NOT JUST A SURFACE COATING

Now Osmose Pressure-Treated Wood Is Available in TWO Beautiful Natural Colors.

Selecting Osmose K-33 pressure-treated wood for your building project is a snap. The tough decision is choosing one color over the other.

After all, both woods are permanently preserved. They're both clean, dry and odor free. They both resist rot, decay and termite attack. The only difference between Osmose K-33 ALL WEATHER WOOD and SUNWOOD® is the color: One's a soft green, one's a natural brown tone. They both look so great, you may have a tough time making up your mind. But whichever you choose, you'll get one tough, long-lasting wood for your building project!

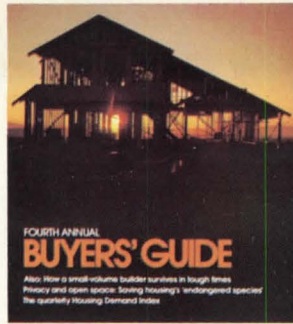

Available exclusively through your ALL WEATHER WOOD dealer.

The SUNWOOD® color is forced deep into the wood cells...stays beautiful without expensive, yearly touchups.

A FAST, ECONOMICAL WAY TO A TWO-HOUR FIRE RATING.

Fire barriers between multiple dwelling units needn't be heavy masonry. Use Gold Bond Area Separation Walls and get a 2-hour fire rating with walls as slim as 3½" ... weighing as little as 8.7 psf. Plus high STC ratings, for more acoustical privacy. And erection of this system, incorporating metal framing, ½" Fire-Shield G wallboard and 1" Fire-Shield Gypsum Coreboard is fast and easy for carpenter tradesmen ... in any season. Write for all the facts about state-of-the-art Gold Bond Area Separation Walls. GOLD BOND BUILDING PRODUCTS, 2001 Rexford Road, Charlotte, N.C. 28211.

This issue of Housing is published in national and separate editions.

Let's get back to selling shelter...

In the past few years our industry has placed too much emphasis on the investment benefits of buying a home and too little on shelter and lifestyle. And indeed, with inflation, the investment benefits for the homebuyer were impressive: Where else could he get a $100,000 investment that could appreciate as much as 25% a year for a mere $10,000 down? The trouble is, he came to take the shelter for granted and to look only at the appreciation.

We're seeing the other side of the coin right now. When homeowners must resort to creative financing or lower their prices to sell their homes, or when they see builders offering mortgage buydowns and other incentives or selling homes at auction, they feel betrayed. It never occurred to them that housing is a highly illiquid investment, and that prices can go down as well as up.

They're so worried about protecting their investment that when builders try to build the smaller, less-expensive houses that today's market requires, the neighboring homeowners fight them tooth and nail. There have been a number of such cases in the Chicago suburbs recently. One, in Schaumburg, discussed in this space in January, has not yet been decided. Another, in nearby Hoffman Estates, was dismissed by the judge because the homeowners had failed to show how they would be harmed (see Hotline, p. 12); the homeowners plan to appeal. And in Darien, the City Council was able to block a developer's plan to cut lot and house sizes and produce housing priced between $73,000 and $83,000. "My concern is based on... lowering our standards," said Alderman Merrill Hermann, who had organized the community against the downsizing.

Our industry is partly to blame for this state of affairs, because we've placed so much emphasis on housing as the best investment a family can make. Maybe it is and maybe it isn't: That depends on individual circumstances. But there's no question that new housing can provide a way to improve a family's lifestyle. And a good life, rather than paper profits, is what the American Dream is all about.

...and let's get out there and sell!

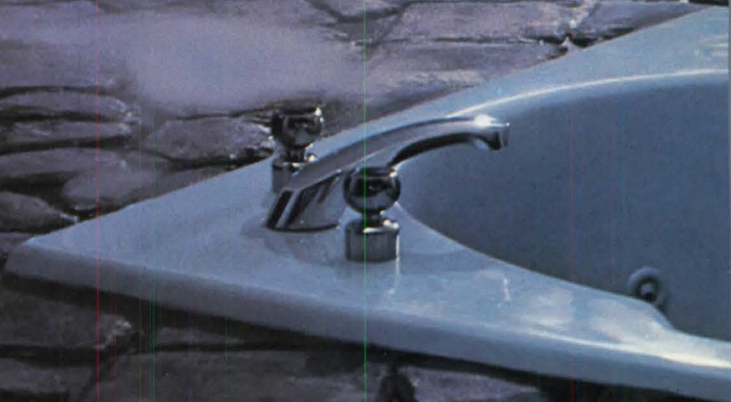

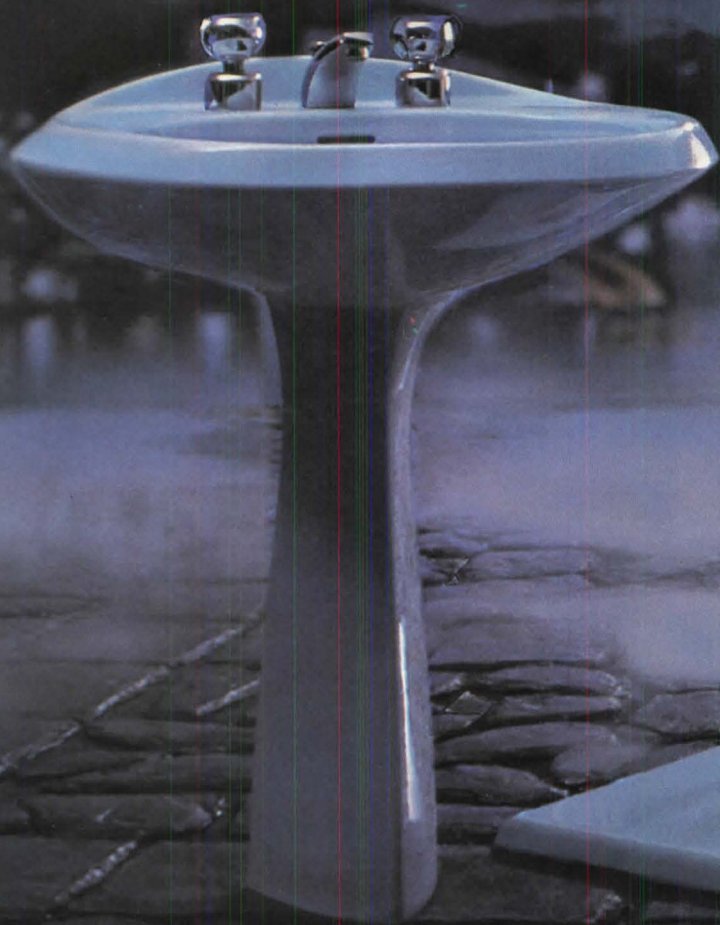

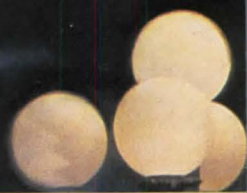

After three years of housing recession, many builders and their salespeople are at the point where they have to combat not only the economy, but also a sense of defeat.

That's why we were so pleased about NuTone's Rally '82 (see p. 40), which is based on the idea that everyone can play a role in changing the present situation. In the optimistic belief that the glass is not half empty but half full, NuTone points out that the million-plus dwelling units estimated for 1982 mean more than 2.5 million bathrooms, 3 million bedrooms and a million kitchens — in other words, a market for a substantial amount of building products.

That kind of thinking would benefit us all. Even in a market where only ten homes will be sold this year, for example, the builder who aims to increase his market share and sell as many of those ten homes as possible will gain the competitive edge. And there are still buyers out there: It's amazing how many of them turn up when there's a housing auction or when so-called "No-interest loans" are offered. But it does take work to find them. No one can afford to sit back and wait for the turnaround.

A ban on future installations of urea formaldehyde foam insulation in homes and schools has been voted by the Consumer Products Safety Commission. But the issue is far from settled, for the National Insulation Certification Institute (NICI), a trade group representing the urea formaldehyde foam insulation industry, said it intends to file suit against the CPSC. It is likely to be joined by the Formaldehyde Institute, which represents major chemical manufacturers of formaldehyde, a basic chemical material. A rescue effort may surface in Congress where sympathetic legislators are expected to introduce legislation to overturn the CPSC decision. Last year Congress approved veto provisions that would allow it to act on individual CPSC decisions. The ban on installations, scheduled to go into effect this summer, does not affect the estimated 500,000 homes already treated with urea formaldehyde foam.

Recessed lighting fixtures must have thermal protectors, as of April 1. The National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) included the new requirement in the 1981 National Electrical Code (NEC) in response to the increased use of thermal insulation around recessed fixtures. Such applications entrap heat and increase the risk of fire. For lighting manufacturers, the new subsection requires changes in design and engineering of recessed fixtures. It also makes much of their existing stock unsalable. For builders, this translates to higher prices. Edward Schnoll, vice president of marketing for the Lighting Products Division of McGraw-Edison, estimates a distributor cost differential of two dollars per unit. There are two exceptions to the NEC revision: first, for fixtures designated "I.C." (insulated ceilings) and second, for fixtures installed in concrete. In addition, incandescent fixtures for suspended ceilings are classified separately and do not need thermal protection.

Cutting FHA and GNMA credit budget ceilings will increase, not decrease, the budget deficit, says Dr. Mark J. Riedy, executive vice president of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America. According to Riedy, the FHA mortgage insurance program and the GNMA mortgage-backed securities program are actuarially sound and user-fee supported. The administration's proposed credit budget reductions of $5 billion for FHA and $10 billion for GNMA in fiscal year 1983 will not save the government any money, contends Riedy, but will end up reducing the number of potential homebuyers who could obtain a mortgage through the programs. Notes Riedy, "With housing in its worst slump in more than 35 years, it is a mistake to reduce the availability of FHA-insured mortgages."

Any municipality or county in Florida can implement a "gray water system" providing they have approval from the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services (HRS). Authorization was approved by the Florida House and Senate, and HRS has already approved a pilot project in Longwood, a suburb of Orlando. The pilot project will be studied by the University of Southern Florida. The gray water system, introduced in a report by a committee of the Home Builders Assn. of mid-Florida, collects gray water (water from bathroom sinks, baths, showers and laundry), filters solids and grease and returns the water directly to the ground water table. An increase in the number of sewer connections for a sewage plant, should be possible because, proponents state, gray water represents about 50 percent of total wastewater flow.

The traditional, fixed-rate mortgage is far from dead, according to a recent survey by American Mortgage Insurance Company. In a nationwide survey of 400 S&Ls, AMIC found that nearly 50% of the lenders still offer the traditional mortgage instrument. The most popular rate index among the S&Ls offering adjustable rate mortgages is the national average Federal Home Loan Bank Board Mortgage Contract Rate, which is used by two-thirds of the polled S&Ls, according to AMIC. Other survey findings: Only 9 percent of the lenders offer pledged-account mortgages; about 6 percent offer graduated payment mortgages and less than 2 percent offer graduated payment adjustable, shared appreciation or reverse annuity mortgages.

HOUSING HOTLINE

Fannie Mae has expanded its mortgage-backed securities program to include new loans.

"These securities will forge a direct link between the mortgage and capital markets to immediately increase the much needed supply of funds of housing," FNMA chairman David Maxwell said of the new program. Fannie Mae plans to issue certificates backed by pools of at least $1,000,000 of mortgages originated and packaged by local lenders, who will sell the certificates to investors either directly or through securities dealers. Previously, Fannie Mae had issued its mortgage-backed securities against seasoned loans, a program through which in less than five months, it committed to issue $5.6 billion in securities. Maxwell noted that pension funds' interest in buying the securities has been keen.

