put in two small broilers cut as for a fricassee, with salt, pepper and a heaping tablespoon of paprika. Moisten with about a tumblerful of liquid composed of tomato paste dissolved in bouillon in the proportion of a tablespoon to a cup. Add more liquid as needed, turning chicken and scraping the pan. Remove pieces to a hot platter when very tender, add half a pint of heavy sour cream, bring sauce almost to a boil and pour over chicken. Serve with ribbon noodles or hominy.

EGGS LUCIFER

Place eggs in boiling water and remove pan immediately from fire. They will be coddled after about 12 minutes, but they will not overcook if left in the water longer. When you are ready for them place a spoonful of deviled ham in the bottom of the cup. then break the eggs on top.

In return you will want to have them for dinner, yet not spend too much time in the kitchen. We therefore suggest a series of small, special menus, quick to make, based on the following maxims: a) serve only three dishes per meal; b) specialize in easy, inexpensive fruit desserts; c) perfect three basic recipes each of which can be the mainstay of two different menus, thus enlarging your repertoire to six meals.

carding only the tough sections of stem. Cut into medium-sized slices and place in a large saucepan with butter the size of an egg. Heat slowly, turning carefully, until limp but not browned. Smooth in a tablespoon of flour and, as it cooks, thin out with light cream, allowing for plenty of extra sauce. Add a bouillon cube for flavor, but no salt. The cooked ham (baked Virginia is best) should be in 2-inch long strips cut from $1 / 4$-inch-thick slices. Let it heat well but do not cook it. Season with black pepper and a tablespoon of sherry. Serve in the following shell:

Cut the top off of a loaf of unsliced white bread and save it as a lid. Scoop out the soft interior of the loaf, butter shell and lid on all sides and place in a hot oven until golden-brown.

DIPPED STRAWBERRIES

Prepare large, firm berries by wiping with a damp cloth, but do not hull. On each plate put a mound of powdered sugar and, in the middle of it, set a liqueur glass of rum. Arrange strawberries around the edge for your guests to dip, dust in the sugar and eat with their fingers.

WEST INDIAN BANANAS

cup of rum before serving hot, and flame as they go to the table.

SHRIMPS LOUISIANA
Chop two medium-size onions fine and simmer in butter. Smooth in 1 tbsp. flour and brown. Add 3 broken, peeled tomatoes, a whole green pepper minced very fine and about 1 tbsp. each of finechopped parsley and scallions. Season with salt, pepper and, depending on how hot you like it, cayenne or Bouquet Creole. Allow to cook down for 20 minutes, add 2 lbs . frozen shrimp (thawed and cleaned), simmer another 20 minutes. Add $1 / 2$ tbsp. Worcestershire before serving with boiled rice.

GRILLED PEACHES

Peel and halve ripe freestone peaches. Dip each half in a thick syrup made of equal parts of sugar and water brought to a boil. Arrange pit side up in a buttered baking dish and pour the remaining syrup over them. Grill under broiler, dust lightly with cinnamon and serve hot with cold sour cream.

PINEAPPLE WITH STRAWBERRIES
Quarter a large pineapple lengthwise, leaving the green leaves attached to the quarters. Remove core of each section with a sharp knife, then run blade as close to the rind as possible to separate pulp in one piece. Cut this piece once again lengthwise and then across, leaving the slices in place. Top with fresh strawberries marinated in Dubonnet.

How to buy

POTS AND PANS

Today's bride has a wide selection of good kitchenware. Armed with specific shopping pointers and knowledge of the care utensils require, she can determine the types she wants to buy. Here House & Garden describes the kinds of utensils available, their idiosyncrasies and supplementary know-how for keeping them in good condition.

storage. Hang up utensils if you have the room. If you must stack them, do it carefully, put similar ones together and place the most frequently used ones well forward in the storage space. Partitioned drawers and cupboards are convenient for filing shallow pans and covers upright.
heat. Don't use too much heat on any utensil. It may bulge or warp the bottom. If you're cooking with gas, the flame should never flare up around the sides. On electric ranges, use the element best fitted to the size of your pot. In either case, keep the heat low, don't try to hurry the cooking; more pots and pans are ruined by high heat than by hard usage. Be very careful not to heat empty utensils or let them boil dry. Always keep handles away from the flame and turned from the edge of the stove to protect them and prevent accidents. cleaning. Don't use coarse abrasives, scratchy powders or harsh alkaline soaps. These injure the fine surfaces. So do metal spoons or knives used as scrapers. Get in the habit of using wooden spoons for stirring, too; they prevent scratches. Hot water and soap or a detergent (soapless cleanser) is all you need for ordinary cleaning. Fine steel wool or a mild scouring powder speeds up the removal of stubborn stains.

Aluminum is made in a variety of finishes: highly polished, satin or frosted. Choose good weight, avoiding very thin stamped types which will warp and dent easily.
Care: Aluminum needs only soap-and-water and a little preventive care to keep it at its best. When food has stuck to the pot, rub with fine steel wool, cleanser pads or mild scouring powder. To remove burned-on food, fill the utensil with warm water, boil a few minutes, scrape loose with a wooden spoon or rubber scraper. Discoloration caused by alkaline foods is removed by cooking acid foods like tomatoes, rhubarb, or by boiling a weak vinegar solution in the utensil a few minutes until it brightens. To get rid of hard-water scale, use the vinegar solution. Clean thoroughly and dry well to prevent pitting. caution: Don't let foods stand in aluminum utensils or soak them in water for long periods; it discolors, dulls and pits the finish. Never use soda, lye, ashes, ammonia or any washing compound that contains a strong alkali. These may injure and darken surfaces. Avoid the use of sharp metal spoons or scrapers.

Enamel is glass fused on metal and therefore should be given the same care as glass and china-and it's just as easy to clean.

ENAMELWARE

Choose a good quality, it pays in the end. The heavy coated is sturdiest and stain-resistant; thinly-coated types chip and blister quickly. One brand has measured gradations inside saucepans; a new type features heavy rustproofed bare steel bases for faster heating.
care: Washing with soap and water is best. When food sticks or burns on, put utensil to soak a short while and then wash. If food still clings, use a mild household cleanser, never scrape enamel with metal or steel wool. Stubborn stains can be rubbed with a paste of baking soda and water.
caution: Avoid intense heat and use wooden spoons and forks for stirring. Take care not to knock this ware against faucets, hit it on hard surfaces or strike with metal spoons. Harsh abrasives take off the luster and roughen the surface. Don't plunge a hot enamel pot into cold water; let it cool before washing.

GLASSWARE

Glass for oven baking and top-of-the-range use is sturdy enough to withstand ordinary handling. The transparency of glass lets the cook watch the contents.
CARE: Wash with soap or detergent and water, followed by thorough rinsing. A mild household cleaner will take off any white film left by starchy foods. Burned-on particles can be removed with a water-baking soda soaking. Ovenware is easier to wash if greased before use.
Caution: Don't subject glass to sudden changes in temperature. It will break if you set a piping hot pot in cold water or on a cold surface. It will break if you drop or knock it against hard surfaces. Always see that there is liquid in the utensil before setting it over heat and never start it over intense heat. Don't let it boil dry or heat cans of food in glass. Topstove ware used on new model electric ranges should be protected by the use of a metal or wire rack underneath.

Stainless steel, expensive but long-lasting, won't scratch or dent easily, rust, corrode or discolor. Some brands have a heat-conducting core between two sheets of steel or are copper-clad on the bottom for quick, even heating.
care: The occasional use of a mild household cleanser brings up the luster, otherwise soap-and-water with thorough rinsing and careful drying is all that's needed. Brownish stains, showing that too high a heat has been used, can be removed with a mild scouring powder. Acid foods sometimes cause stains but they can be removed with a mild cleanser. Copper-clad bottoms take regular cleaning plus special treatment recommended for copper (see below).
caution: Low heat is a must. Plastic knobs and handles used on these pots and pans will blister if utensil is put in a very hot oven or under a high broiler heat.

COPPER

Copper is the best conductor of heat and lasts indefinitely when properly handled. Utensils are generally lined with pure block tin which wears off in time and must be relined as soon as any signs of copper show through. Solid bronze handles are on the best pieces.
CARE: Soap-and-water is sufficient for cleaning the interior, but the exterior requires polishing fairly often as it is discolored by heat and exposure to air. Special cleansers (Samae, Buckeye, RubLess) or a paste of flour, salt and lemon or vinegar brighten it. Copper should be rinsed well, dried thoroughly and polished to a luster with a soft cloth.
caution: Never scour the lining with steel wool or abrasive powders if you want it to last. Watch for any signs of corrosion or verdigris. Be sure to have liquid in a copper pan before setting it over heat. Copper must be kept scrupulously clean to prevent tarnish and should be stored carefully to prevent denting.

CAST IRON

Skillets, chicken fryers, griddles and Dutch ovens are the most useful utensils available in this medium. They absorb and hold the heat well. Most modern ironware sold today is "pre-seasoned" at the factory to save you the trouble of removing the anti-rust lacquer coating put on this type of ware.
Care: Check when you buy ironware to find out if it has been pre-seasoned. If so, simply scour, wash with hot soapy water, rinse and dry well. When ready to use, wipe inside of the pot and the cover with a paper towel, grease lightly before putting food in it to cook. Charred foodstuff can be removed by soaking in a hot soda solution, bring to a boil. This loosens grease and food. Wash with hot suds, using a stiff brush.
cadtion: Cast iron must be cleaned well and dried thoroughly before storing. If put away carelessly dried, it will rust. Should this happen, the utensil must be seasoned-scoured well to remove rust, then covered inside and out with unsalted fat and heated for several hours in a warm oven. The metal absorbs the fat which protects the surface. Don't cover an iron pot when not in use, or it may gather moisture.