The Federal Trade Commission has filed its first complaint against a homebuilder charged with "a substantial pattern warranty abuse" under a program the commission began in 1979. Ward Corp., a "major builder" in the metropolitan Washington, D.C. market, is accused of making "unfair and deceptive claims" about its warranties. "In many cases," FTC said, "such significant defects as leaky basements and sagging floors" were not repaired properly and "some homeowners had to wait more than six months." The company's written warranty, FTC said, stated it would correct all defects due to faulty construction or materials reported within one year of settlement or possession. FTC sources said the agency was unable to negotiate a settlement with the company. Creston Cathcart, president of two Ward subsidiaries, said the company wasn't yet prepared to comment.

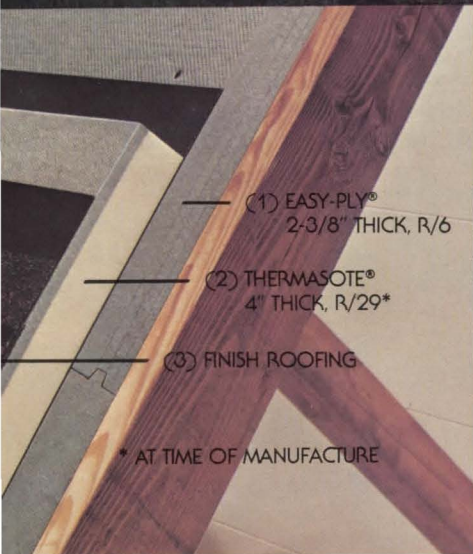

Undersizing gets a boost from Cook County (Ill.) circuit Judge Joseph Wosik, who dismissed a move by homeowners in Hoffman Estates to prevent Kirk Corp. of Rolling Meadows from building smaller houses in later phases of a subdivision than those built earlier. Attorney Richard C. Edelman says homeowners sued because such (undersized) houses would cause "the real estate values or our houses to go down." He plans to refile in a form acceptable to the judge who, he says, rejected the original suit because he did not find enough facts to show "irreparable damage," such as the homeowners claimed. The houses in question: three models, ranging from 1,225 to 1,700 sq. ft., which would sell on 8,500 sq. ft. lots for $80,000 to $90,000. The prices, says Donald Kirk, company chairman, are "equal to or in excess of what 90 percent of those people paid three or four years ago." He also noted that "we did not attempt to change either the zoning or subdivision platting."

Mortgage delinquencies showed mixed trends during the fourth quarter. The National Assn. of Mutual Savings Banks reported a modest upturn in the delinquency rate, from 0.69% registered on Sept. 30 to 0.72% at the end of December. A more welcome report in the National Delinquency survey of the Mortgage Bankers Assn. of America showed a nationwide decline in delinquencies for the fourth quarter: That survey reported the number of homeowners 30 or more days past due on their mortgage payments decreased from 5.33% in the third quarter to 5.08% in the fourth. Not so welcome, however, were signs from the east North-Central region (Ill., Ind., Mich., Ohio and Wis.), which is the area of automobile and auto-related industries. There, delinquencies increased from 7.78% in the third quarter to 7.83%, while foreclosure rates also rose—from .23% to .28%.

New IRA accounts helped offset deposit outflows at mutual savings bank, according to the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks. NAMSMB reports that approximately 200,000 IRAs were opened at savings banks in January, accounting for deposits estimated at $225 million. About 45% of this amount was "new" money—funds attracted from outside the individual banks—while the rest represents transfers from existing accounts. NAMSMB President Saul Klamann admits the IRA impact is "fairly moderate"—deposit outflows were about $1 billion in January—but he hopes the IRA money will become a "stabilizing force" over the longer term.

SUNSATIONAL!

Terra Vista built by M. S. Milliner Construction, Inc., Frederick, Maryland

CAPTURE THE SUN WITH WEATHER SHIELD!

SolaireFilm wood windows and doors are a simple, beautiful way to put passive solar energy to work for you.

SolaireFilm units look like conventional triple pane windows and doors, but what a difference! Between the glass layers is a center lite of clear, resilient SunGain™ film, developed by energy researchers at 3M. A special anti-reflective coating on the film allows more of the sun's energy to pass through, yet layer for layer, the film insulates as effectively as glass.

SolaireFilm units are available in selected sizes of Weather Shield wood windows, patio doors, and insulated entrance systems. Quad pane glazing – 1-3/4" thick overall – has two lites of film in the airspace and is offered in our direct set windows.

For easy installation, low maintenance, and energy efficiency – it's SolaireFilm wood windows and doors – exclusively yours from Weather Shield!

Housing Starts

The Long-Term Picture

February's increase in starts was due to more than better weather. Homebuilding has been on the rise since November, albeit from rockbottom. Money rates remain dismayingly high, and federal deficits are outrageous and have panicked the financial markets. Moreover, we see the shortfall as $100 billion more than the administration estimates for the next three fiscal years. Nonetheless, inflation has eased to a 5% range and the Federal Reserve has prodded money supply growth to better than 10%. If Congress and the administration can trim the deficit by around $20 billion — as we think is likely — long-term rates will fall fairly sharply through the summer. And that will send homebuilding upward.

An impressive 41.4% surge in multifamily led housing starts to a 6.5% rise in February, providing a 953,000 annual rate — the strongest pace since last July. Moreover, revised data show that homebuilding has been on the rise for four months in a row. Finer detail paints a more discouraging picture, however; and in light of January's bad weather, it's clear the rebound was pretty feeble. Single-family starts fell almost 11%. Activity in the key Western region slipped by nearly 13%, though the South staged a 12% comeback. Also, building permit reports continue the sour theme. Part of the problem was clearly a stiffening in mortgage rates, accompanied by the deterioration in new-home sales in January. Home completions in January showed a chilly 5.8% decline, likely reflecting the harsh weather factor. Both single-family and two-to-four unit structures saw a falloff, but the five-or-more category rose by almost 7% to stand nearly 30% ahead of last year. Units under construction were essentially unchanged, with little variation among categories.

Breaking a three-month uptrend, new single-family sales sagged by 23% in January. Blame the snowcover, which kept many prospects at home. For example, sales fell 12% in the South and 37% in the Northeast after seasonal adjustment; but out West, the drop was a hefty 39%. The falloff lifted the stock of new homes on the market to 9.3 months at the January sales pace; the average price slipped 2.4% to $81,300. Existing home sales also were buffeted by the winter storm, but the average sales price managed to strengthen 2.2%. Another optimistic note: mobile-home shipments rose by 2.4% in January after seasonal adjustment. Spending for home repair and alterations was unchanged in the last quarter of 1981. But that's favorable when compared with the sharp downside in homebuilding at the same time.

All data seasonally adjusted unless marked by an asterisk (*). In most cases latest figures are preliminary, with revisions shown in next month's table.

February's 2.1% bounceback by producers of construction materials and supplies looks more like a thawing out from January's freeze than a bonafide strengthening in markets. It certainly doesn't make up for the 15.2% slide over the preceding six months. That would be corroborated by a 3.3% decline in new orders for construction wares in January, and a 2% drop in producers' shipments. Similarly, while wholesale prices for construction materials and supplies rose 0.3% during February, the seasonally adjusted change was a decline of 0.1%. While lumber and plywood quotes slipped in February, cement and asphalt cost more, as did plastic-based construction goods. The pick-up in construction activity in February was evidenced by a seasonally-adjusted gain of 76,000 in construction employment, trimming the industry's unemployment rate to 18.1%. Most salubrious was a 2.6% drop in tradesmen's hourly earnings in February, reversing the January surge.

Interest rates edged down in early March but will remain high and volatile through April. The principal problem, of course, is the projected Federal deficits. But by early summer Congress and the administration will make sufficient budget cuts — around $20 billion — to allow money managers to regain their composure and let rates fall in step. The Federal Reserve wants to lower rates but can't readily do so because of rapid growth in the money supply. As congressional elections draw nigh and legislators touch base with their constituents, Congress will put unbearable pressure on the Fed to loosen up on the credit spigots. Thus, our forecast is for lower long-term rates by late summer, down about 200-basis points. The immediate stumbling block will be the tax-return season April 15. It will probably witness an outsized bulge in the money supply that is far beyond the Fed's targets. Ameliorating that, however, will be significantly lower inflation and elevated unemployment, which will make the Fed far more receptive toward any unplanned acceleration in money supply growth.

February saw a testing for bottom.

Industrial production climbed 1.6%, though the weather factor clouds the true strength involved. Similarly, employment edged up, but not enough to stop the unemployment rate from jumping to 8.8%. More positively, inflation was down, including an outright drop in seasonally-adjusted wholesale prices. And personal income rose 0.5%, slightly faster than recently. One very bright spot: the plunge in international oil prices, down $8/bbl. in the spot market. That would add about $45 billion to personal incomes this year. Likewise, the 10% tax cut and increase in Social Security payments will boost incomes $40 billion more. Thus, we expect the economy to pick up speed sharply after mid-year. And with inflation slowing — including wage concessions by unions in hard hit industries — real purchasing power will soar at better than a 6% annual rate in the second half. Coupled with our interest-rate outlook, we see homebuilding gathering momentum through the rest of the year and into 1983.

WALL TO WALL PROOF: YOU GET MORE INSULATION FOR LESS WITH EPS.

We updated our giant bar chart to show you'll get even more for your money in 1981 when you use EPS insulation as sheathing. Not only more material, but better R values, too.

Compare the figures wall to wall. One-inch EPS insulation has a greater R value than 3/4" Styrofoam TG or 1/2" urethane foam, yet actually costs much less. So, for the same money, you can insulate better and cover a larger wall area, too, with EPS.

Half-inch wood fiberboard costs about 4¢ less per square foot than one-inch EPS, but has less than one-third the insulation value ($R = 1.2$).

Sturdy EPS is lightweight, easy to handle and install. It needs no venting and meets model code requirements.

EPS insulation is manufactured by over 175 independent quality producers and is available . . . standard as shown or foil laminated . . . in a variety of sizes, thicknesses, and edge treatments from building supply dealers all across the country.

So get the most for your money, year after year. Use EPS, the greatest insulation value in residential construction.

Get more, spend less with EPS.

MATERIAL	COST/ SQ.FT.*	% CHANGE 11/79-11/80	R VALUE	COVERAGE (@ $150)
1" EPS insulation	15¢	+6	3.9	1000 sq. ft.

STEEL FRAMING: the thinking builders' alternative.

Steel framing first made its mark with builders as an alternative when pricing and availability problems bedeviled traditional wood framing. But, today, more and more builders are sticking to their decision to switch to steel—and avoid all the uncertainties surrounding wood framing. Lightweight, load-bearing USG™ Steel Framing Systems start straight, stay straight. Waste is held to a minimum. Nail pops are non-existent. Jobs go faster to cut crew time. Move-in dates can be moved up. And you save on financing. You'll find noncombustible USG Steel Framing is especially cost-effective on high density projects. Its consistent uniformity is highly compatible with the built-in efficiencies of repeating patterns and panelized techniques. Call today for specifics. See our folder in Sweet's General Building and Light Residential Files, Sec. 5.3/Ung. Or write to us at 101 S. Wacker Dr., Chicago, IL 60606, Dept. H 4/82

Housing Commission's Rx for housing

The President's Commission on Housing put the finishing touches on a report that will go to the White House on April 30 by approving more than 30 major recommendations that could have long-range implications for the industry.

The report, complete except for a few details and language-polishing, has been dubbed the most comprehensive look at housing in the past decade. The 30-member blue-ribbon committee, chaired by William F. McKenna, senior partner in the Los Angeles firm of McKenna, Conner & Cuneo, broke down its recommendations into four basic groups:

- Present housing issues, dealing with such problems as maintaining the viability of mortgage-lending depository institutions over the near term and ways to stimulate the flow of needed funds to housing;
- Government regulations and reducing housing costs, recommendations that focus on 16 issues ranging from local building codes to disposal of surplus federal properties;
- Problems associated with home ownership and rental housing;
- An economics section that made recommendations on such things as mortgage revenue bonds, tax incentives for mortgage investments and the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act.

How many of the commission's recommendations actually will be implemented will be up to the White House. The report is only one of several studies that will provide input into what eventually will evolve into a new housing policy for the administration. So far, there is no fixed date when this policy is to be completed, however.

Codes. The commission recommended that building codes be limited to health and safety requirements, with all other restrictions eliminated. It also urged that states require localities with building codes to adopt—with little or no amendment—one of the currently nationally recognized model building codes and the Council of American Building Officials (CABO) one- and two-family dwelling code.

Rent controls at the federal, state and local levels should be abolished on grounds that they reduce the quality and discourage the building of rental units, the commission said. In fact, the commission feels so strongly on this issue that it recommended Congress enact legislation requiring states to remove rent controls if they are to continue receiving federal housing aid. The commission also wants zoning restrictions against manufactured housing abolished. And it opposes land-use regulations promoting environmental objectives that limit housing production.

Democrats push a pro-housing program

House Democrats have proposed a housing program designed as a counterfoil to what they call President Reagan's "anti-housing program." Sponsors are hopeful they can get the legislation through the House by mid-summer, but prospects for getting the legislation past the Senate and White House are bleak.

Rep. Henry Gonzales (D-Tex.), who introduced the legislation on behalf of House Banking and Housing Committee chairman Fernand J. St Germain (D-R.I.), and others, estimated the bill would provide assistance for about 300,000 new units in fiscal 1983.

Hold present limits. The Democratic initiative would maintain commitment authority for FHA and Ginnie Mae at current levels and provide government subsidies to reduce interest rates to 9.5% for 100,000 homebuyers with incomes of no more than 130% of the area median. Gonzales estimated Reagan's proposals, which include cutbacks in authority for FHA and Ginnie Mae, would reduce by 46,000 the number of units assisted by Federal programs.

In addition, the Democrats proposed an alternative approach to replacing the Sec. 8 program for subsidizing multifamily housing. The Reagan administration would replace Sec. 8 with vouchers for low-income renters; the Democrats' proposal would appropriate $1.3 billion in fiscal 1983 to be made available to state and local agencies for a variety of housing subsidies. On approval by the secretary of Housing and Urban Development, the state and local agencies could use the money for capital grants for construction or rehabilitation, direct loans, interest rate subsidies, land-purchase grants or any other comparable assistance the localities and secretary might find appropriate. The Democrats would require that at least 20% of assisted projects be available to persons earning no more than 80% of area median income and would limit rents for such people to no more than 30% of their adjusted income.

The Democrats' proposal also would create a $760 million fund to be used for taking over mortgage payments for a year for homeowners facing foreclosure as a result of circumstances beyond the owners' control. —D.W.

'De-coding' the high costs of homebuilding

CHICAGO—Home builders in the northwest suburb of Elgin have made a crystal-clear case for regulatory reform in building codes—in the name of affordability and in the shape of a “concept house.” The Home Builders Association of Greater Chicago has gone to great lengths to showcase how efficiency-oriented design, innovative energy features and technology both old and new—can produce an attractive house that costs less to build and less to operate.

Edmund H. Sorenson, a builder and last year's HBA president, built the house—with plenty of help. The HBA formed the Greater Chicago-land Housing Foundation, a non-profit organization to receive donations of materials from manufacturers. Architects Schiller & Frank of Wheeling, Ill. contributed design services. Other HBA members and friends also helped.

Overriding emphasis in the concept house is on efficient use of space and low energy consumption. At 1,108 sq. ft., it has about 27% less living area than what Sorenson says is average for a new home built in the Chicago area today. The house has three bedrooms, one-and-one-half baths, and a “living center” adjoining the kitchen which serves as a combined living, dining and family room. This room, which boasts a 14'-high cathedral ceiling, opens to a trellised patio. The house also offers 38 lineal feet of “organized” storage space, more than might be found in many $100,000 ranch houses, says Martin Bartling, executive officer with the HBA. Estimated cost of the “concept house” as a production model: low-to-mid $60,000s.

Some codes waived. Because the house is considered “experimental,” code variations that allow for use of alternative—usually cheaper—building materials, were permitted. For example, the house has all-plastic plumbing: polybutylene hot and cold water pipes and feeder pipes linked to the main, instead of copper, and a PVC drain system running to the sewer line instead of cast iron. The house is constructed with steel studs spaced 24" o.c. and ½" drywall instead of ⅝".

The one variance the builders asked the Elgin Building Commission for but didn't receive: permission to use plastic-sheathed electrical cable (Romex) in the house. “We had a member of the Building Commission (a citizens' group whose members must have some professional building expertise) who argued vehemently against it,” says Jerry Deering, land-use supervisor in Elgin. “He was very convincing.”

The commission member, Fred Smith, is a business agent for the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local 117 in Elgin.

Smith says he opposed the plastic sheathed cable for a number of reasons—though the initial cost is perhaps $100 lower, the subsequent cost to add electrical outlets or upgrade the “ampacity” (electrical capacity) of a house wired with Romex is far, far higher than a house equipped with thin-wall conduit, which was used in the concept house. “You can do things a hell of a lot cheaper, but at what price,” Smith asks.

He adds that there is a danger of fire because the plastic-sheathed cable can be pierced by a nail used to hang a picture, and the use of steel studs also increases the danger of fire because the edges of the steel studs can cut into the soft plastic cable sheathing.

An opposing view. Bartling doesn't buy fire-safety arguments against Romex. “You have a half-hour to an hour fire rating on the wallboard, and (by the time a fire burned through that to create toxic fumes from the PVC covering the cable) everyone in the house would have long since burned to death,” he asserts. “The unions are opposed to it because it cuts down installation time.”

Smith counters that it takes about 32 hours for a union electrician to wire a house, either with Romex or thin-wall conduit.

Cost considerations. Cost savings on the code-variance items break down this way, according to Sorenson: about $600 on plumbing, and about $500 on heating. Steel framing, while currently slightly more expensive than wood, has the advantage of being relatively stable in price (an advantage that could become more attractive should a sudden surge in homebuilding boost lumber prices); and not as attractive to job-site thieves, says Sorenson.

Elgin's Deering says, “the concept house was brought to us, and the way we looked at it—it was a way to spark interest in a very slow housing market. We saw it as a way to show some code modifications that might have some effect on costs. Our feeling has been, the city (pop. 63,000) is big enough to consider something to help the sluggish housing market.”

However, Deering cautions that the

It also approved a recommendation calling for Congress to require that warranty protection now mandatory on FHA, VA, and FmHA homes be administered through private sector programs, provided that such programs do not discriminate on the basis of the homebuyer, neighborhood or other criteria. The commission urged that all homebuilders consider offering insurance-backed warranties as an option with new homes.

Fragmented authority. The commission deplored the fact that there is a multiplicity of federal regulations administered by various agencies that affect housing, but no single executive entity with the authority or responsibility to evaluate the impact of these regulations. The commission called on the Vice President's task force on regulatory relief to designate housing for special regulatory relief consideration as was done for the automobile industry and small businesses.

Licensing changes. To beef up productivity in housing, the commission wants the President's advisory committee on national productivity—as a special priority—to take a long look at housing, and seek ways to step up productivity. Toward this end, the commission wants states to rework licensing regulations, and drop all requirements except those essential to health and safety. If testing is required, the commission urged that it be limited to job performance criteria.

The commission also wants to ban municipalities from exercising any licensing authority over the construction trades. And it wants comparable licenses issued by one state to be recognized by others.

If the commission has its way, inclusionary zoning would be ended. It opposes regulations that require builders to allocate a percentage of a development for housing to accommodate low- and moderate-income families where this would inhibit development and production of housing or excessively control the character of the development or impose unnecessarily high standards and economic burdens on builders, buyers or tenants.

Obviously, many of the 32 recommendations are controversial and certain to produce heated debate. They do however, represent a comprehensive new look at the housing industry.

GAO study: Housing could cost less—if...

Except for efforts to increase energy efficiency, neither the construction industry nor concerned agencies are trying very hard to introduce new technologies that could help reduce housing costs.

So says the General Accounting Office in a report to Congress. The GAO report, presented in late February, said that homebuilders, the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and the semi-official National Institute of Building Sciences (NIBS) are delinquent in their efforts to push for innovations that potentially could reduce average costs of a median-priced, single-family detached home by thousands of dollars.

Willy-nilly codes cited. The GAO report singled out narrowly defined and unevenly administered local building codes, builders' hesitation to employ new, largely unproven technology and sparse literature on the subject as key obstacles to the wider use of advanced technology. The GAO said the prevailing industry caution in making use of new "hardware" is hard to understand in view of the 1979 "cost-buster" demonstration project in Las Vegas sponsored by the National Association of Home Builders.

Some cost-saving procedures and items cited in the GAO report: substitution of 24" o.c. for 16" o.c. framing; under-floor plenum heating instead of conventional duct heating; plastic polybutylene piping for plumbing in place of metal pipes, and use of bathtubs with integral surrounds that eliminate the need for tilework.

While acknowledging that times are not conducive to the introduction of new technologies because of declining R&D efforts in general, the GAO chided HUD and NIBS for insufficient cooperation in trying to find out what "opportunities and alternatives" did exist despite money and personnel limitations. The agency said it was not trying to minimize HUD's efforts but noted sharply, "HUD does not appear to adequately recognize the urgency of providing help to new homebuyers who must contend with rapidly rising housing costs." It urged HUD to stimulate acceptance of such new technology by "model code groups," repeated previous calls for more Congressional funding for NIBS research and urged NIBS to produce mere technical data for dissemination by HUD.

HUD and NIBS respond. Commenting on the GAO findings, HUD said it agreed with the report's "concept" but strongly disagreed with the contention that HUD has been "delinquent" in its support of housing innovations. NIBS in its response said its job is not to lobby for any particular type of innovative materials or equipment, but to provide performance targets, "a much more objective way to promote innovation."

Alluding to funding problems NIBS has encountered since its inception in 1975, which were specifically acknowledged in the GAO report, NIBS President Gene Brewer said his institute had in fact realigned its priorities each year in line with money available and therefore "has a sound record of progress under the circumstances."

house was meant as an experiment and not to serve as a precedent. "We view it as a test house" to evaluate the wisdom of changing codes, or, for that matter, leaving them just as they are.

A 'showcase' for builders. The homebuilders, meanwhile, see the house as a lobbying vehicle to show code alternatives to skeptical officials and builders. "The purpose . . . is to influence building officials and our own builder-members who in many cases are reluctant to change," says Bartling. Some 30 to 45 building officials from suburban Chicago visited the house during an open-wall exhibit day. "They'd say, 'Why did you use plastic pipe, why did you use steel studs,'" says Bartling. "Essentially they were negative questions. But two or three came back, curious and wanting to know more."