What every bride should know about wine

You don't have to be a connoisseur to understand the basic wine categories. They fall into these five groups: 1 . The appetizer wines (sherry, vermouth). 2. White wines (sauterne. Rhine wine). 3. Red wines (claret, Burgundy). 4. Dessert wines (port, muscatel, tokay and white port). 5. Sparkling wines (champagne and sparkling Burgundy). These are basic, but there are many additional members of each of the families, whose names indicate varying shades of richness, color and flavor. For instance, ca-

NATONAL DINTILLERS bernet is a red table wine of the claret family. When wines are described as "dry" it simply means that they are not essentially sweet in taste; rather, they are delicately tart and tangy. Claret and Burgundy, sauterne and Rhine are dry wines. The rule of thumb is to serve red wines with red meat and white with white meat, poultry and fish. But your taste should be your guide and if you prefer a red wine with chicken, don't feel embarrassed to serve it. When buying wine, estimate that one bottle of red or white will yield eight glasses. The sparkling wines, which are usually sold in bottles containing 24-26 ounces, will serve eight people. Wines aré perishable and once opened will keep for only two or three days, but appetizer and dessert wines which are fortified with spirits will keep indefinitely. The Standard Wine Cook Book, copyright 1948, by Anne Director (Doubleday & Co.) suggests the following wellbalanced, inexpensive "wine cellar" suitable for any occasion: two or three bottles of red table wines, claret or Burgundy; two to three bottles of white table wines, sauterne or Rhine wine; one bottle of sherry, for service as an appetizer or for refreshment; one bottle of port

If they have corks, bottles should at all times lie on their sides, so the wine touches the cork. This is especially important in the care of sparkling wines. If the wine bottles are capped, they may stand upright. American wines are generally less expensive than imported, and many of

GARDENER'S GEAR

Better tools can mean the difference between a garden that is a high spot or a headache in your life. They can prevent outdoor chores taking up all of your week-end time, or "by-the-hour" workmen using up all of your garden budget. By improving both the design and the performance of new garden equipment, manufacturers are making it possible for you to reduce both the time and the effort that goes into gardening. To accomplish this they have incorporated new features, new virtues and values in garden tools. Especially noteworthy are the use of lighter-weight materials, the widespread production of power-driven tools for small property use. As we show below, there are improvements in all kinds of equipment, from hand clippers for pruning shrubbery and sprinkling systems for lawns, to motor-driven hedge trimmers and mowers.

This Electrimmer (works on AC or DC current) lets electricity trim your hedge. Lightweight, for easy one-hand operation, 12 -inch blade cuts privet (or any hedge or bush) while it cuts hours from garden labor. ## OWENS - CORNING  Fhbergtas

To the old front porch of nostalgic memory, there have been added many new kinds of outdoor living areas as varied as the houses they surround. The Dettner house in Ross, California, offers three types: a wind-protected patio, a sunny living terrace and a private bedroom terrace shaded by the broad eaves of the house. The three kinds of outdoor areas are shown on these two pages and the cover.

FROM THE MOTOR COURT you have a glimpse of the living-dining terrace which faces the view (left). But from the serpentine drive below, the sharp rise of hill and a line of trees preserve its privacy. The long line of eaves, right, belongs to the car shelter. The wind-sheltered patio is entered by theredwood gate (center).

entrance gate to patio. A low, sheltering roof which is part of the rainy-day path from the carport, indicates the intimate scale of the patio beyond. It is screened at the entrance by a grape-stake fence and five-foot stone wall crowned by a flower trough. The main door to the house is across the patio, to the left.

THE PATIO is an outdoor living room walled in by the house and the steep bank behind it. Through parallel glass walls of the living room (at left) you can see Mt. Tamalpais, its tapering height contrasted by the long horizontal plane of ceiling and eaves. Path beside bedroom wing, right, leads to a redwood grove.

A private terrace opens off Mr. and Mrs. Dettner's bedroom. It fronts on a view of the valley and surrounding mountains underlined by the foliage of the hillside. Eaves extend 16 feet as a sheild against the intense summer sun. The exposed terrace, below, is paved with cross sections cut from redwood logs.

MID-WEST COLONIAL COTTAGE

SECOND FLOOR
this story-and-a-half, L-shaped house, designed by architects Magney, Tusler and Setter for Mrs. James Lane, has two special virtues. Its low lines and the way it spreads out in two wings suit a picturesque Colonial treatment. The plan also suits the cold winters and hot summers prevalent in Hopkins, Minnesota. At the northeast end of the ell, the garage takes the brunt of winter weather from the north, protects living parts of the house from it. At the southwest end, a large bay window, a screened porch, double doors leading to a terrace, open up the large living-dining room for summer weather. Two bedrooms on the first floor, one bedroom and bath above, fit it ideally to its owner and her two sons. Continued on page 187)

monsters, saints and the well-known balls of the pawnshop, derived from the Medici coat of arms, and dating back to the money-lending days of that powerful family.

To return to our little friends, their companions on my bookcases are, oddly enough, Scotsmen, honest Highland laddies, complete with kilt, sporran and mull. These date from the year 1725 and honored the cause of Bonnie Prince Charlie, the Young Pretender. A London snuff dealer, David Wishart, is believed to have been their originator, and the shops which they formerly adorned were all Jacobite rendezvous. Subsequent to the rebellion of 1745 , when Scottish nationality was frowned upon throughout England, the following news item made its appearance: "We hear that the dapper wooden Highlanders, who guard so heroically the doors of snuff-shops, intend to petition the Legislature, in order that they may be excused from complying with the act of Parliament with regard to their change of dress: Alleging that, they have ever been faithful subjects to his Majesty, having constantly supplied his guards with a pinch out of their mulls when they marched by them, and so far from engaging in any Rebellion, they have never entertained a rebellious thought; whence they humbly hone that they shall not be put to the expense of buying new cloaths."

These Scots in time became so popular that when Queen Victoria ascended the throne, one is said to have stood outside every snuff shop in Eng land; and we read in the History of Signboards: "Since the Highlander's love for snuff and whiskey was such that he wished to have a 'Ben Lomond of snuff, and a Loch Lomond of whiskey,' nobody could make a better pub-lic-house sign than the Highland Laddie, nor a better snuff-shop sign than the kilted Highlander who stands generally at the door of these establish ments."

The Eighteenth Century saw these signs at their height of favor and even until 1850 survivals were in evidence. Gradually, however, with the passage of laws against street signs, they fell from popular esteem. Many were burned, while others doubtless were taken down, broken up and forgotten. In certain families they passed from father to son for generations. Then, with the changes that began sweeping the world, they virtually disappeared from sight.

Such is the story of my little Black Boys. I started my collection in the autumn of 1930, while living in London, which city incidentally was the source of the vast majority. Before World War II, I knew of only one left still doing duty in all England's capital. Now I believe there is none. In the process of unearthing them, I walked London from end to end, and believe that in this labor of love I came to know that wondrous town as few Londoners do. For the habitat of these little Black Boys is off the beaten path.

mechanical heart of Bliss Moore's house is its 27 -foot utility corridor, which teams up with the kitchen for easy housekeeping. The breakfast counter has seating space on the hall side, and continues into the kitchen as a work counter. Mrs. Moore, fixing dinner, can chat over the counter-top with Mr. Moore, busy at corridor work-bench. Storage was carefully planned-cupboards above and below the kitchen counters house food and cooking utensils; Mr. Moore keeps his tools in cabinets above and below the work-bench. The large broom closet is handy to all parts of the house. Trunks and luggage are stored in an alcove at one end of the hall. The ironing board folds out of the way, is in a cool, well-lit spot. Because the laundry trays and the automatic washer are next to the hot-water tank, they get hot water almost instantly. Sliding curtains of durable split bamboo close the living room off from the kitchen and utility corridor.

How to design

A SMALL PROPERTY

BY MARY DEPUTY LAMSON

Along-bange plan for your entire property should be considered from the time the land is bought, through all the blueprint stages of the house itself. Starting to worry about the outside after the house is done is shortsighted and almost inevitably results in unnecessary and expensive compromises.

In the two properties shown here and on pages 126 and 127 the principles of designing for comfort, individual taste and efficient maintenance have been applied with very different results. Both are about an acre in size. One is planned for a family whose desire for informality and great simplicity of upkeep are dominating factors. The house is set so as to concentrate all the service and semi-public areas, and to reduce them to a minimum. The rest of the property is given over to open lawns, enclosed by plantings of self-maintaining shrubs and trees. A small flower garden is on a visual axis from the living-terrace. It is far enough away to allow seclusion, and for occasional lapses in its grooming to be overlooked. The gardener-by-the-day can maintain this place in about two days a week.

The other place is designed to fit a family whose life tends to greater formality, with more elaborate gardens, larger service requirements. The house is set far to one side of the land to allow room for cutting and vegetable gardens, drying yard and play space in a large area, well screened from the more decorative gardens. The whole layout, with its trimmed hedges and large formal garden, makes this place one to be kept immaculate, needing at least a full-time gardener with occasional additional help from either the family or outside labor.

The costs of landscaping vary greatly with the kind of land, whether sand, clay, rich soil or rocky; on local labor available; and on the actual layout. In general, a complete landscape development over a period of years will cost from a fifth to a third of the total cost of the house and land. Of these two places the informal one will come close to the lower limit, and the formal one will probably reach a full third of the house cost. These figures always startle the prospective builder, but a good bookkeeping job, from the time of first rough grading to the last bit of planting, is likely to prove their accuracy. The advantage of well-planned landscape work is that it appreciates in value as plants grow. For that reason alone careful landscape planning more than pays for itself.

To be successful, the design of home grounds must fit a man-made object (the house) into nature-made land, forms and plants so that the combination seems inevitable and attractive. It must enable the family to live outdoors comfortably. Building a large and expensive house on inadequate footage is always regrettable, as families today live out-of-doors more and more. The kind of land should also be considered in relation to the architecture of the house. To people who like a handsome Georgian house-open rolling lawns, traditional formal gardens and restrained planting are axiomatic. If wooded, rocky, irregular property is selected, it either defeats the end in view completely or makes it unreasonably expensive, with clearing and regrading. On the other hand, this same site would be ideal for the rambling house of a family whose way of life is considerably more casual and informal.