An energy saver. The house features numerous energy-related features: a newly-developed 40,000 BTU, 92% efficient recuperative gas-fired furnace (most gas furnaces are about 65% efficient, says Bartling); extremely tight construction including T&G polystyrene sheathing; polyurethane foam around all wall openings; and window-sill sealer along plate lines ("My guess is that it very well could be too tight," says Bartling); insulation values of R-38 in the ceiling and R-19 in the sidewalls; and an air-flow system for ventilation, which Sorenson characterizes as "post World War II."

"Because of the triple-glazed windows, the insulation and the other infiltration-reducing measures," he says, "we felt it was no longer necessary to introduce the warm air supply underneath the windows—which the Elgin code requires."

Instead, Sorenson put in a plenum system that allowed for a high-wall central warm-air supply (in the heated space of the house). He also installed a single cold-air return, which reduces the amount of ductwork, thus material and installation costs. The continuous air circulation (CAC) heating system incorporates a fan that runs all the time. So, says Bartling, "you have a positive pressure in the house that also works against infiltration."

Bottom-to-top insulation. Another energy-related feature, which is really neither new nor old technology, but a fairly new application, is complete vertical insulation of the house from the footings to the roof. Rigid one-inch polystyrene sheathing is installed while the footings and slab are poured. "The insulation has to be held in place until after the slab is formed," Sorenson says. But a part of the house which is usually unprotected from the elements—the vertical edge of the slab abutting soil—is given some measure of protection this way, also adding to the overall energy efficiency of the house.

Bartling claims that the house's complete heat loss is about 23,000 BTUs and that the house could be heated completely by 35 200-watt light bulbs.

The house is expected to be completed this month. Then Sorenson will pay the value of the contributed materials to GCHF and take title (he paid construction costs). It is built on a model row in his Parkwood subdivision. He does not know at this time the full cost of the house, but guesses hard costs without land would run in the low $40,000's. Sorenson adds, however, that there's flexibility and that the house could be built without such "extras" as the garage, skylights, fireplace, second bath, etc.

"This house could range from a Chevette to a Cadillac," says Bartling, and Sorenson says the model just built "will be close to a Seville." Though the home builders are trying to build an affordable house, they are intent on avoiding the no-frills houses which bombed so balefully in the mid '70s. "This is different from the stripped-down house in that it's a smaller building with some amenities and some ideas to increase the liveability," says Sorenson. "We want to show that small can be beautiful."

THE NEW GE ELECTRONIC HEAT PUMP HAS EIGHT SOPHISTICATED FEATURES.

IF YOU LIKE ITS LOOKS, MAKE IT NINE.

The new General Electric Zonline® IV heat pump is the most advanced package terminal unit there is.

There are eight reasons why.

One, our Zonline IV heat pump reduces temperature swing. That means greater comfort.

Two, it operates at lower outdoor temperatures than previous models, only switching to electric resistance heat when absolutely necessary. That means greater economy.

As does three, the temperature-limiting feature that allows upper and lower restrictions to be set on both heating and cooling. And four, the energy-management module that allows the Zonline IV heat pumps to be controlled from a central location.

And reliability? The Zonline IV heat pump gives the word new meaning. With five, a solid-state compressor protection circuit. Six, a service LED that indicates compressor malfunction. And seven, emergency heating capability should it ever be needed.

Not to mention number eight, a freeze sentinel feature that automatically helps prevent freeze-ups, even when the unit is not in use.

Oh, and that brings us to nine. But that's only if you like the sophisticated electronic touch controls as much as we do.

For further information on the General Electric Zonline IV heat pump, write J. A. Michelsen, Mgr. Cont. Mkt., General Electric, AP-6-104, Louisville, KY 40225.

Bail-out hopes: Can the thrifts be saved?

The persistence of high interest rates has triggered growing concern in Washington over the state of the financial system underpinning housing, but the concern is proving difficult to translate into action. It's not that there is any lack of proposals for helping people finance home purchases or for checking the heavy losses among the savings and loans associations that provide the major source of housing money. The problem is that the White House, Congress, federal regulators and industry officials have been unable to build the necessary consensus around any of the proposed solutions.

The White House at least acknowledged that housing is in serious trouble, for example, by setting up a new emergency task force headed by Samuel R. Pierce Jr., secretary of Housing and Urban Development. But administration officials were quick to rule out any measures which might have a large and direct impact on the federal budget and its already sizeable deficits. Sen. Jake Garn (R-Utah), chairman of the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs, was likewise strongly opposed to any measures costing the federal government a lot of money.

So far, most of the proposals from the thrift institutions and its advocates would cost the government substantial amounts of money. The National Savings and Loan League, for example, proposed a so-called "warehousing" system that would cost the government some $8 billion over five years or so. The plan is called warehousing because the government would hold the thrifts' low-yielding mortgages and issue debentures paying interest to the S&Ls at market rates. The cost to the government—and the benefit to the S&Ls—would be the difference between the market rate of interest the debentures earned and the below-market rate earned by the mortgages. The thrifts could trade in the debentures for the mortgages when interest rates fell closer to the yield on the mortgages.

More proposals from thrifts. Other proposals endorsed by the league, which represents primarily larger savings and loan associations, included extension of the tax-exempt All Savers certificates beyond their current Dec. 31 expiration date, creation of a tax-exempt or tax-deferred account in which people without a home of their own could save up for the down payment on a house. The league endorsed in principle a proposal by House Banking Committee chairman Fernand J.

St Germain (D-R.I.) to create a $7.5 billion emergency fund for troubled thrifts. St Germain would let thrifts borrow from the fund when the value of their net worth fell to less than 2% of liabilities and require them to repay the money after their net worth rose to 3%. In the meantime, they would pay interest on the loans at the same rate the Treasury pays on its borrowed money. Since the Treasury can borrow at a rate lower than the S&Ls could borrow on their own, the fund would provide a relatively low-cost source of funds for shaky thrifts.

Other voices heard. Two more associations representing the thrifts are pushing their own federal aid program they estimate would cost $10 billion in the first of the three years the program would be in place.

The U.S. League of Savings Associations and the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, like NSLL, proposed a "warehousing" program for old, low-yielding mortgages. The U.S. League and NAMSAB also asked buy-downs for new home mortgages and the creation of a federally-sponsored agency to inject money into financially troubled thrifts. Under their warehousing program, which would cost an estimated $7.5 billion in the first year, thrifts could exchange mortgages with rates of less than 9% for debentures paying half the difference between existing market interest rates and the rate on the mortgages. The exchange would be reversed after three years.

The buy-down program, which would cost $2.5 billion in the first year, would permit lenders to make mortgages at one percentage point below the going rate, with the Treasury providing payments to reduce the rate paid by the borrower by another three percentage points.

The third element in the program: creation of a Community Depository Conservation Corp. to issue government-guaranteed loans to thrifts whose net worth falls below 1.5% of assets. "Only in the unlikely event of liquidation" of an institution getting the loans would government expenditures be involved, according to Roy Green, chairman of the U.S. League.

Mergers on the rise. The indications are that there are plenty of shaky thrifts. The pace of mergers supervised by or bankrolled by federal regulators has picked up this year from the already high levels of last year, when there were 294 thrift mergers. A recent Brookings Institution study estimated that mergers and failures in the thrift industry will total over 1,000 during the next few years as a result of

Pierce woos pension funds

HUD Secretary Samuel R. Pierce met with nearly 50 chief financial officers of the nation's top pension funds on Feb. 25 to urge the funds to increase their investment in mortgage instruments. According to Pierce, who presented a two-day program to the officers, "Mortgages are a good, competitive investment" for the funds.

Pierce said the $600 billion in pension funds, $400 billion of which is held in private funds, represents perhaps the single most important untapped source of housing finance. At present, pension fund investment in mortgage instruments amounts to only about 3%.

The HUD secretary acknowledged that this low level of investment stems in part from constraints imposed on pension funds by the provisions and regulations of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA). However, he said the Labor Department has begun to relax regulations limiting pension fund investment in residential mortgages. Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan said permission for housing and construction-related pension funds to buy construction and home loans should be forthcoming shortly. Donovan expects other funds to get similar permission this summer.

Beyond that, Pierce said, "Many pension fund officials are not fully aware that mortgage instruments are competitive in the investment network."

Canadian housing in a deep freeze, too

WINNIPEG—Temperatures rose here from the usual minus 30 degrees to zero for the 39th annual conference of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada.

But a housing-starts forecast told the more than 1,000 convention delegates from some 6,000 companies across Canada that the Canadian housing industry, like that of the U.S., is still in the deep freeze: 1982 starts were pegged to hit only 155,000 units—the lowest level since 1966.

The bad news came from Klaus Springer, outgoing president of HUDAC and chief spokesman for Canada's residential construction industry. While last year was a difficult one for the industry—with 177,973 starts—Springer said all the indications pointed to an even worse performance in 1982. His message was blunt: "Every member of HUDAC should put survival as his first goal and objective."

HUDAC predicts only two provinces, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, will record an increase in starts this year. Ontario, the heartland of Canadian manufacturing, will see a 16 percent drop to 42,000 starts. Quebec is expected to remain level at about 29,700, while Alberta will drop 15 percent to 32,500 and British Columbia will fall 19 percent to 33,500.

Such statistics likely mean lower profits for builders, who have already suffered a reduction in their average profit margin over the last few years. According to HUDAC figures, profits as a proportion of sales revenues declined continually from an average 9.5 percent in 1975 to a mere 2.7 percent in 1980. And builders in New Brunswick, Manitoba and Ontario—actually recorded losses in 1980.

U.S. to blame? Springer laid much of the blame for the low level of construction on Canada's interest rates. Lenders and borrowers wait with baited breath every Thursday as the trend-setting Bank of Canada fixes its rate. But the bank, an arm of the federal government, has generally matched rises and falls in the U.S. rate to prevent an outflow of capital from Canada. It is this policy which has Springer and many other builders angry.

"It is unfortunate we are tied to the situation in the United States, but until they [sic] lower interest rates, it will be difficult for us to do differently," Springer says. Still, he believes the Canadian government could and should moderate fluctuations and provide a measure of stability for the prospective homebuyer. Officials are hoping the Reagan administration will loosen its grip on rates as elections draw closer, which would in turn offer relief to Canadian borrowers.

Limited aid. HUDAC spent most of their financial problems. Federal Home Loan Bank Board chairman Richard T. Pratt estimates that at least 10 percent of the nation's 4,000 insured savings and loans had a net worth below the 2% considered by regulators to be the minimum for a sound thrift. The industry as a whole lost nearly $5 billion last year, with more than 80 percent of the institutions running in the red. And Pratt adds: "There's virtually no prospect for the industry to become profitable this year."

With that kind of prospect facing him, Pratt is pushing on his own for a solution. The basic and continuing problem for the thrifts is that they are locked into low yields on their old mortgages written years ago while paying today's higher rates on the bulk of their savings deposits. Both Pratt and the Reagan administration have argued that the best way to ease the thrifts' pain is to expand their powers to make shorter-term loans to business and consumers and to enhance their power to attract new savings money. Critics contend that the new powers will mean less money for home mortgages, while Pratt and the administration respond that failing to keep the thrifts alive would be a disaster for housing. The argument, at any rate, has become academic. Proposed legislation to expand the thrifts' powers has become stalemated in Congress in a battle between Garn, who favors comprehensive legislation for financial institutions, and St Germain, who favors addressing the thrifts' short-term dilemma before addressing the longer-term issues.

Asks Bank Board action. Pratt stepped into the breach on Feb. 25 by proposing that the Bank Board do by regulation what he had asked Congress to do by legislation. "The allowable activities of institutions are not sufficient to maintain a good, competitive, viable framework in the long run," said Pratt. In addition to expanding S&L's authority to make consumer loans and empowering them to lend money to business, the Pratt proposal would let the thrifts invest directly in real estate and real estate development and permit them to set up money market funds to attract depositors. The Bank Board said it will take comments on the proposals for 60 days, but Pratt said he envisions final implementation of the rules at some point, perhaps by July. At the time the rules are implemented, a suit is expected from the American Bankers Association or some commercial banks. Those banks are eager to see that the thrifts not gain any new powers until they, too, can offer money market funds and win a more rapid phaseout of federal ceilings on allowable interest rates for deposits at banks and thrifts.

Rally '82 aims to K.O. gloom-and-doom cycle

A promotion that started out as one company's effort to rev up its sales force is now turning into a national campaign to rev up the entire housing industry.

Instead of waiting for a market turnaround, Scovill's NuTone Housing Group, based in Cincinnati, Ohio, is trying to create one. It has launched Rally '82 in the hope that it will have a ripple effect throughout the industry and even the economy as a whole.

Rally '82 includes:

The company's contribution: A 15% discount, good between March 26 and May 21, on 232 of the most popular models in its twelve product lines (see catalog page 89). In addition, the NuTone sales force will generate sales for the company's distributors by bringing the Rally '82 message directly to the builders.

The suppliers' contribution: NuTone suppliers, ranging from steel companies to art suppliers, have agreed to discount their bills as a contribution to Rally '82.

The employees' contribution: All NuTone employees are signing a pledge to increase productivity while maintaining quality.

To remind everyone of their commitment, the company is raising Rally '82 flags on its flagpoles, hanging Rally '82 banners and posters in offices and plants and distributing Rally '82 buttons, bumper stickers, balloons and caps to employees and customers.

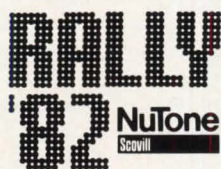

National participation. The next phase of Rally '82 asks for the federal government's contribution. All 2,345 NuTone employees are signing a telegram to President Reagan (which will also be published in national news media) asking him to declare 1982 as the Rally Year to stimulate national involvement. The telegram declares: "All companies can hold or lower prices. All employees can contribute to increased productivity. All of us can what's available."

New perspective. Paul Zender, NuTone's director of marketing and advertising, adds: "What we're trying to do is to change attitudes. We're destroying confidence by always talking gloom and doom. We need something to believe in."

Zender explains that Rally '82 grew out of NuTone's January sales meet-

Rally (ral'ē) v. [Fr. rallier, from Old Fr. ralier: re-again + alier, to unite].

1. To muster, call up, or summon for a common purpose. 2. To restore the spirits or courage. 3. To re-unite so as to renew an effort. 4. To regain offensive strength: recapture initiative: come back.

contribute our best effort, our spirit, our determination."

J. A. Rankin, executive vice president of Scovill's NuTone Housing Group, points out that while one million housing starts may be an unacceptably low level, that figure still means 2.5 million bathrooms, 3 million bedrooms and a million kitchens—all of which require building products and materials. "I'm tired of hearing people talk about the weather and bad economics," Rankin says. "Worrying about those things over which we have no control can seriously handicap the industry's efforts to make the most of ing, which had a sports theme. "I looked up the word 'rally' in the dictionary and realized it had a lot of very positive meanings that applied to our situation," says Zender. (Some of them are shown above.)

The meeting was a success, and so was the promotion that followed, in which NuTone salespeople held seminars for the distributors' sales staffs and customers on the advantages of NuTone products.

"The next step," says Zender, "was to find a way to spread this positive attitude over the entire industry. The result is Rally '82." □ last year in a vigorous lobbying campaign to convince the government to sponsor programs that would encourage residential construction. But when the budget was announced in November, the industry was shocked. Not only were the lobbying efforts largely ignored, but some of the incentives which had been available to builders in the past were dismantled.

Not surprisingly, when Federal Housing Minister Paul Cosgrove showed up at the HUDAC convention he was given a decidedly cool reception. Cosgrove told the delegates his government had no intention of supplementing the budget with any new provisions for builders. He said the federal interest relief program, which promised some $350 million for borrowers who found themselves in dire straits over high rates, would be as far as the government could go at this time.

Pent-up demand. There are officialists in HUDAC who see some light at the end of the tunnel. Geoff Campbell, chairman of the economic research committee, said actual demand stands at about 200,000 units per year in Canada. Thus if only the predicted 155,000 starts are realized, there will be an unsatisfied demand of 100,000 units over the 1981-82 period.

"You can't go on forever with that kind of demand not being satisfied," says Campbell. "It eventually has to be serviced." He feels confident of a housing boom which will end the current bust, possibly as early as 1983.

Delegates to the three-day convention, regarded by HUDAC officials as the most important ever held in its 39-year history, heard speeches and presentations from dozens of experts in the housing and finance field.

Among them were Fred Napolitano, newly-elected president of the National Association of Home Builders, and Professor Arthur Laffer, of the University of Southern California, one of President Reagan's chief financial advisors and leading advocate of supply-side "growthist" economics.

Attention getters. When the delegates weren't attending workshops or listening to speeches, they were canvassing displays from about 125 of Canada's leading suppliers and manufacturers. The exhibits featured everything from furnaces to roofing. Fibreglas Canada Inc. attracted attention with its introduction of exterior basement wall insulation. The company claims its product, available for the first time in North America, effectively solves the problem of basement heat loss in new homes.

The convention concluded with the election of Cyril Morgan of St. John's, Newfoundland, as the new president of HUDAC.

HOUSING DEMAND INDEX[®]

Second Quarter, 1982

Continued uncertainty about the U.S. economy is reflected in this quarter's housing demand index: Three-quarters of the SMSAs (Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas) charted are rated poorer-than-average or very poor. This represents a significant change even from last quarter's none-too-cheering ratings.

What's the reason? Dr. Alfred Gobar, the California-based market analyst who prepares the index, cites high interest rates, of course. But he also points out that continued recession—and the way the press is working it over—has eroded consumers' confidence. "Prospective buyers are nervous," he says. "When it comes to purchasing a home, they're less willing to take the plunge."

Even so, a few markets merit improved ratings—eleven, to be exact. Most notable is Boston, which earns this quarter's lone solid green triangle, denoting a very strong market. Las Vegas and Tulsa now earn above-average scores, while Phoenix, Madison, Wis. and Providence, R.I. are among those moving out of the cellar.

Gobar's best bets: markets where there's a large reservoir of potential first-time buyers. This group has few inhibitions about paying high interest rates if there's no problem qualifying for loans. And, of course, such buyers don't have the worry of an existing house to sell. Unfortunately, markets with such a demand for starter housing are also usually characterized by prices that are, in most cases, beyond the reach of first-time buyers. "This form of Catch-22," says Gobar, "implies the need for a fairly massive rethinking of housing product."

Some such markets where builders should put on their thinking caps: Los Angeles, Orange County, San Diego and Oklahoma City, where, according to Gobar, "there's a severe shortage of housing of any type, but new housing is extraordinarily expensive."

Housing costs are a problem for renters, too. Gobar says that new apartments being built are "almost universally" out of line with the incomes of potential tenants. This lack of affordable rental units could lead to substantial consumer dissatisfaction. The implications: "A lot of political pushing and hollering, screaming and shouting," says Gobar. "We haven't heard the last of rent control."

Nevertheless, it's not time for builders to fold up their tents. Says Gobar: "I'm probably more optimistic than most people. I think interest rates will come down to 13%. I think next summer we'll have pretty strong economic activity and some good demand for housing—if, that is, we can figure out how to price it right and get it to consumers." —BARBARA BEHRENS GERS

How to read the index

Five symbols are used:

-  A green solid triangle indicates a very strong market with significant pent-up demand.
-  A green open triangle indicates a better than average situation, with demand increasing faster than supply.
-  A white circle indicates the market is in relative equilibrium—that is, supply and demand are increasing at similar rates.
-  A red open triangle indicates a poorer than average situation, usually an overbuilt market.
-  A red solid triangle indicates a very poor situation that could be overbuilt by as much as two years.

Each SMSA is evaluated three ways:

1. Degree of opportunity—in effect, a summation of all factors affecting the market.
2. Demand by units—just what it says.
3. Demand by purchasing power—the relative ability of the market to pay current prices or rents.

Each of these categories is in turn divided into three sub-categories:

1. All housing in the SMSA.
2. For-sale housing—single-family detached and some mid- and high-priced condos.
3. For-rent housing—rental apartments and low-priced condos.

Albuquerque's economy continues to stagnate, says Gobar, so vacancy rates are probably rising. One result: There's no great pressure on tenants to purchase housing—especially when faced with high-interest rates.

Austin slips a notch, partly because reduced state government employment put a whammy on demand. Even so, Gobar points his finger to 9,000 households in Austin that consist of potential homebuyers. The problem: The price of housing coming on stream is relatively high, compounding the problem of steep interest rates and taking monthly payments beyond the grasp of first-time buyers.

Baton Rouge, though down-rated, is still healthier than most U.S. markets, Gobar says. Prices of single-family homes are within reach, although qualified buyers may be discouraged by high interest rates.

Boise is "a disaster," according to Gobar. Since this city was relatively unaffected by national economic circumstances in 1974-75, "current conditions represent an almost unprecedentedly dismal situation." Even though housing completions have dropped considerably, the drop is no match for the decrease in demand.

Boston "continues to surprise" Gobar. "Demand is rising and falling within a fairly narrow band," he says. What's more, each succeeding peak is higher than the previous one, and each succeeding low point is well above the previous low point. The major negative as far as Boston is concerned: multifamily housing that's relatively expensive.

Dayton's developers aren't doing much—but it's still too much. Net demand over the last 12 months: 30 units.

To make best use of the index, keep these points in mind

- Point #1: The chart's simplified symbols represent complex statistics, so they provide only a general picture. A builder, no matter how high his market is rated, must still analyze his own situation very carefully.
- Point #2: The reports indicate the degree of risk in a given SMSA rather than the number of housing units that can be built there. A large SMSA with a poor rating would still support more new housing than a smaller SMSA with an excellent rating. But the relative degree of risk for the developer or lender would be much greater in the larger SMSA.
- Point #3: The reports are projective, not historical. That is, they forecast demand six months ahead rather than describing the situation as it now stands. An SMSA may have strong sales or low vacancies but still be a poor risk; building-permit figures may indicate imminent oversupplies. Conversely, an SMSA that looks bad on the surface today may actually be turning around and getting healthy.
- Point #4: The reports are for the SMSA as a whole, describing the general situation. So a low-rated market may offer good opportunities for specific kinds of housing in specific locales.

Houston is improving—and would improve more quickly if housing prices hadn't gone up much faster than consumers' incomes. In three of the last four quarters, supply of new housing exceeded demand, but if interest rates decline and Houston's economy continues to perk up, single-family sales should pick up substantially late this year.

Jacksonville's economic growth is much slower than the growth of housing stock. Even so, the SMSA is not suffering as much as many others.

Knoxville has rebounded slightly, but not enough to change its rating. New supply of housing exceeded growth in demand by about 2,500 units over the last 12 months.

Las Vegas moves up: Demand outshot supply by 1,743 units over the last 12 months, and the price of new housing is actually lower in relationship to consumer incomes than it was a few years ago.

Madison is one of the few markets that's getting better. The leading indicators are reaching peaks that haven't been seen since 1979. There's no telling how long the upturn will last, unfortunately.

Minneapolis-St. Paul isn't getting any worse; but things aren't looking up yet, either. Over the last 12 months the new supply of housing exceeded the growth in demand by some 7,910 units.