Often, however, land available in a desirable neighborhood limits choice so greatly that both the type and amount of it are less than perfect. Compromise in such cases is a challenge to the ingenuity. Every inch of space inside the house and out must be studied with the greatest care if the house will seem an anachronism in its setting.

Local zoning laws (in many communities mistakenly) may dictate the distance of the house from the street. In closely-settled suburban areas this space is usually treated as semi-public and should be planned so that it frames and enhances the house itself from the street. Open lawns, with a few specimen shade or flowering trees, are the basic planting. If service areas (garage court, drying yard, vegetable garden) must be screened from the street, the screen should not be obvious, but form a part of the general lawn shape and plant composition. The treatment of this public area should, however, conform to the general neighborhood. If most of the houses have open lawns with no demarcation of property lines, an abrupt change to a tightly enclosed front lawn, however desirable for privacy, will be both unpopular and inconsistent with the feeling of spaciousness of the rest of the community. Similarly, if the house is in a wooded section with other houses hardly visible from the road, complete clearing to open lawns is likely to look startlingly bare and even unfinished.

With the amount of land given over to the semi-public area dictated by law, the use of the rest of the property should be analyzed in the same way an architect determines the floor plans of your house. The service requirements of your family should be listed and adequately provided for. Unless each of them is planned from the first, you are likely to find the drying yard or its screen the "sore-thumb" of the entire property, or discover too late that guests have no place to leave a car, or delivery trucks cannot get anywhere near the house without destruction of lawn or planting. Approach to the front door in most communities is by motor, rather than afoot, so the central walk from the front door to the street or sidewalk is likely to be unused. Family guests land in the garage court and need a walk from the driveway instead of the street. Generally, even on a small property, the driveway should be wide enough for two cars to pass or to allow parking on one side. This means a 16 -foot width. If this is too broad an expanse of road surface to look well, the alternative is a court of proper size and shape to allow two or three cars to park without preventing either the owner's access to the garage or turning of incoming cars.

The size and location of the drying yard depend, of course, on the size and location of the laundry. Even if laundry is generally sent out weekly, provision should be made for occasional drying, or sunning and airing of household articles.

The cutting garden or border is a part of the utilitarian planning. It must have full sun and be placed where it is convenient to the service gardens and not visible from the main part of house or grounds. There are frequent days when every flower has been stripped from it to decorate the house, the church or the school, and that is always the time guests are impelled to inspect a border in too plain sight. For the same reason the tiny kitchen herb border or the larger vegetable garden should be planned to be inconspicuous in its untidy or bare seasons, but accessible to the service and working end of the house and grounds. For vanity's sake, too, the gardeners of the family will be less frequently embarrassed or annoyed if their less immaculate hours have a certain degree of privacy.

MAY GREENHOUSE CALENDAR

$\mathrm{L}^{\mathrm{t}}$r's not make the usual mistake of setting out all our seedling plants and then have none to replace those which die or are stunted. It is simple to save a few extra pots or hold some plants in the flats until we see how the transplants behave; and it makes the plantings look much more uniform and pleasing to have all spaces filled. Hold the extra plants in a cool house and run them dry, or carry them in a cold frame.

Young plants, moved directly from the greenhouse to the outdoor bed or garden, may suffer a tremendous setback if the weather turns bad. The same plants, hardened off in a cold frame, would be in much better physical condition to withstand transplanting. A week or ten days of hardening off may gain you a like amount of time by giving you stronger plants.

Many people buy young plants to be delivered by mail or express-even air express-from distant places. The shippers seldom are careless in packing; but often the plants arrive entirely dried out and in a sad way. Stand them in water until revived and then dip the roots into a thin mud bath before proceeding to set them out. Young plants sent by mail occasionally appear to be mildewed when shipped in an excessively damp condition. In this case, allow them to dry, then give their roots a mud bath. There is hardly time for mildewing in transit but if the plants have actually rotted, it is best to throw out the entire bundle. Disease is present and is very likely to be of a type which can do your greenhouse or garden no good.

If, as is not uncommon, sweet peas and other plants, indoors or out, are attacked by root aphids, mix tobacco dust into the soil close to the plants and water it in. Usually a nicotine solution or similar combatant is good when applied against the main root where it leads down into the soil, where the aphids are most likely to be. These pests are not easy to do away with and repeated and varied control measures may become necessary.

Sow bugs at times grow large and numerous in greenhouses. They may not do much damage to plants but they are unsightly and a nuisance. A poison bait seems the best way to kill them. Such a bait may be made of one teaspoonful of Paris green thoroughly stirred into one quart of bran and then one cup of water and two tablespoonfuls of molasses added. A little sugar will make the poison more attractive to the bugs. This is a damp mixture and may be scattered along the edge of the benches in small balls. The mixture loses strength in about 48 hours and may need to be renewed. Good results are obtained by placing bait beneath little pieces of wood or broken pot.

Morning glories come along earlier and faster when started in a greenhouse. If the soil is well fertilized, they will have few flowers. So always give them poor soil, preferably sandy. The only time they require watering is during extended dry periods.

To check rapid evaporation from potted soil and greenhouse benches, try mulching with peat moss or grass cuttings. Put on enough so the sun cannot get through to find the soil. Several thicknesses of newspaper (torn in strips) between the plants on benches will do the same thing.

Old Easter lilies that have died down may be set into the ground out-ofdoors and frequently come into bloom again before the summer is over. These are not hardy by any means nor are they suitable for forcing again. It is simply an easy way to get a second bloom without much work-something for nothing. Stand the potted lilies in the greenhouse so they dry thoroughly before being planted outdoors.

Once the purely practical and the semi-public parts of the property are arranged, the social life and personal tastes of the members of the household have free play in the rest of the place. If a house is a place to which to retreat only in the most inclement weather, the outdoors must be planned to accommodate almost all family activities. Certainly outdoor spaces for relaxing, entertaining, eating and playing must be provided. The invariable need is for a large outdoor living room, even two or three of them. The largest one is located immediately adjoining the living room of the house. For easy maintenance as well as comfort it should be hard-surfaced by paving in brick or flagstone. Sixteen feet in width is minimum to allow for pleasant grouping of heavy outdoor furniture. If it can be flush with and open to the lawn it seems more spacious and hospitable than raised above lawn level or bounded by hedge or wall. If this area is to be used for breakfast, lunch or tea it should have easy access from the kitchen or dining room, with protection from sun and wind for the season and time of day at which it is likely to be used. Other outdoor living rooms depend entirely on the family. If they like picnics, a secluded spot which gives the illusion of country makes outdoor meals much more fun.

For the housewife who likes to do as many household chores as possible in the open air, her own outdoor workliving room can allow for vegetable preparation, menu or garden planning or flower arranging. It may be an arbor or breezeway between house and garagé, a small terrace off the kitchen entrance or an odd little space tucked into any protected corner near the service end of the house.

Other general outdoor living space may include play areas. With small children, the present play equipment space should be planned so its later use as game court, cutting garden or picnic ground is taken into account in both location and development. Otherwise, as children outgrow confined play space, an odd bit of unused land is left over to become the clutter space or general problem child of years to come. For older sports-minded members of the family, the required dimensions of badiminton, paddle tennis, croquet, horseshoes, lawn bowls, should be considered in planning the whole place. An injudicious shrub mass or tree can spoil a good future game area by just a few feet. The beauty of an extra flower border may not compensate for the inconvenience of having all games either taboo or hazardous at home.

The size and kind of flower garden or borders depend on three factors. First, decide whether anyone in the family is a real garden enthusiast. Second, if upkeep is a major factor, a balance must be reached between a beautiful but labor-consuming garden and a simpler treatment given over mostly to shrubs and lawn. Third, the type of house and kind of living dictate the garden style. With an informal house and household the large symmetrically planned and planted formal garden is out of place.

significance of the service in this Abbey, it is in all essentials exactly the same as it would be for any cottager who might be married this afternoon in some small country church in a remote village . . . Love must always be unselfish, and unselfishness is the true secret of a happy married life."

For British people, more than a century of history was stirred into life by what the Archbishop said; a history of royal example, beginning with Queen Victoria's marriage, 108 years ago. That marriage, which set the example so important to British life, was romantic and beautiful, from the day when her husband wrote, "Observe in us a couple joined in love and unanimity.

Now Victoria is also ready to give up something for my sake. I everything for her sake."

For 40 years after the Prince's death, Queen Victoria was inspired by his memory. When her grandson, afterwards King George V, was married, the old Queen wrote, "Thank God! Georgie has got such an excellent, useful and good wife." That was in 1897. More than 40 years later, during the recent war, I sat in the house in London and heard Mr. Winston Churchill speaking of the present King and Queen. He said, "They have the rare talent of being able to make a mass of people realize, in a flash, that they are good." It was to a similar ideal that the Archbishop guided Princess Elizabeth and her husband a few months ago. You will notice that not once was happiness mentioned as the aim of married life. If happiness came, it was not an aim, but a result: a blessing from outside. It was not enough that marriage should make them happy; it had to make them great and good. You may be clever. You may be ambitious. You may think the aisle of the church is the highway to independence, jubilation, and self-aggrandisement. If this is true of your aims, then disappointment awaits you.

But these are still no more than words, and they seem to have the dull taste of advice . . . something we give and seldom take. So let us bring the word "unselfishness" down from the clouds and examine it. How do married people become unselfish? Some people are born with the virtue, others have to achieve it by hard work; to develop unselfishness as consciously as an athlete develops his muscles. It wasn't easy for Queen Victoria. When she married she was self-willed, jealous of authority and in love with her freedom. It is fascinating to trace through the letters of her first ten years of marriage, the evaporation of this dangerous pride. It evaporated because she was deeply in love; because the spiritual forces arising from that love, helped her to curb her will. They, the Queen and the Prince, began with the rule of never going to bed in anger. They shared their interests, and they built each other up. That was their strength.