Mobile's demand indices are falling more than enough to offset the advantages represented by the relatively low price of housing in this SMSA. Some lower-cost product is probably still selling, but very slowly.

Nashville's down, for the time being. Gobar says housing absorption here should be very strong when economic growth resumes—especially in the for-sale sector.

Oklahoma City's demand is "unbelievably strong," according to Gobar, but the high price of new housing is discouraging sales. Building moderate-priced housing in this SMSA would be one of the "least risk" opportunities anywhere in the U.S. right now.

Orlando's market has been getting worse over three successive quarters. There is still some pent-up demand here, but it's being eroded quickly.

Pensacola has dropped more in the last six months than it did during any comparable period since the initiation of the index.

Providence is up, but there's still plenty of room for improvement. Over the last 12 months, new supplies outpaced Gobar's estimate of demand by 864 units—mostly in the multifamily sector. There is some pent-up demand for for-sale housing and prices are low enough for consumers to qualify for loans even at today's interest rates—but they may not want to buy because of the unstable economy in Providence: There have been sharp changes even from one quarter to another.

Raleigh's poor showing is probably temporary—especially when it comes to the single-family market.

San Diego has deteriorated steadily. Over the last 12 months, the delivery of new housing in this SMSA exceeded Gobar's estimate of new demand by 12,300 units. Some of the new single-family homes being built are not as high-priced in relation to consumers' incomes as had been the case, however.

Shreveport slips, as the result of only the second downturn there of any significance that Gobar has seen in the last 11 years.

Spokane has bounced back a bit, but not enough to encourage the development of new units. Some of the overhanging supply should be absorbed, however—especially when it comes to apartments.

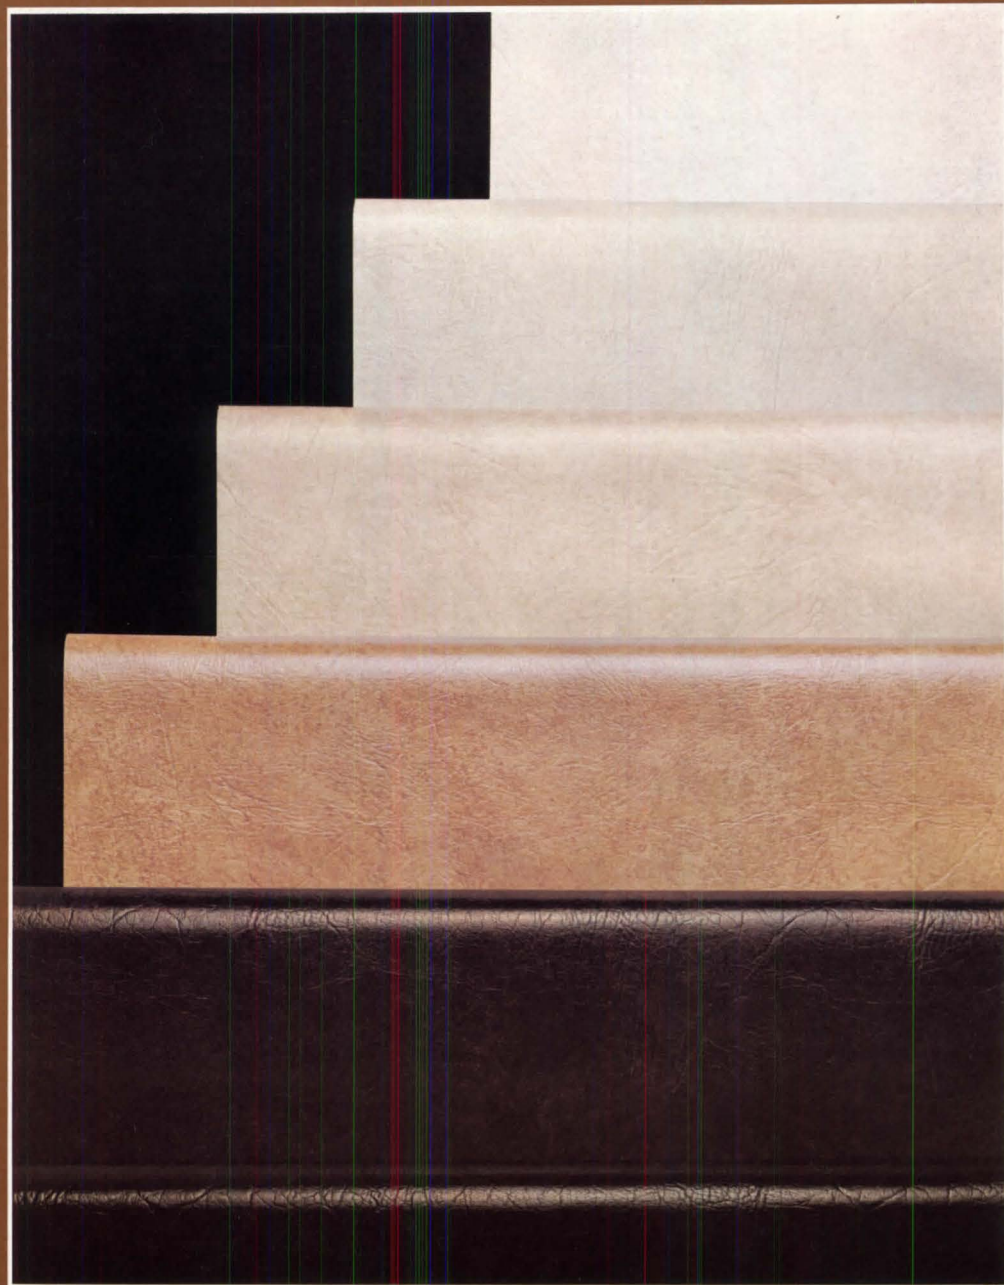

Tucson's healthier, but housing is still coming to market faster than it can be absorbed. Over the last 12 months, Gobar estimated for-sale demand at 2,100 units: For 1982, he anticipates a demand for 2,900 units. The rental sector is likely to absorb 1,800 to 1,900 units in the next 12 months—mostly those in lower rent brackets.

AT&T WAS CONCERNED WITH SERIOUS LEAKS AT HEADQUARTERS SO THEY PUT ENKADRAIN® UNDERGROUND.

When AT&T began excavations for their new headquarters in New York City, they found themselves facing a wall of solid rock and a unique drainage problem. Water seeping from the rock made it necessary to put a drainage system between the rock and the foundation, but to maintain maximum area in the basement they needed to pour concrete against the rock wall.

For this unique problem, the builders chose a unique solution. Enkadrain® matting. Its flexibility and ability to conform to the irregularities in the rock wall while still functioning perfectly as a drainage medium made it the best possible choice.

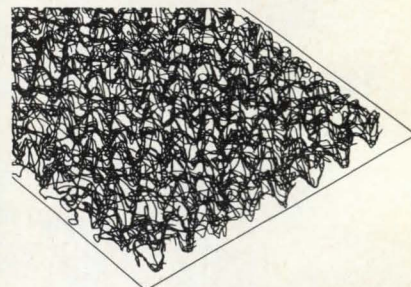

Enkadrain is a composite of compression-resistant, 3-dimensional nylon matting and a polyester non-woven filter fabric. It is an ideal and economical solution for a whole range of drainage situations, whether in commercial and industrial buildings, underground homes or even conventional homes.

Enkadrain successfully replaces graded aggregate or gravel, for vertical drainage against underground walls. While gravel may in time clog and fail, Enkadrain resists clogging. And with Enkadrain you won't need protective boards or polyethylene film to protect waterproofing membranes. Enkadrain relieves hydrostatic pressure in wet clay and silt soils adjacent to underground basement walls and retaining walls and minimizes the problem of wet underground interiors and structural wall damage.

Caradco Explodes The Great Energy Myth

You wouldn't destroy the energy economy of your houses by leaving the windows open all winter. But are you doing the same thing without knowing it? If you believe in The Great Energy Myth . . . you are.

The Myth. Fooling with double and triple insulating glass and greater air space between panes is supposed to create some kind of energy miracle. It doesn't.

Fact #1. Air infiltration around windows and doors accounts for 55% of the average home heating bill. In other words, a gale of cold air blows around and past almost every brand-name window made in America today. And eats up more than half of all the heating used in homes. Plus 41% of all cooling bills* That's terrible.

*Residential Energy Consumption —Single Family Housing Published by HUD.

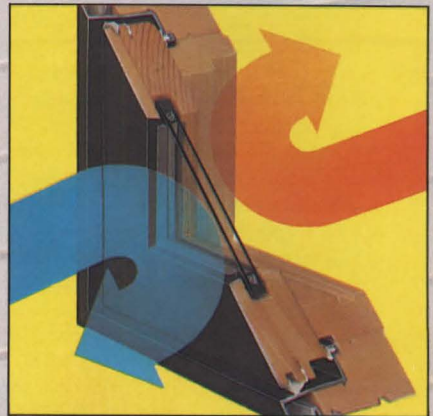

Fact #2. R value is a lousy guide to windows. If a wall is R14, or more, how important is it if one window is R2.86 while another is R2.65? The difference is 1% in real "wall R value".

Fact #3. All insulating glass has the same base R value. Caradco uses the best glass system made. Yet the difference is negligible.

Fact #4. Air space between panes is a farce. One guy trumpets he has 1". Hooray. The difference between 1" and 7/16 is exactly .7 of 1% in wall R value. Period.

The Ultimate Fact. Just one window maker solves the energy crunch. Caradco. We shut down air infiltration. Tight. "Industry Standards" allow .50 cfm. That's almost a gale blowing in. And most of our competitors allow "only" .25 or .22 cfm. That's terrible.

The Giant Step Ahead. Caradco casement windows rate

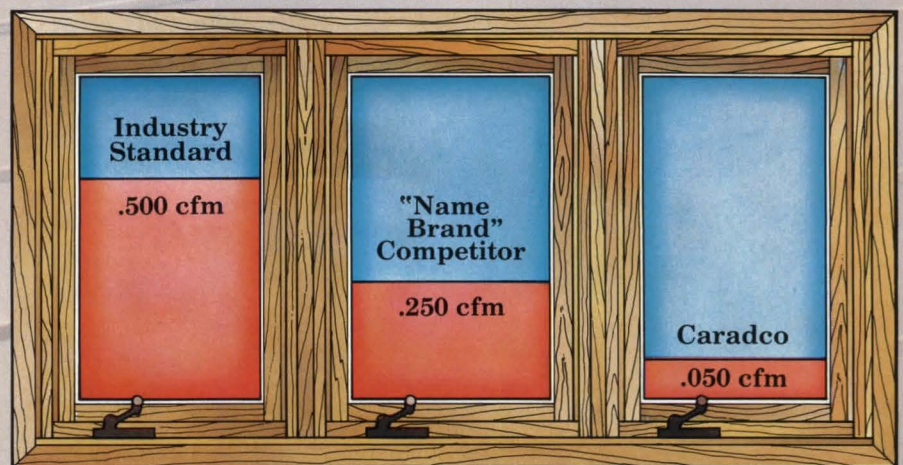

.05 cfm. Our patio door is .05. And our double-hung is .09. All proved in independent lab tests, not just internal tests like so many competitive lines.

Very simply, Caradco lets you build in energy saving that sells houses. Now. While your competition wastes away, promoting myths instead of solving the problems.

See your Caradco distributor. And get a better window. Dollar for dollar. Feature for feature. By design. Caradco.