They learned to go beyond the first glamor of their marriage and to respect each other's intelligence, and to accept each other's faults. That is a very important point. Intimacy reveals faults that were invisible under the brilliant light of infatuation. Very often, married people yield to the dangerous habit of discussing those faults with others; of even belittling each other before strangers. Apart from being bad manners, this is a dangerous and bitter little game. The art of building each other up, of each feeding the other's self respect, is one of the basic laws of all relationships. Looking back over the biographies I have written, mostly of men who have prospered in the world, it is surprising how true this is, in every case; they were all helped by wives who realized one of the truths of a woman's power; that she is both the wife and the mother of her husband; that men remain curiously adolescent and in need of more than romantic love. They need also encouragement, and the conviction that they are appreciated as well as loved. The wife who knows this, that she has married a child as well as a man, has wisdom on her side.

There is one more truth that emerges from my experience as a biographer. Great people are bound together by appreciation of faults as well as virtues. Indeed, I believe that faults are sometimes more endearing than merits. Wives and husbands should accept each other in the light of what they are, blemish with virtue, and learn to laugh with each other over their faults. I believe this to be an important and even an attractive part of married relationship, especially when this is added to the wise habit of avoiding recriminations, digging over the sour ground of yesterday's follies-nothing can be more boring, or dangerous. It is wiser to forget in life; it saves you from the more painful process of having to forgive.

One more thought: many people are so afraid of being hurt that they build up a barbed wire entanglement of defenses. One should remain willing to be hurt. You can wrap Caution, Pride and Self-Pity around your sensibilities so that you stifle them. And I believe that self-pity is one of the great destroyers of happiness. You have only to read the evidence in divorce cases-break down the complaints of the combatants, to discover that the blight of self-pity settled on at least one of them, early in the relationship.

I close with one story, from my experience of life; of two people I knew as friends. They were married for almost 40 years and had remained in love. They both had talents and the wife was brilliant and beautiful. They often argued, especially about the garden over which they had violently opposed plans. But only once did I hear them quarrel. It was at the luncheon table, on a beautiful summer day. Their tempers snapped. The husband banged the table, rose and walked into the garden. The wife looked at me, with tears in her eyes and said, "I am ashamed. Very ashamed." She thought for a moment and said, "You have known us so long. If you blame him, I shall never forgive you. It was my fault. You see, he really is a saint." Then she said, "Please go into the garden and talk to him while I cool down."

I went out, joined my friend, and said nothing. After a minute he said, "I am sorry. I have been on edge all morning. It was all my fault. You see, Mary is a saint, and sometimes I don't quite measure up to her."

As the statement of two people who had been married for almost 40 years I commend it to you, the young people of America, for your safe keeping.

decorations, flowers, lighting and costumes. It is for the two mothers to get together and discuss the colors of their dresses. A choir lends great dignity to the ceremony. Flowers are a matter of taste and pocketbook; they can be as simple or as elaborate as you wish, on the altar only or decking the whole church. In any case, get your florist to discuss them with you on the spot. An attractive decorative feature is the white ribbon which two ushers carry forward just before the procession forms to rope off all but the families' pews from the aisle. The purpose of this barrier, later taken down, is to allow them to leave the church first.

The procedure in church is as follows. The bride's family occupies the front pew on the left-hand side of the church facing the altar, and their friends are seated behind them by the ushers, the most intimate closest to the family. The groom's family and friends occupy the same relative position on the right. The bride's mother is the last guest to arrive. She walks up the aisle on the arm of a male relative (who could be a son) or one of the ushers. Groom and best man enter by a side door and appear on the right-hand side of the altar. They should be waiting there before the procession starts from the door.

The wedding commences as the march strikes up and the ushers walk up the aisle in pairs to stand to the right of the groom. Next the bridesmaids, who also walk in pairs and range themselves on the left-hand side, then the maid of honor and finally the bride and her father. He should give her his right arm so that, after he has left her at the altar, he can go back to his pew without stepping around or over her train. A charming custom which used to be general but is less seen today, is for the bride to keep her veil down over her face as she walks up the aisle, and only raise it after the ceremony when she turns around to start on her way out.

Coming back from the altar, the bride takes the groom's right arm, followed by bridesmaids and ushers. Though the latter frequently pair off, it is prettier if they keep their original formation. After this come the parents of the bride (unless the latter are divorced, in which case each goes out with an appropriate escort) the groom's family and then the congregation at large.

Two bridesmaids and two groomsmen constitute a small wedding, eight of each a large one. It is optional for the bride to have a maid of honor or a matron of honor or even both. It is the maid's (or the matron's) task to hold the bride's bouquet during the ceremony, raise her veil afterward and help manage her train when she turns around, but these duties can just as well be performed by the nearest bridesmaid. Children are a charming addition to a wedding procession. If they are old enough to be depended on, a pair of little girls or a boy and a girl can lead it; otherwise they should be placed where a misstep can be corrected by an older person.

Though there have been passing vogues for pastel wedding dresses, the all-white bride is still the one who brings a catch to the throat. Some people even favor all-white bridesmaids -a lovely picture in church. If color is preferred, avoid strong, bright tones, for they detract from the center of the picture, the bride herself. As it is customary for each bridesmaid to buy her own dress, the bride, out of consideration for her friends, should select a model in the moderate rather than the high-price bracket, and one that will be useful afterward. A girl who cannot afford this expense is occasionally given her dress by the bride's family. Or, if the bride is well off and generous to boot, she may want to present all the bridesmaids with their dresses instead of giving them the customary keepsakes. Whether out of sentiment, or because she is budgeted, it is perfectly proper for the bride to borrow a weding dress from an intimate friend or from a relative.

The clothes worn by the groom are established by precedent. They consist of striped black trousers, a cutaway, a double-breasted waistcoat, buff in winter, white in summer, matching spats, gray gloves, a wing collar, a gray ascot or four-in-hand, a silk hat. Ushers wear the same (though the tie can be less formal) and under usual conditions provide their own clothes, hiring them if they don't own them. If the groom wants to assure complete uniformity in their costumes he sometimes buys his ushers their spats, gloves and tie. At a less formal country wedding it is perfectly proper for all the men, including groom, to wear white flannel trousers and a dark blue wool jacket.

The bride's family generally pays all wedding expenses, including refreshments and decoration (though of course, exceptions are made where there is great disparity of fortune between the two families). The groom pays for the bride's bouquet, the bridesmaids' bouquets, the white boutonnieres worn by himself and the ushers, the corsages for the two mothers. He also pays the minister's fee. It is customary for him to make a present to each of his ushers, and the bride the same to each of her bridesmaids. The value of this gift depends on the means of the family, but no matter how small, it should be something relatively permanent, such as a key ring or a compact on which the date can be engraved.

Wedding reception and breakfast are the next consideration. Once back from the church, a receiving line is formed in the following order: the bride's mother, the groom's mother, the bride, the groom, the maid of honor and the bridesmaids. The bride's father should not stand in the receiving line, but he should hover near it to greet special guests, escort old friends to the refreshment table and so on.

As a rule there is a bride's table set for the bridal party. It can be laid for a formal meal, with place cards, or it can merely hold the wedding cake and plates and glasses, and be the place where the young people draw up to cut the cake and reciprocate toasts. If the bride's table has set places, it should include the husbands or wives of any members of the bridal party who happen to be married. At many weddings nowadays the bride and groom do not sit, but circulate around the party. The rest of the guests serve themselves or are served from a buffet, then find their own places at small tables which have no regular place settings.

The full-dress wedding breakfast menu usually consists of one hot dish, such as creamed chicken or lobster Newburg, several cold ones such as aspics, sandwiches, ice cream, wedding cake and black coffee. You can, however, offer sandwiches only, plus the afore-mentioned desserts and coffee. If it is a country wedding to which guests have traveled some distance, one hot dish is definitely recommended, or at least hot bouillon in cups.

Champagne is so inseparable from our association with weddings that it can be called a must (there are several excellent domestic brands on the market). If you want to do something extra, you can also offer whisky and soda for such of the men as prefer it. Try to have music of some sort, for it sets the atmosphere of festivity that weddings thrive on. There are many other charming touches which make a wedding memorable, but these have more to do with pocketbook than protocol. They range from the little white-ribboned boxes containing wedding cake to a grand marquee on the lawn complete with flower-banked dance floor.

The old-fashioned custom of displaying the wedding presents is not obligatory today, and certainly is not practical if the reception is held out of the house at a club or a friend's home. Just because a guest has been invited to the reception, it does not necessarily follow that he or she must send the bride a present. This depends primarily on the degree of intimacy with the bride's or the groom's family.

Twelve o'clock noon and four P.M. are the two preferred hours for weddings. An evening wedding is less usual and is apt to be held in a house rather than a church. There are superstitions to the effect that the engaged couple should not see one another after midnight on the evening before the wedding, nor on the wedding day itself until they meet at the church. Both are based on good common sense and promise calmer principals.

Once the date is set, begin planning all details at once. Make a calendar and allow yourself two weeks for the engraving, three for the dresses and so on down the line. Confer immediately with florist and caterer in order to secure their time and get an idea of costs. Familiarize yourself with all the small details, organize rehearsals and make allowance for last-minute emergencies. When the great morning arrives you can be confident that you are staging that rare and unforgettable thing, a perfect wedding.

FARINGDON HOUSE

Eighteenth Century and as their allotted span is a thousand years this seems rather inexplicable. Perhaps now that tea under the cedars, that daily sacrifice to them in fine weather, when footmen in striped waistcoats placed trays of glittering silver beneath their shade every afternoon, has become a thing of the past, they are sulkily dying of boredom. Anyhow, for the moment, Faringdon smells deliciously of burning cedar wood as a result.

At the end of the lawn, overshadowed by the trees on one side and the church on the other, and hedged with a tangle of roses and mock orange, there is a grassy walk where, head in hand on moonless nights appears the ghost of Hampden Pye. His story has been immortalized in the Ingoldsby Legends under the name of Hamilton Tighe. It seems that he was a sailor who married a peasant and that his uncle Admiral Pye, in the best traditions of the British Navy, sent him to the forefront of the battle so that he should be killed, which he duly was, his poor head being blown off.

So Faringdon acquired that which every respectable country house must have, a ghost. It also has, equally important, a rookery and a flock of pigeons. And such pigeons! They are Lord Berners' famous multi-colored birds, but it is no use asking him for a setting of eggs, for the secret of their brilliant plumage lies less in the breeding than in what happens to them every Easter Sunday when they are dyed and dried in the linen cupboard before being set free to flutter like a cloud of confetti between church and house to astonish the students of bird life in Berkshire. This bird motif, which is repeated over and over again inside the house, is the signature of its owner, so to speak, who prefers feathered to many other sorts of friends. As with flowers, he rather disdains the modest English sparrow, eschewing ' it for something gaudier.

The town, though its presence can be felt, is invisible from the house itself, but the huge walled kitchen garden, a perfect village of hothouses, lies on a southern slope overlooking it, and has a delicious view of old roofs and gardens descending the opposite slope to a little stream. This kitchen garden, I must say in passing, ministers most wonderfully to the house, producing exquisite vegetables, fruit and flowers with a perfect disregard for the slow-rolling seasons, the vagaries of the Berkshire climate, and indeed of all known rules. Mr. Cyril Connolly once said that when every sort of luxury has been forever banned in England, Lord Berners will somehow manage to maintain a secret melon house.

To the north, Faringdon has a most beautiful view, enjoyed by all the principal rooms in the house. It extends, from a terrace buried in honeysuckle, for many miles over a landscape such as is beloved of all English sporting painters, from Stubbs to Cecil Alden, that is to say a patchwork of fields and hedges, dotted with elm trees. Not a house or building of any sort can be seen, not a pylon or one inch of wire, just green English grass alternating with brown English arable, mile after mile, until finally they merge into the pale but piercing blue of a far distant horizon.

Such is Faringdon House as it stands in its environment, sober and restrained, typical abode, you would say, of an English country squire. Typical, except perhaps for the colored pigeons, the striped pink and white Italian tubs full of geraniums round the front, and what is that curious car drawn up in the drive? A smart coupé of 1904. Not quite typical, and inside not typical at all. Open the front door, there is scented warmth, there is such light, such a profusion of flowers, such a river of witty chat, accompanied by tunes, from hidden musical boxes.

We must give it to Mr. Wood of Bath that he did his bit. He placed the house upon a semi-basement, which always makes for warmth and comfort, and to this basement with real Eighteenth Century carelessness, he relegated both God and the cook, putting chapel and kitchen there side by side. He introduced a graceful double staircase, pillars, decorated plaster ceilings, classical chimney pieces, as many paltry details, most likely, as the poet laureate was willing to afford; the proportions of all the rooms are excellent. Upon this prettiness, this excellence, Lord Berners has superimposed his own taste and fantasy and created something so personal that it is very difficult to convey its aspect to those who have not seen for themselves.

I can remember, during the tedious or frightening but always sleepless nights of fire-watching in wartime London, that the place I longed to be in most intensely was the red bedroom at Faringdon, with its crackling fire, its Bessarabian carpet of bunchy flowers and above all its four-post bed, whence, from beneath a huge fat fluffy oldfashioned quilt one can gaze out at the view, head still on pillow.

It has always been a great treat to stay at Faringdon, but during the war it was paradise to people working in London, since there they found a double relief from discomfort and from boredom.

During the war the big drawing room, with its white flock paper and priceless French and Italian furniture, was shut up in favor of the little green drawing room. This is as pretty, cozy and characteristic as a room can be, its dark olive walls providing the perfect background for a riot of tropical birds, some alive and hopping about, some stuffed in cases, some pressed, like flowers in a screen, some modeled in china, one jumping with a song out of a gold box, and hundreds between the green morocco covers of Mr. Gould. Like all the rest of the house this room is buried in flowers of the brightest colors, arranged under the eye of Lord Berners himself. His ancestors, simpering or morose, hang high upon the walls and have for neighbours at eye-level a Paul Klee, one or two of Lord Berners' own Roman landscapes, and a varying selection of Impressionists and others, including Sisley, Corot, Degas, Boudin and Matisse. Mr. Pye would be startled if he could see his austere little room with its sporting print view glittering like a jewel box-Mr. Wood, I think, might find it very much to his taste.

There is something magic about all of Faringdon, and Lord Berners himself, in his skull cap, looks not unlike a magician, but perhaps the greatest, most amazing conjuring tricks are reserved for the dining room. In this pleasant sunny white room, scattered with large silver-gilt birds and wonderful Sèvres and Dresden china, a standard of culinary perfection has been maintained through the darkest days of war. Cook or no cook, raw materials or no raw materials, a succession of utterly delicious courses would somehow waft themselves to the sideboard, and the poor Londoner, starved, or sated with Spam, would see sights and taste tastes he had long ago forgotten to believe in Faringdon is solid and elegant and so is Lord Berners. So great in his sense of elegance, fantasy and humor that the solid quality of his talents, and above all the immense amount of hard work he has done all his life are sometimes overlooked, though a moment's reflection would show that without great talent and hard work he could not, as he does, write and paint like a profescional, in addition to shining as a composer of music (Stravinsky himself has said that the only important living English composer is Lord Berners). But one of the greatest of his achievements is the atmosphere he has created around himself at Faringdon, a house where the second best has never been and will never be allowed to encroach, either in comfort, conversation or in manners.

MUSIC TO HEAL

INNew York alone over 1.900 veterans are registered with the Hospitalized Veterans' Music Service, and hundreds more are on the waiting list. If this organization's current drive for funds is successful, these men will be helped toward recovery. Not only is the general therapeutic value of music a recognized medical fact, but actual performance on an instrument has helped many cases of muscular atrophy and paralysis. To men confined within hospital walls, familiarity with musical literature means a great broadening of interests. It is the work of the Service to give these veterans musical training, supply ing them with teachers, instruments and sheet music at a cost of $$ 15$ a month per man. Persons who wish to lend their support to this plan can send their contributions to the Hospitalized Veterans' Music Service of the Musicians' Emergency Fund, 113 West 57th Street, New York City.

This is all too often the case, because parents are more frequently than not quite heedless of their children's art efforts. The percentage of parents who, on seeing a roll of art work arriving home from school, openly despair at the sight because "there is no room for it in the house" is shockingly high. The percentage of children who have seen their paintings (into which they have poured their hearts) tossed into the wastepaper basket is a calamity. The percentage of children, between nine and thirteen, who have "accidentally lost" or defiantly thrown away their paintings rather than take them home and subject themselves to the pain of their parents' thoughtlessness is distressing. The tragedy of all this is that not only is the child's confidence and initiative shaken and its healthy sense of purpose in creative thinking and doing being snuffed out by degrees, but parents are robbing themselves of the very thing they want most-a sympathetic, understanding relationship with their children. They have tossed out, along with the pictures, an opportunity to share in an important phase of their child's life.

After all, paintings are created to be seen just as music is made to be heard and poems written to be read. All these are means of communication, but you cannot communicate if your musical composition is not listened to, your poem unread or your painting not looked at. Without listeners, readers and "lookers" it is a one-way street-a dead-end for a performer or creator.

Parents do not have to take the responsibility of finding someone to teach painting to their children because the schools do this for them. However, this fact does not relieve them of any further responsibility toward their children's art development. What then are the specific things which parents can do to help round out the painting experience of their children? Occasions such as the annual art exhibits of student's work held by schools offer an excellent opportunity for parents to show interest in what their own child is doing and what other children of the same school group are accomplishing in art. Then, getting away from the school setup, there are things which can be done at home-such as creating a "studio corner"-a place where the young son, or daughter, will find his art materials waiting to be used by him at any time. Such a room, or, even a corner of a room, can be attractive with its easel, paint pots, colored chalks, drawing board and brushes. This evidence of your belief in your child's painting activity should go a long way to encourage his creative work. Then, why not hang the upstairs rooms of your home with paintings by your children? Did it ever occur to you that you might decorate the nursery with paintings done by an older sister or brother-that what your child has painted might be even finer than pictures of the story-telling type or the cute bunny-eating-carrot variety?

If your child is a prolific painter, you might arrange to hang a picture a month. Simply choose a wall on which you would like to have pictures, where they might contribute to the decoration. Then have a framer make a frame which can be used for all pictures. The frame can be inexpensive raw wood $21^{\prime \prime} \times 27^{\prime \prime}$. Fit it with glass and a heavy white mat cut to hold paper $18^{\prime \prime}$ x $24^{\prime \prime}$, which is the regulation size generally used in schools. Turn screws should be attached to the back to allow pictures to be easily changed. A backboard, cut the size of the glass, and made of cardboard, is needed as a solid support to the picture and keeps the painting and mat clean. Through this simple method you will have done a great deal toward encouraging your child in his creative efforts and you will in turn become more aware of the work he is accomplishing. It is not beyond imagining that one day when you are about to hang one of your child's pictures you will discover a color scheme which you might use in the sun porch, bedroom, or study which you have been thinking about redecorating-and of course the painting which has suggested the color scheme could hang in that room as a focus to the entire scheme. You may gain not only a charming decorative effect, but also a far happier child.

and the environment for such treasures as pink moccasin flower, trilliums and trailing arbutus. Only the primroses seems to need a heavy soil well fortified with old manure.

The average gardener will probably not begin with flights into such difficult plants. Rather, he will select those plants that are low-lying and creeping-Phlox subulata, little bell flowers, common pinks, perennial candytuft and certainly the miniature daffodils. Fall crocuses, snowdrops and aconites, species tulips and such bulbs demand no special horticultural skill.

Once we have served this apprenticeship, we go on to more unusual plants. Many of them we may raise from seed. By experiments we can learn which of them wants the shelter of a rock, which requires more stone chips than others. We try our hand at high-mountain poppies, the mossy saxifrages, the tufted androsaces, the rarer and more difficult primulas.

There are many families of Alpine plants that open whole new worlds of experience and delight-the anemones, the violets, the trout lilies or erythroniums, the various miniature irises, the uncommon pinks, the fascinating sempervivums and sedums. Many of our lovely native wild flowers will come into our rock gardens and some of the herbs, especially the thymes.