What are the most significant changes you've

Harry Claypool,
Claypool Homes,
Mechanicsburg, Pa.

Thirty years ago, walls were nearly all plaster. All flooring was hardwood. Few builders even used any wallpaper to decorate. Now we use the drywall products on walls. Flooring is all carpeting or resilient vinyl. We use more poured concrete walls: Thirty years ago, I don't think I saw one in this area. We use manufactured roof trusses now. Aluminum siding, soffits, fascias—never used any back then. But we use a lot of these low-maintenance products now. Insulated windows, fiber glass shower stalls, single-lever shower controls—they're all more trouble-free. Thirty years ago, you'd just sell the house. But all these changes wind up being a big advantage to the buyer. He gets a lot more for his money than he did in the past. □

Harold Wong, vice-president of architecture and planning at the Donald L. Bren
Co., Los Angeles, Calif. We've seen product changes over the years—we do offer such energy features as air-conditioning, heavier insulation, double-paned windows as standard—products that did not exist years ago. But in our "back-to-basic" type housing, we don't go for a lot of the products that have been introduced in the last few years. During the 24 years this company's been building, we've gone from efficient, affordable housing to the large-sq.-ft. homes—and back again. So we want to offer the best value—and in doing so offer packages of products not too out of the ordinary. We do use trusses, and occasionally a wall-framing machine, but honestly, it sometimes costs us more to use these products. Of course, we're constantly looking at new products—and we're very interested in the use of electronics in the home—such as the computers and home entertainment systems that have come onto the market. □

Robert Hafer, vice-president/marketing,
the Ryland Group, Columbia, Md. The first major change I have seen is in the use of energy, and in builder awareness of energy-efficient products. For a second change, I'd say the appearance of maintenance-free items, such as no-wax flooring, aluminum siding, self-cleaning appliances, vinyl shutters and windows. Those are the two areas where the buyer has demanded—and builders are supplying. Energy was something we became very aware of in '73. So we began designing houses to be very efficient—and to be nearly maintenance-free outside as well. We also installed interior products specially for a two-income market, in which neither working spouse has time to maintain the house. Building products are also lighter—labor-saving. They are so well-engineered now, we don't have to build in the weight as we used to. And the maintenance-free products tend to be lighter, easier to handle. □ seen in building products?

David Sowers, president, David Construction Co. Inc., Bon Air, Va. I've been in the business thirteen years, on the fringe of some of the big changes that other people mentioned, like trusses. Plaster vs. sheetrock—that's the biggest change I can think of. Prehung doors were a big step, where it used to be all job-built. And I think floorcoverings have undergone a significant change. People used to build only hardwood floors—now it is almost completely carpeting.

We do predominantly solar houses, so energy efficiency is playing a big role in 100% of our houses. As far as solar products and design is concerned, that is, of course, all new. And products that can absorb the energy and have mass have become a major requirement. We've also gone to some of the fabricated plastic glazing. □

Bob Schmitt, president, Bob Schmitt Homes, Strongsville, Ohio. All the new appliances have improved tremendously—remember the old refrigerators? In the structural products, insulation is vastly superior to what it was—well, there was barely any insulation at all then. Look at the quality of windows today—fantastic. There's a whole slew of economical, efficient products and heating systems now that can really pay off.

There are also many highly sophisticated building systems. Back in the '50s, houses weren't built with trusses and we wasted huge amounts of premium lumber. Drywall was just coming onto the market; it's far superior and cheaper than the plaster we used. Pre-finished wood paneling was unheard of. The quality of products has improved unbelievably on almost every front. And though labor rates have risen tremendously, total labor costs are still not so high because of the great technological improvements. □

Ed Gehl, president, Impala Homes, Madison, Wisc. I think that products have definitely improved in the areas of insulation and prevention of infiltration. I think 2×4 walls are a thing of the past, and we're going to 2×6s to accept more of that insulation.

I think we've got a lot better paint products than we did thirty years ago. They dry quicker, and are less toxic. Cements are a lot better than they were too. Appliances are getting better every day. Dishwashers, for example—leaky dishwashers were a real headache for a builder when we started. I don't think we have more than one or two calls on them now. Microwaves are a real fad. And everyone likes the electronics of those appliances—the computerized controls.

Methods have changed with the products. For example, we're going to a component-type housing. You have a lot more control, and it shortens our construction time. □

Major rehab conference scheduled this fall

CHICAGO—How big a role can the average homebuilder play in rebuilding our inner cities?

Some answers to that question could come at a three-day conference/exposition, "City Recon '82." The conference, scheduled for Sept. 29 through Oct. 1, will, says its promoters: "help to rebuild the cities as the first post World War II machine tool exposition helped to rebuild western Europe through the exchange of ideas, review of products and the evaluation of services."

"Every American has the equivalent of a Rolls Royce invested in the downtown infrastructure of cities and towns in America," said Leo A. Molinaro, president of the American City Corp., a subsidiary of the Rouse Co., at a kick-off breakfast for the conference. Molinaro said that investment "is in serious jeopardy" because of the need to upgrade the cities' infrastructures and increase their levels of maintenance, at a time of growing pressures to reduce both maintenance levels and new investment of public funds in cities. (A Rouse's Co. venture in urban renewal is discussed below).

The National Association of Home Builders, the U.S. League of Savings Associations and the Mortgage Bankers Assn. have put their stamp of approval on the conference. Yet even the promoters concede that the emphasis will be on non-residential, with housing taking a back seat. Others wonder if housing has any significant place in tomorrow's urban landscape.

A doubting-Thomas. Particularly skeptical these days is George Sternlieb, director of the Center for Urban Policy Research at Rutgers University.

"You really have two things going on at once," he says. "The city-within-a-city phenomenon, and this: When you're rich, you throw away used housing and used cities, but when you're poor, you find them charming."

Sternlieb says examples of the "city-within-a-city phenomenon" are Society Hill in Philadelphia and the neighborhoods near North Michigan Avenue in Chicago—areas that attract young professional singles and childless couples, but which are "much more significant as anecdotes" than as sound business opportunities for builders and rehabbers. He points out that such locations support "specialty stores, not department stores," and that in this way, retailing mirrors the housing situation: "The bulk markets are the ex-urban markets, with the regional shift (to the Sunbelt states) still going on."

Big outlays possible. Louis H. Masotti, chairman of the conference and former director of the Center for Urban Affairs at Northwestern University, says that recycling, rehab, adaptive reuse, reconstruction and renovation is a $50 billion-a-year business. Of urban rebuilding, he says: "My judgment is that it's the brightest part in the near-term future at least, given the stock in the built-in environment in our cities."

A certain amount of continued urban rebirth is likely, says Masotti, "in an economy that will not allow new construction" at a time when "we were down to one million housing starts last year and 800,000 projects for 1982, with a demand for two million (a year)." Nevertheless, he doesn't predict droves of people streaming back.

"I don't think they're going to return in great numbers," he says, "But I think they're going to leave in smaller numbers than you have seen recently."

The sponsor of the upcoming conference is the National Association of Housing and Redevelopment Officials. (Other organizations such as the NAHB and the MBA are called "cooperating associations" and have lent their names, not their financial support). Robert W. Maffin, NAHRO executive director, says the conference will focus on successful urban redevelopment programs—both in the U.S. and abroad. Cities he hopes to spotlight include Baltimore, Pittsburgh and New York, and Manchester, England.

Opportunities for homebuilders. Dave Stahl, NAHB's executive vice president, is quick to point out that the homebuilders aren't just jumping on a bandwagon because times are hard. "We've had an urban redevelopment committee for years," he says. "We're not any less interested in the suburbs because we're interested in the city."

Where does the small builder fit into urban redevelopment? Stahl suggests, "He's going to remodel a six-flat, maybe convert it to a condo. He's going to do some in-fill, and develop a site that may have been passed over."

But Stahl does not see a sudden new wave of urban housing ahead, either: "I don't want to make it look like a national movement." "I don't think these things happen in dramatic shifts; I think they happen in trickles."

Industry members interested in attending the conference should write: City Recon '82, 330 South Wells St., Chicago, Ill. 60606. —D.G.

Urban renewal ventures—private market style

Real estate developer James W. Rouse has set up what he calls the Enterprise Foundation to rehabilitate inner city housing and assist in creating jobs, health services, and social community programs.

The work of the foundation will be supported through the Enterprise Development Company, a profit-motivated, taxpaying, real estate development company headed by Rouse that will build commercial, retail, and office structures. Its earnings and cash flow will be funneled into the foundation.

First stop: Baltimore. Enterprise has already completed the first phase of one rehab project: Brown's Arcade, a $3½-million office/retail center in downtown Baltimore. In Norfolk, Va., the development company is beginning work on an 80,000-sq.-ft., two-story building that will house retail stores and restaurants.

The foundation is in the process of raising an initial $15-million endowment to be used in making grants and loans to local non-profit housing corporations. The Atlantic Richfield Foundation recently made a $1-million conditional grant, and an additional $1.9 million has been raised.

Rouse says his efforts are not intended to replace funds cut from federal housing and community development programs, but that coincidence of timing gives the Enterprise effort "special validity."

Serving on the board of the foundation along with Rouse are former Housing and Urban Affairs Secretary Patricia Roberts Harris; John Gardner, chairman, Independent Sector Founding, chairman, Common Cause and former Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare; Samuel Gary, chairman of the board, Gary Energy Corporation; Andrew Heiskell, vice chairman of the executive committee, Brookings Institution; Tomas D. Lowdermilk, treasurer, partner, Peat, Warwick & Mitchell; Robert S. McNamara, former president of the World Bank; Sen. Charles Mathias and Rep. Henry S. Reuss.

Sell the Gas Advantage:

Energy Savings Payback.

Most people looking for a home today probably already know the advantages of gas. If not, tell them the selling points:

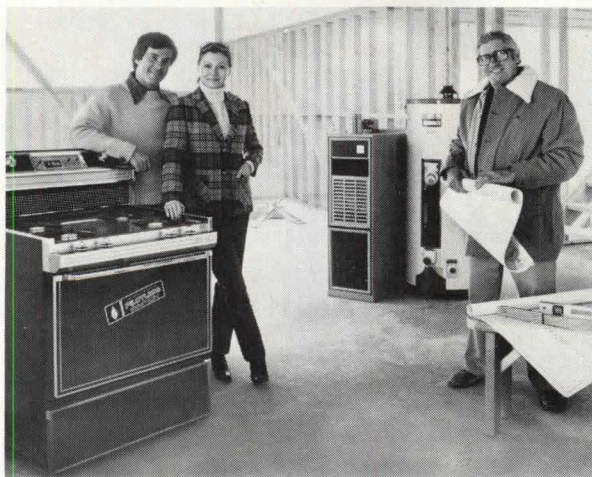

That gas is America's most efficient energy system. New gas heating systems and appliances with energy-saving features make gas even more efficient. They save money in operating costs all the years they are used. That savings is called Energy Savings Payback (ESP).

For example, the ESP on a new efficient gas furnace can save up to $1,500* over a 17-year period, compared to a conventional gas furnace. The ESP on a new gas water heater can be $400* over a 10-year period. Savings would be even greater compared to other, more expensive energy systems.

Provide the gas advantage. You'll find it a lot easier selling a home that offers the utmost in energy efficiency. And low operating costs can help more home buyers qualify for mortgages. So, with gas, you and your customers both profit.

*Government testing procedures were used to determine all annual operating costs.

It helps sell homes.

Gas: The future belongs to the efficient.