We will also find that colorful flowering can be continued long after the spate of spring. Various poppies will help, the late campanulas, silenes and the hypericums; and the amazing beauty of gentians carry the attraction of these rockery spots up to the threshold of autumn.

off in long-term ownership. In pots and pans, decide which material suits you best by studying the characteristics of each type of ware (page 171). Select utensils with straight sides and flat bottoms for maximum heating with minimum fuel. Look for thick bases to conduct heat evenly. They mean less stirring, less danger of sticking and burning. Watch for smooth edges, a minimum of dirt-catching crevices, materials that are resistant to stains, handles designed for comfortable grip and good balance. Covers that fit tight are essential, for they save fuel and vitamins and make waterless cooking possible.

Electric appliances, which represent a sizeable investment, demand an equally careful choice plus the best treatment you can give them. Buy a good brand name, which offers a guarantee and a repair service you can depend on. Study the manufacturer's instruction booklet and refer to it every time you use the appliance until you can practically operate it in your sleep. Try out all the methods and applications suggested, even if you don't intend to use them regularly. File guarantee and instructions in a handy place. ## IRISH LINEN incomparable quality lasting beauty true economy

Many a bride today will find that her first furniture includes heirlooms, hand-me-downs (that she's glad to get) and antique-store finds. All of these need special care and some of them may present her with the problem of complete refinishing. Upkeep demands time, a strong right arm and plenty of persistence. Refinishing is chancier, so a really valuable piece may be safer in the hands of an expert. It can be done, however, if she is willing to devote loving care to it.
CARE AND WAXING: If your antique furniture has a fine mellowed patina, continued loving care is all it needs: light daily dusting, regular polishing with a soft, dry cloth and thorough waxing two or three times a year.

Waxing is rewarding so set aside time to do it right. Equip yourself with a good clear wax of a paste type, and three sets of clean, soft clothscheesecloth is ideal. With the first cloth, apply wax so sparingly you can scarcely see it. An overdose is wasteful, makes polishing hard and leaves a gummy surface. Spread the wax evenly with circular motions over small areas at a time. Use the second cloth to take up any excess wax and to start the shine. With the third cloth, polish briskly with the grain of the wood and rub, rub, rub.

A fine patina is the result of building up thin hard layers of wax through the years. Good results depend on the quality of the wax and the quantity of elbow grease used. Polishing is muscle-work-use your left hand alternately to divide the labor. Leave freshly polished surfaces free of all knickknacks for half an hour at least.

Waxing the highlight surfaces of carved or heavily ornamented pieces is all that's really necessary. Wax left in crevices turns yellow when dry, so if you do wax them, brush out any excess. To polish, wrap a soft cloth around a stiff-bristled brush.

Brasses on antiques are best left undisturbed, but experts agree waxing lightly gives just the right amount of brightening. Here again, be sparing. If you prefer shiny brasses, unscrew the hardware and shine it with a good polish. Clean leather tabletops and chairs with saddle soap or leather cleaner. Then wax them as you do wood, described above.

Excessive heat or moisture warps wood and destroys the finish. Keep a fine piece out of direct sunlight, away from radiators and open windows. Protect it against scratching by gluing felt scraps to the bottom of table-top accessories.
cleaning and restoring: To remove old wax, apply liquid wax freely, then wipe it off while it is still wet. Follow with paste waxing. For more thorough cleaning and to remove fingermarks, sticky accumulations, etc., put a small amount of turpentine on a damp cloth and wipe a small area at a time. Polish dry with a soft cloth and finish by waxing. A mild, pure soap such as Castile can also be applied in the same way if wiped off immediately, and is superior to turpentine for surfaces that are lacquered or varnished.

If the surface is slightly worn or scratched but in good basic condition, a fresh coat of shellac will give it new luster. First mix equal parts of boiled linseed oil and turpentine and apply. Wipe to remove excess oil, dry. Sand lightly, always with the grain of the wood, using 0000 sandpaper, to remove blemishes and prepare surface for shellac. Before you begin it is imperative to know whether the original finish is shellac or varnish. Varnish may be used over shellac satisfactorily, but shellac over varnish never results in a lasting job. If you don't know, ask at the place which sold you the piece or get the opinion of an expert.

Most antiques, however, have been shellacked and need only one new coat of white shellac mixed with equal parts of alcohol. Brush this on very thin with long, quick strokes and a light "feather" touch. If you use varnish, mix equal parts of varnish with turpentine. Either finish must be left to dry overnight. Sand lightly until smooth, wipe surface free of grit and dust. For a professional result, rub down with 0000 pumice mixed to a paste with boiled linseed oil. Wax thoroughly.
refinishing: If the surface is badly marred with scratches, burns or crazing, the old finish must be removed down to the stained wood. If it has deep blemishes or a painted surface, it must be brought down to the natural wood.

Thorough sanding and careful staining are the secrets of a beautiful finish, and here is where most amateurs go wrong. Sanding is important and results are in proportion to energy exerted; a careless sanding job shows through any number of coats of shellac or paint. Use 0000 sandpaper throughout, rub with the grain and test each stage for satiny smoothness.

First remove old paint or varnish. Flow paint remover on with a brush, following directions carefully. When the old paint or finish bubbles up and crumbles, scrape it off with a putty knife, drawn firmly with the grain. Take care not to gouge the wood. When all traces of paint or finish are scraped off, wash with alcohol. Let dry, sand lightly.

Make minor repairs at this point. Where parts have separated or come loose, scrape dried glue off with knife, sandpaper ends smooth. Apply fresh furniture glue and re-join. Let dry for 24 hours, hold firmly with clamps or a home-made tourniquet of heavy cord and a short stick of wood.

Fill small gouges with plastic wood filler in color nearest wood tones. Dab filler in openings and pack higher than surface as filler shrinks in drying. When dry, sand smooth. Leave replacements of missing parts, moldings and the rejoining of tops on fine pieces to the expert cabinetmaker.

In the paint-removing process, a certain amount of stain will come off. Whether you renew the stain, enrich the color or start from scratch, the staining process is the same. Work with water stains-they're easier for the amateur to handle than oil. If you get too deep a color, water stains can easily be lightened by applying water on a clean cloth. Alcohol and oil stains penetrate the wood to a much greater extent and can be removed only by scraping or bleaching. Woods in the same piece often vary in degree of hardness, and certain areas may absorb stain more readily than others, taking on a darker hue. To correct this, or for a more uniform color, rub in more stain on the light streak or mix a bit of darker stain and apply. Let dry. The water stain will raise or "roughen" the surface. Sand lightly before shellacking.

You're ready now for the first or "wash" coat of shellac. Mix three parts alcohol to one part shellac and brush over the entire surface quickly and lightly, with long strokes to avoid overlapping brush marks. Don't pile it on, one brush-over is enough. The wash coat seals the stain, helps bind the grain from further rising. Dry at least three or four hours. Sand lightly until surface is smooth.

Follow with a second "bodying" coat of shellac. Mix half alcohol, half shellac, using the same method. Allow to dry overnight.

The next day, sand the entire surface lightly until smooth, removing any brush marks. Apply final coat of shellac, one part alcohol and two parts shellac. Let dry eight hours or more. The longer any of these coats dries, the better the result. Sand again. The trick is to put the finish on well, then sand to leave as thin and hard a surface as possible. Clean dust and grit off thoroughly with a slightly dampened cloth. Then wax to a high luster.

$I^{T}$I's a wise housewife who inventories her china twice a year. If the checkup shows that her cups and plates are being broken at an alarming rate, there are a number of things she can do.

In the first place, always use a drain rack with rubber-covered wires for dishwashing. This cuts down chipping and cracking hazards. A rubber tip on a faucet is also a help on this score. It is best to have only one piece of china in the sink at a time

Plates which are banded or ornamented in silver or gold may have their decorations damaged by acids like lemon juice or salad dressing. Rinse them promptly and wash them as soon as feasible. Don't, at any cost, let them stand "as is" overnight. Avoid scraping the surface of any plate with steel wool or a knife; use a rubber scraper. Also, watch out for sudden changes of lemperature (the piping hot soap water followed by a near-cold rinse), or they may crack. It's good to season a new earthenware casserole by putting it in a large pot full of cold water, bringing it slowly to a boil, then simmering it for three or four hours. This seems to toughen the ware. Or, if the casserole is extra large, fill it with cold water and put it in a slow oven for the same length of time.

If you customarily set your plates on a hard surface, like a Monel metal or porcelain drainboard or counter-top, use a rubber mat or fold a dish towel to cushion the impact. Never warm china by putting it into an oven; rinse in hot water or place in a warming oven.

Stacking is always risky. To pres vent injury to surfaces, insert the special flannel doilies made for the parpose, between plates when you stack them in storage cabinets. Resist the temptation to pyramid small plates on large ones; the whole edifice may crash if you pull out a big one in a hurry. Stacking cups is never safe unless they're specially designed for such treatment. Hanging them by their handies is not the best solution either, since it puts a strain on the frailest member (the handle) and they're likely to be jiggled off their hooks when you reach through them to pieces at the back of the shelf. Best system is to have a shatlow shelf installed halfway between the ordinary china shelves, and line up your cups there.

TO YOUNG WORKING GIRLS WHETHER IN LOVE OR NOT

When a young girl goes to work, she is apt to look on her job pretty much as a fill-in between maturity and marriage.

Whether in love or not, she's confident that a handsome breadwinner will come along . . . to provide her with a nice combination of bliss and security.
"So why," she may ask, "should I save money out of what I make?"

There are a number of reasons why-all good ones. For example:
(A) The right man might not happen along for some time.
(B) He might not be able to provide quite all the little luxuries a young married woman wants.
(C) Having money of her own is a comfort to any woman, no matter how successfully she marries.

So we urge all working girls-if you're not buying U.S. Savings Bonds on a Payroll Plan, get started now.

It's an easy, painless, and automatic way to set aside money for the future. In ten years, you'll get back $$ 4$ for every $$ 3$ you put inand a welcome $$ 4$ you'll find it!

Remember, girls-having money of your own may not make you more attractive, but it certainly won't make you less!

without using too many precious hours in the kitchen. One excellent solution to the problem is gelatin. With gelatin the most entrancing dishes are possible for every course, and all of them can be whisked up in the intervals when neither sun nor friends are at hand. Add gelatin and what you concocted yesterday is still delicious today; and has a professional air that makes you feel like one of Escoffier's brighter pupils. Don't, of course, serve a full meal of cold dishes. Make it a point to have at least one hot course to bring out the cool quality of the rest of the food. Manage a contrast in textures, too, for all these things pique the appetite and mark you as a hostess with imagination. Here are a few blueprints to guide you on your way. Add a dish here and subtract one there, and these menus will rise to whatever occasion you may have on hand.

Add a few drops red coloring, the beef consommé, the wine and the gelatin. Pour into a shallow pan and place in the refrigerator to set until firm. $3 / 4$ cup sugar
1 cup crushed pineapple, drained
1 cup shredded coconut
2 cups heavy cream, whipped 1 tbsp. kirsch

Put the gelatin to soak in the cold water, while the milk and the sugar heat in another saucepan. Add the gelatin and stir until dissolved. 2 ripe avocados
1 tsp. granulated gelatin
Juice 1 lemon
2 egg whites
2 tbsps. sugar
$11 / 2$ cups orange juice
1/4 cup water
$1 / 2$ cup sugar
Your avocados must be good and ripe. Halve, seed, scoop out the meat, add the juice of the lemon, and mash well with a silver fork. If you can't get it smooth with the fork you will have to force it through a sieve, but it's better to manage the other way-the metal in the sieve tends to darken the avocado. Soak the gelatin in the $1 / 4$ cup water. Cook the orange juice and sugar together for about 5 minutes to make a syrup, remove from the heat and add the gelatin and stir until dissolved. Cool. Add the avocado pulp. Freeze in a refrigerator tray at the coldest point until not quite set. Meanwhile, whip up the egg whites good and stiff with the 2 tablespoons sugar. Scrape the avocado mixture into a chilled bowl, break up and whip until smooth. Fold in the egg whites. Return to the tray to freeze until firm. It's well to stir it a time or two while it's freezingmakes it nice and smooth. A Lady

Chair
and how it came to be a part of the Beacon Hill Collection
Many years ago, in Cambridge, Mass., a lady from a prominent Beacon Hill family appeared at our furniture shop. Her coachman was carrying a Chippendale chair, a beloved family heirloom. She wanted a second chair . . . a duplicate of the first. We made the chair. Much to the delight of the lady from Beacon Hill, she could not tell our copy from her treasured original.

Since that long-ago day, the Beacon Hill Collection has become known as America's finest re-creation of the masterpieces of the charming Georgian period. We call these pieces "Beacon Hill Collection" because most of them were inspired by treasured heirlooms from the gracious homes of Beacon Hill, Boston, where simple dignified living has been the pattern for many generations.

Beacon Hill Furniture made in Cambridge, Mass., carries this mark of craftsmanship in a saucepan, add the chopped onion and sauté until a golden brown. Add the almonds and cook just a moment or so more, stirring constantly. Add the sieved soup and milk and blend with a wire whisk. Season highly, spoon into hot bowls, and sprinkle with paprika. The celery rounds are merely rounds of puff paste, sprinkled with celery seed before baking.

SPICED TONGUE EN GELÉE

1 smoked beef tongue
2 large pkgs. cream cheese (18 oz.)
1 pkg. frozen green peas, cooked tender
4 cucumbers
2 tbsps. granulated gelatin
$1 / 2$ cup cold water
2 cups veal or chicken stock
1/4 cup lemon juice
2 tbsps. sugar
$11 / 4$ tsps. salt
Few drops Tabasco
$1 / 4$ tsp. W orcestershire sauce
Pepper to taste
24 ripe olives
A day or so before needed, prepare the tongue by boiling 3 to 4 hours, or until a fork pierces it easily, in water to cover, to which have been added 1 cup red wine, 2 peeled cloves garlic, 4 tablespoons vinegar and 3 tablespoons mixed pickling spice. Allow to cool in the broth, then remove, skin and chill. Slice diagonally across so as to get nice uniform slices, and make them paper thin. Soften the cream cheese with a little cream and season it highly, working smooth with a fork. Peel the cucumbers, and chop very fine. Drain. Now spread your tongue slices with the cream cheese and then with the cucumbers, and roll firmly. Fasten with tooth picks. Make an aspic by soaking the gelatin in the cold water for 5 minutes, bring the stock to a boil, add the gelatin and stir until dissolved. Add the lemon juice and seasonings, and chill until thick but not quite set. Now pour a little into a shallow dish (a Pyrex utility dish is fine for this) and allow to set. Push a ripe olive into each end of each of your little meat rolls, and arrange them on the aspic; neat rows, soldier fashion, or diagonally, mackerel fashion, or radiating from a center arrangement of olives, like a sunburst. Add a row of peas around edge of dish. Cover with remaining aspic, being careful not to disarrange the peas. Chill until set. At serving time, unmold onto a plate and garnish with tomato wedges and mustard mayonnaise. Serves 8 .

Lettuce salad-cream dressing
Prepare the lettuce as usual. Now make the dressing right in the bowl:

3 tbsps. olive oil
$1 / 2$ tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. dry mustard
3/4 tsp. black pepper
$3 / 4$ tsp. paprika
$1 / 2$ cup light cream
Crush the garlic in the bowl with a little of the cream. Rub it well with a spoon until it all but disappears. Separate the egg yolks from the whites and add the yolks, with the cheese, to the garlic. ## CHEESE RING FRAICHE

1 tbsp. gelatin
$1 / 4$ cup cold water
2 pkgs. cream cheese

Salt to taste
1 cup heavy cream, whipped stiff $1 / 2$ cup American cheese, grated $1 / 2$ cup chopped pecans Paprika

Soak the gelatin in the cold water for 5 minutes, and dissolve over boiling water. Add a little heavy cream to the cream cheese and work well with a fork until smooth as satin. Combine with the remaining ingredients. Just a dash of salt is enough for this dish-just enough to bring out the cheese flavor. Turn into a wet ring mold and chill until set. When firm, unmold onto the serving dish, surround with fresh nasturtium leaves and blossoms, and decorate with a ring of icy cold fresh fruit-peaches, strawberries, grapes, whatever is at hand that strikes you as suitable for a "fruit and cheese" dessert. This could also be served as a main dish for luncheon on a very hot day, with paper thin ham sandwiches cut in narrow strips and iced tea sprigged with mint from the garden.

GARDENING GUIDE

$T \mathrm{~T}$ is difficult to say which is the busi $\mathbf{I}_{\text {er part of the garden these days- }}$ flower beds or vegetable patch. The month of May usually brings the final assurance that the killing frosts have come and gone for good. We garden in safety. Frost-fearing squash vines and tender bulbs, eggplants, corn and peppers, flats of finicking annuals are all free now to go ahead.

We busy ourselves with dozens of jobs, big and little. We pinch off side buds of peonies, lift and divide Shasta daisies and fall asters, set out violets, feed rhubarb with a generous hand. Into window boxes go fresh soil and fresh plants. Tall bearded iris are givendollops of bonemeal. We are beginning to thin out young vegetable plants.

But this isn't all. We'll soon be battling cutworms, spraying fruit trees as the blossoms drift down, soaking roses to ward off mildew and black spot. We'll be going after oyster-shell scale with noisome mixtures and hopefully digging tobacco dust around asters to circumvent root aphids. These are dizzy times!

Gardener's defense

Men and women who want to enjoy their gardening have to find some way to defend themselves against all the advice given them. The list of things that ought to be done during May in any well-ordered garden-the bugs and disease to spray against, the fertilizers to scatter, the multitude of new gadgets to try-total up formidably. You can either walk away from the whole kit and caboodle of gardening, or take it piecemeal. Make out a list of the day's work, and be content to do that.

You can also take advantage of every possible labor-saving device. Nor are all these devices in the nature of machines. They are mainly practices. Thẻ day may come when we will learn how to keep plants in health, just as the human body's health is built up to resist disease and grow vigorously. Upon the health of the land depends the health of the plant. So long as we rob the land, neglect to put back what we have taken out, the ideal of naturally healthy plants must remain in the far distant future.

Garden hobbies

Another and increasingly accepted approach to gardening is to avoid trying everything; rather, selecting one group or family of plants and concentrating on it. This commonsense approach is indicated by the increasing number of special plant societies and books on special plants. To the longestablished American Rose Society, Iris, Peony, Delphinium, have been added organizations concentrating on tulips, begonias, African daisies, small fruits, primulas, fuchsias, to name only a few. The books on these particular groups of plants are extremely valuable.

The philosophy of gardening hobbyists is to accept the fact that a given, limited piece of land-together with limited hands to work and limited purses to pay out-cannot be expected to produce continual quantities of assorted things. Far better to concentrate on a few: bulbs for spring flowering; perennials or some such specialty as roses, irises, peonies, daylilies for early and mid-summer; chrysanthemums for the autumn.

For some hobbyists the ultimate consummation of their efforts comes in the full tide of roses blooming; some, chrysanthemums. Others follow the three-to-four-months' flowering of hemerocallis and lilies.

And after our special pet group has given us of its best, what then? The wise gardener goes away for a time. We all ought to take vacations from our gardens.

It is practically impossible just to stop work and sit in the shade. Even though we take the precaution to bathe and dress in our cleanest clothes and think to lose ourselves in a detective story, the eye spots a weed and off we go to haul it out. Soon we are hauling out a lot of weeds and seeing more and more.

Anniversary

These rather crabbed bits of advice are being written on a mid-March morning. The day is darkening to help the radio's promise of still another snow storm. Since the night after Christmas we have not seen the land. Walls and neatly terraced levels are blanketed in sloping drifts. Only by a combination of skiing and gymnastics have the fruit trees been finally pruned. Only by a major excavation are the pans of potted bulbs finally brought out for forcing. The date shows that this will be the thirtieth year my dreams, honest sweat and dwindling cash have gone into this small section of Connecticut hilltop.

Although I have just pompously preached the limiting of work and advised specialization, last autumn's planting records show several new varieties of daffodils added to the 300 already growing here, two more lilacs (and one to come this spring) to the 100 -odd varieties of French, American and Canadian hybrids and species crowded here. With casual disregard for the future of purse and land, orders have already gone in for a collection of hybrid perpetual roses-as if we didn't have enough to do with the thousand already on the place. I am making no effort to resist a collection of altheas, of English large-flowered chrysanthemums, several more varieties of blueberries and a new plum tree.

It doesn't make sense. But then, gardening is a sanctified form of nonsense. Not acquisition alone drives hard-bitten gardeners to try everything. Rather an insatiable curiosity leads us deeper and deeper into more and more. And that, too, has its rare and lovely compensations.

For then comes some hour when a new rose unfolds and a new fruit is ripe for the picking and a new chrysanthemum challenges the supremacy of autumn foliage. We halt in the work, tired, sweaty, but terribly alive-and find ourselves muttering, "Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord." richardson wright

PLANT AND TRANSPLANT

BY PATRICK J. McKENNA

$T$ ransplanting, no matter how carefully done, is always something of a setback to any plant. Moving it from its anchorage in the soil interferes with the moisture supply to a degree commensurate with the stage of growth, the kind of plant and the season. The rapid acceleration of spring growth will, to a large extent, overcome this check, making spring the most favorable time of the year for transplanting all manner of plants. However, if transplanting is undertaken after the time when active growth is well under way, serious losses may occur. The season in spring for transplanting is comparatively short, depending upon the region. Where a long cool spring is the rule, the danger is lessened; but where warm weather follows soon upon cold, plants quickly pass the stage when they can be moved with relative safety.

In order to take full advantage of the spring season, relate the operations to the kind of plant and to the stage of growth. All deciduous plants (which drop their leaves in autumn) and herbaceous plants (whose stems die to the ground and are renewed from the roots or crown each spring) should be planted while still dormant, or before active growth begins. Once these have sprouted leaves and shoots, they can be moved only with the greatest risk, and usual ly not without a ball of soil on the roots. Even with this precaution, moisture .supply is upset since many roots are necessarily cut off. The roots are the channels through which plants obtain moisture from the soil. The wilting which occurs indicates the disturbed condition and is also an attempt on the part of the plant to conserve its own moisture. If prolonged, parts or all of the plant may die, because plant cells that lose their moisture, also, after a time, lose their ability to absorb i again. Moisture, which plays a part in all the plant's processes, is the most critical factor in its growth; conserve it to keep plants alive.

When dormant, most shade and flowering trees from $10^{\prime}$ to $12^{\prime}$ tall, and shrubs from $4^{\prime}$ to $5^{\prime}$ can be planted bare root, the exceptions among trees being beech, birch, magnolia and flowering dogwood, and in shrubs deciduous azaleas, enkianthus and firethorn, all of which must be provided with a (Continued on page 223)

HOW TO TRANSPLANT

ball of soil. Sizes larger than the above must also have a ball of soil. The ball is usually wrapped with burlap and secured with rope. Balled and burlapped plants are described as "B & B."

Evergreen conifers-pine, spruce, hemlock and the like-withstand transplanting over a longer period, owing to their slowness in absorbing moisture, their fibrous root system and because they are always planted with a ball of soil. However, when the new soft shoots are well out, it is best to cease moving even those until the new growth has matured, in August and Septem ber when transplanting can begin again. Taxus (yew) seems to resent transplanting most at this stage. The young growth wilts and sometimes withers, forcing the plant to send out another crop of shoots.

To conserve moisture, immediately unpack all plants received in shipment. If it is not feasible to plant them at once, dig a trench, lay the plants against one side and cover the roots, and with trees and shrubs, the lower part of the trunks and stems. While planting, protect the roots against exposure to sun and wind. Trees and shrubs, including roses, that look very dry are best immersed in water for 24 to 48 hours to plump up the tissue and aid sprouting. They should be cut back to within a foot of the ground before planting, to force the moisture into a few good buds (see article on pruning, House & Garden, April 1948). To reduce pressure on the roots of woody plants, remove surplus branches from shrubs. With ordinary sized shrubs from a nursery, prune several inches at the top of the stems. Do not remove the tops from shade or flowering trees, but cut the side branches back somewhat. If evergreen conifers are planted late in the spring, shear off some of the foliage.

Root contact with the soil is a most important part of planting. Have the hole ample enough to accommodate all the roots of bare-rooted plants, spread out, and firm the soil in the bottom of the hole. Reduce the filling-in soil to a granular state so that it will find its way among the roots. Throw an inch of soil over the roots, then grasp the top of the plant and raise slightly, but not clear of the soil, and drop back several times to settle the soil around the roots. Fill in more, tramp firmly, then give plenty of water. Set balled and burlapped plants 1 to 2 inches lower than they were originally. If they are very heavy, handle by grasping the encircling ropes, not the plants. Untie the ropes only when the ball is satisfactorily placed in the hole. Remove the covering from the top of the ball, but spread the bottom burlap and bury it as planting proceeds. Tramp the filling-in soil against the sides of the ball and flood several times with water. (Continued on page 226)

Unless well firmed, the soil may shrink from the ball when it dries.

Set herbaceous plants no deeper than they were before. Many, such as delphinium, pansy, strawberries, petunias and vegetables such as lettuce, are injured by having their crowns buried. Rotting may set in.

Flowering annuals and vegetable plants raised indoors differ from the woody plants, shrubs and trees in that planting is done when growth is well under way. Pot-grown plants are the least risky, and, provided the plants have not stayed too long in their pots, they can be planted in warm weather. Almost equally safe are those set in paper plant bands, which can be planted with the band attached since the paper disintegrates in the soil. Bands made of light wood are best removed before planting. The trick is to plant these and the pot-grown plants without breaking the ball. Have the ball slightly moist but not wet and press the soil against the ball on two sides at the same time.

Planting from flats is more risky. Roots are interlocked, and many are broken off in handling. Unlike plants in pots and plant bands, these should be quite moist to facilitate root separation with as little damage as possible. Plenty of water is needed in all cases especially if the weather is warm. Excessive wilting can be avoided by inserting sprays of evergreen among the plants for a few days to provide shade.

Stimulation of root activity hastens the establishment of newly set plants. Moisture, of course, is the first necessity. But avoid constant flooding of the soil in the cold days of early spring. Root activity is at its best when the soil temperature begins to rise. Early and frequent cultivation induces this and gives aeration. In summer or late spring, if the soil becomes too warm, much moisture is lost. Then a mulch (covering) of hay, straw, peat or such, will be needed where soil is exposed. Organic matter, rotted manure, peat moss or old compost, incorporated in the soil (together with super-phosphate, 5 pounds per 100 square feet) is beneficial. Starter solutions are often used with greenhouse grown plants. One half pound of a fertilizer of the formula 5-10-5 is dissolved in 8 gallons of water for a few hours. At planting leave a depression around each plant and pour in a cupful of the solution.

Smetana: Trio in G Minor. Rudolf Firkusny, piano, Louis Kaufman, violin and Willem Van den Burg, violoncello, have combined to cope with an intense and tempestuous trio. They succeed. Vox Album 628; $$ 3.96$.

Ravel: Bolero. The composer, with the Lamoureux Orchestra, conducted this uncut version of his most popular composition shortly before his death. He plays it slowly; it's more hypnotic that way. Vox Album 167; $$ 2.91$.

Brahms: Sonata No. 3 in D Minor. The last of Brahms' three sonatas for violin and piano is rich in feeling, introspective, yet exuberant. Isaac Stern, violin, and Alexander Zakin do justice. Columbia Album M-MM-730; $$ 4.60$.

Bach: Organ Music. E. Power Briggs, at the organ in St. Paul's Chapel, Columbia University, plays the great "G Minor Fantasia and Fugue" and "Toccata in F Major" among others. Columbia Album M-MM-728; $7.10.

Dorothy Kirsten and Robert Merrill. These two singers of the Metropolitan's roster sing "Why Do I Love You" and "I'll See You Again," and do it without making them sound like opera. RCA Victor Record 10-1398; $$ 1$.

Nellie Lutcher. With a voice like greased sandpaper and a tough, brittle piano style, she romps through a so-so selection of songs like a puppy in a butterfly cage, but much more devastatingly. Capitol Album CC-70; $$ 3$.

Jo Stafford. Swooping from note to note in her sultry, yet good-natured way, Miss Stafford sings "It W as Written in the Stars" and "It's Monday Everyday" with Paul Weston and his orchestra. Capitol Record 15040; 75c.

Billy Butterfield. He can make his trumpet sound almost human, and with his orchestra he plays "I Can't Get Started" and "Flip-flop," the latter a clever, engaging bit of musical tomfoolery. Capitol Record 15047; 75c.

Tommy Dorsey. Suave and polished as usual, Mr. Dorsey and his orchestra play "Sentimental Rhapsody" and "You Can't Make Money Dreaming." Audrey Young sings the former piece. RCA Victor Record 20-2665; 75c.

You, and the Night, and the Music. Tony Martin, with his smooth, roman tic voice, caresses eight songs, each with the word "night" in the title. Among them is "Night and Day." RCA Victor Album P-203; $4.

Beryl by Candlelight. Blessed by nature with an undistinguished voice, Beryl Davis manages nevertheless to sound pleasant singing what are described as "lovely, languorous songs." RCA Victor Album P-201; $4.

Down Memory Lane with Vaughn Monroe. Eight songs, all about remembering, all sentimental, all sad, are rendered by Mr. Monroe in a manner remarkable for the monotony of its beat. RCA Victor Album P-202; $$ 4$.

Love Notes from Andy RusseII. These are exactly what you'd expect. You've heard them all before; whether you want to hear them again depends on your reaction to Andy's plaintive style. Capitol Album CD-68; $$ 3.75$.