FTC wins wide powers in land case

In its attack on the homesite sales practice of two Texas land developers, the Federal Trade Commission has won broad new powers. The U.S. Court of Appeals in New Orleans, reversing a district court judge, ruled the agency can get an injunction forcing the developers to put assets into escrow for future repayments to duped landbuyers.

The case involves Southwest Sunsites Inc., and Green Valley Acres Inc., both operations of Sidney Gross and Edwin Kritzler. The companies sell parcels ranging from five to 40 acres in Culbertson and Jeff Davis counties that the court found to be dry and with "no economically feasible commercial application." The sites sold for between $600 and $700 an acre, with payments stretched over ten years. Bringing water, electricity, and telephone to a typical lot would cost around $8,500, the court estimated.

The FTC had no trouble convincing the district court in Dallas that the sales scheme is likely to be found deceptive in a commission proceeding, and to order the corporations to stop making misrepresentations. But the agency wanted more: It pointed out that money was being shifted from Southwest Sunsites and Green Valley Acres into the hands of the corporations' owners, and asked the court to stop the flow.

The FTC wanted assets—and incoming payments from landbuyers—to be put into a special account that could be tapped to pay back buyers who wanted out of their deals should the commission later order such restitution. A Dallas judge ruled that the FTC had no authority to win such an order.

But the court of appeals said that was wrong—that even though the question had never come up before, giving the FTC such an order would be "well within the jurisdiction of the district court," Judge Joe MacDonald Ingraham explained. He said that Congress meant the FTC to have flexible powers to protect consumers, and that making sure that there is money in a pot that the commission may later want to tap is "appropriate."

Developers' dual roles violate anti-trust laws. So says a state court in Washington which has deemed unlawful what Judge John J. Ripple calls "methods of land development, which have been pursued with the protection of the law for several decades." Although Ripple's decision is based on a Washington State statute, he says local law follows the same approach as the federal antitrust laws, suggesting that any developers in the country could be hit with similar suits.

The case involves the Comstock subdivision in southern Spokane, a tract so successful that the average price of houses there, says Ripple, "is substantially greater than anywhere else in Spokane County."

The Comstock Development Co., which subdivided the land, has six owners—among them prominent local homebuilders Lowell Stack and Orville Mark each owning 20% of the firm.

Comstock Development, formed in 1967, has sold some 200 lots. Since then, according to the opinion filed in state superior court, the company grew increasingly restrictive about who could have lots in the subdivision. By 1976, the owners of Comstock decided only four builders would be allowed into the area: Stack and Mark; Stack's son and Mark's son-in-law.

While Ripple says he is convinced that Stack and Mark had no clue that the arrangement was unlawful, he nonetheless found that the way they carried out their dual roles as owners of the development company and supposedly competing builders violated antitrust laws in four ways:

- They fixed the prices at which individuals could buy land for custom houses.

- They fixed the prices for the land component of spec housing.

- They agreed to maintain higher standards than required by covenants.

- They insisted on a commission for the realty company on custom-built houses where the firm provided at most minimal services.

The restrictions meant, says Ripple, that Stack, Mark and their relatives "possess the ability to enhance and enlarge their profits for homes constructed . . . because they had no real competition in the Comstock area."

A developer may be held responsible for not correcting natural faults in his land. The common law rule is that a landowner is not responsible for any damage caused off the property that stems from natural conditions, but many states have amended that rule to let those injured by falling trees sue, claiming that the trees should have been cut before they fell. Now the California Supreme Court has gone further and completely wiped out the common law rule. The court said homeowners whose property was damaged in a mud slide could sue owners of the land across the road for not correcting the natural condition so the mud would not slide in wet weather. The decision does not mean the plaintiff will win the suit. The courts will now have to decide whether the cost and likelihood of success of any work to make the land more stable would make such a project a reasonable undertaking. —DANIEL MOSKOWITZ

McGraw-Hill World News, Washington

State court rules antitrust law covers land

The highest court in Illinois has taken a different direction in antitrust law than the federal courts or other states, and in the process has given homebuilders a lot more protection against landowners who want to milk sales of their property. At issue is the basic question of whether or not antitrust statutes cover land at all.

The case is one brought by the state against Schwulst Building Center Inc. Schwulst owns and controls many single-family lots in the Bloomington market, but would not sell them to builders—the attorney general claims—unless the builder also bought from Schwulst a package of major building materials. Included in the package: preassembled roof trusses, exterior and interior walls, exterior trim.

Generally speaking, such mandatory "tying" of one sale to another is unlawful if the seller of the more desired product (in this case, the land) exercises a lot of economic clout, or if a "substantial amount" of business in the other product is affected. But Schwulst insisted that the general prohibition does not apply to its dealings, because land sales are exempt from the antitrust laws. Since U.S. courts of appeals in Chicago and San Francisco and state courts in California had already ruled that way, the Illinois trial court and appellate court agreed.

But the state supreme court pointed out that the Illinois Antitrust Act uses different wording than the other statutes. While it bars curbing competition in "goods, wares, merchandise, machinery, supplies, or other commodities," it goes on to define "commodity" as "any kind of real or personal property." That clearly includes land, the justices explained, so the precedents from other courts carry no weight.

PRIVACY & OPEN SPACE

SAVING HOUSING'S 'ENDANGERED SPECIES'

It used to happen all too often: Attractive sites like the two shown here and on the next two pages were subjected to the bulldozer, destroying such natural amenities as trees, slopes—even streams. As densities increase, such treatment threatens not only the environment, but also much of the privacy that's so important to homebuyers. Nowadays developers and towns alike have a much more enlightened attitude about the environment, as witness these two projects.

—JENNIFER A. WAGNER

CLUSTERING MAKES THE GRADE

Green Briar, a 237-unit subdivision in Somers, N.Y., sits on 320 acres of prime woodland. And when it's built out, 200 of those acres—nearly 60% of the original site—will remain intact.

The cluster concept was espoused by the original land owners—Mitch Miller and James M. Jacobson—who were unwilling to see the property bulldozed. Conventional single-family siting would have been difficult anyway: Says architect Alfredo DeVido, “much of what is now the common area is so steep that it would have been difficult to build on without extensive grading.”

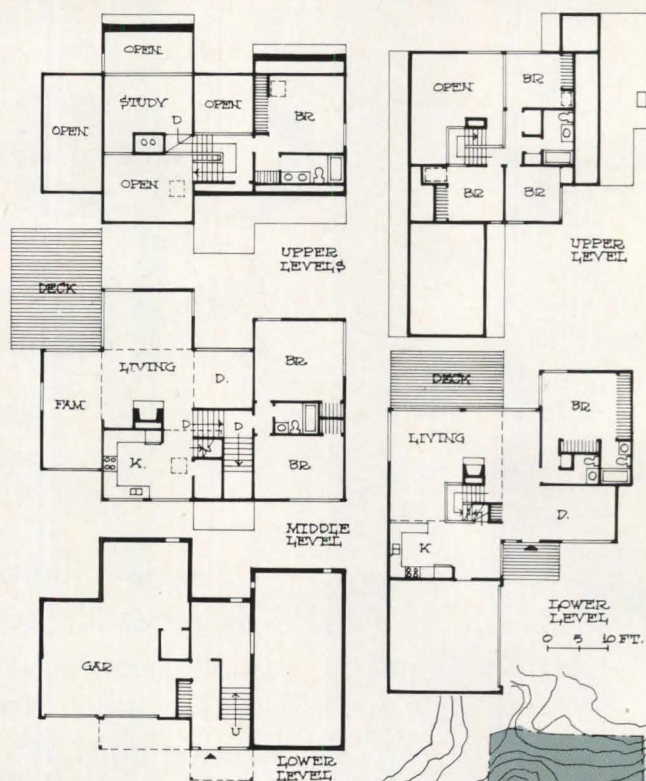

Getting approval for the cluster plan was no easy shot, however. It took six years for Green Briar-Somers Corp., the builder/developer, to get the necessary variance—even though the town, originally resistant to clustering, became enthusiastic.

“When the town finally looked at the property,” explained DeVido, “it agreed that we couldn't possibly foul it up with a conventional subdivision, and suggested a cluster plan, which is exactly what had been asked for in the first place.”

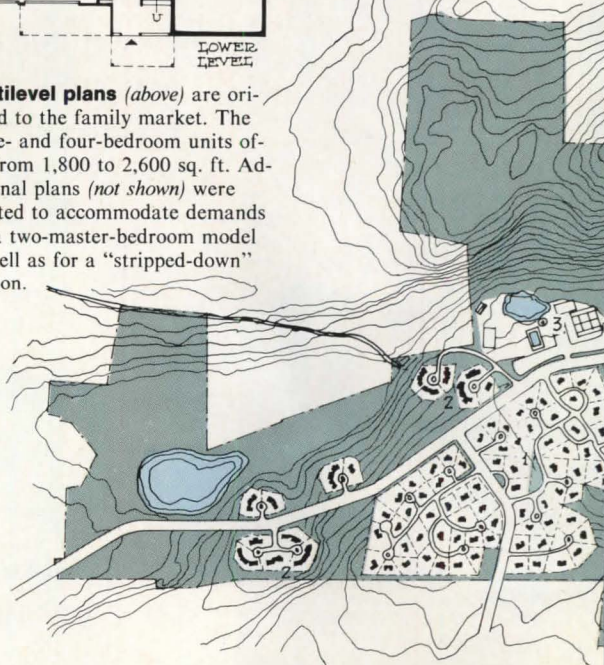

The final plan: detached and attached single-family houses, three per acre, clustered around cul-de-sacs. Because of the topography, the five floor plans were created to suit four types of terrain: level and sloping front-to-back, back-to-front or side-to-side. The clusters are isolated from each other by greenbelts. There will be a centrally located recreation center, including clubhouse, tennis courts and pool.

A homeowners' association, responsible for all common areas, will maintain trails winding through the unbuilt acreage.

Multilevel plans (above) are oriented to the family market. The three- and four-bedroom units offer from 1,800 to 2,600 sq. ft. Additional plans (not shown) were created to accommodate demands for a two-master-bedroom model as well as for a “stripped-down” version.

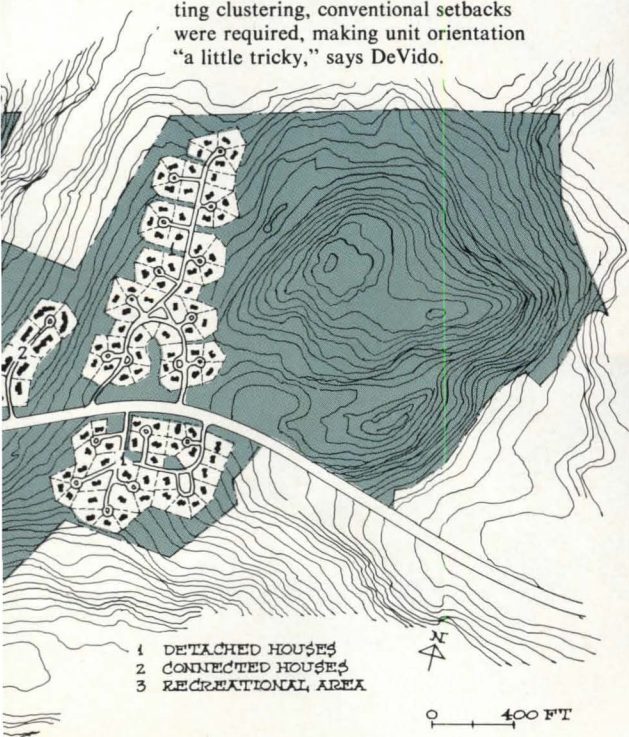

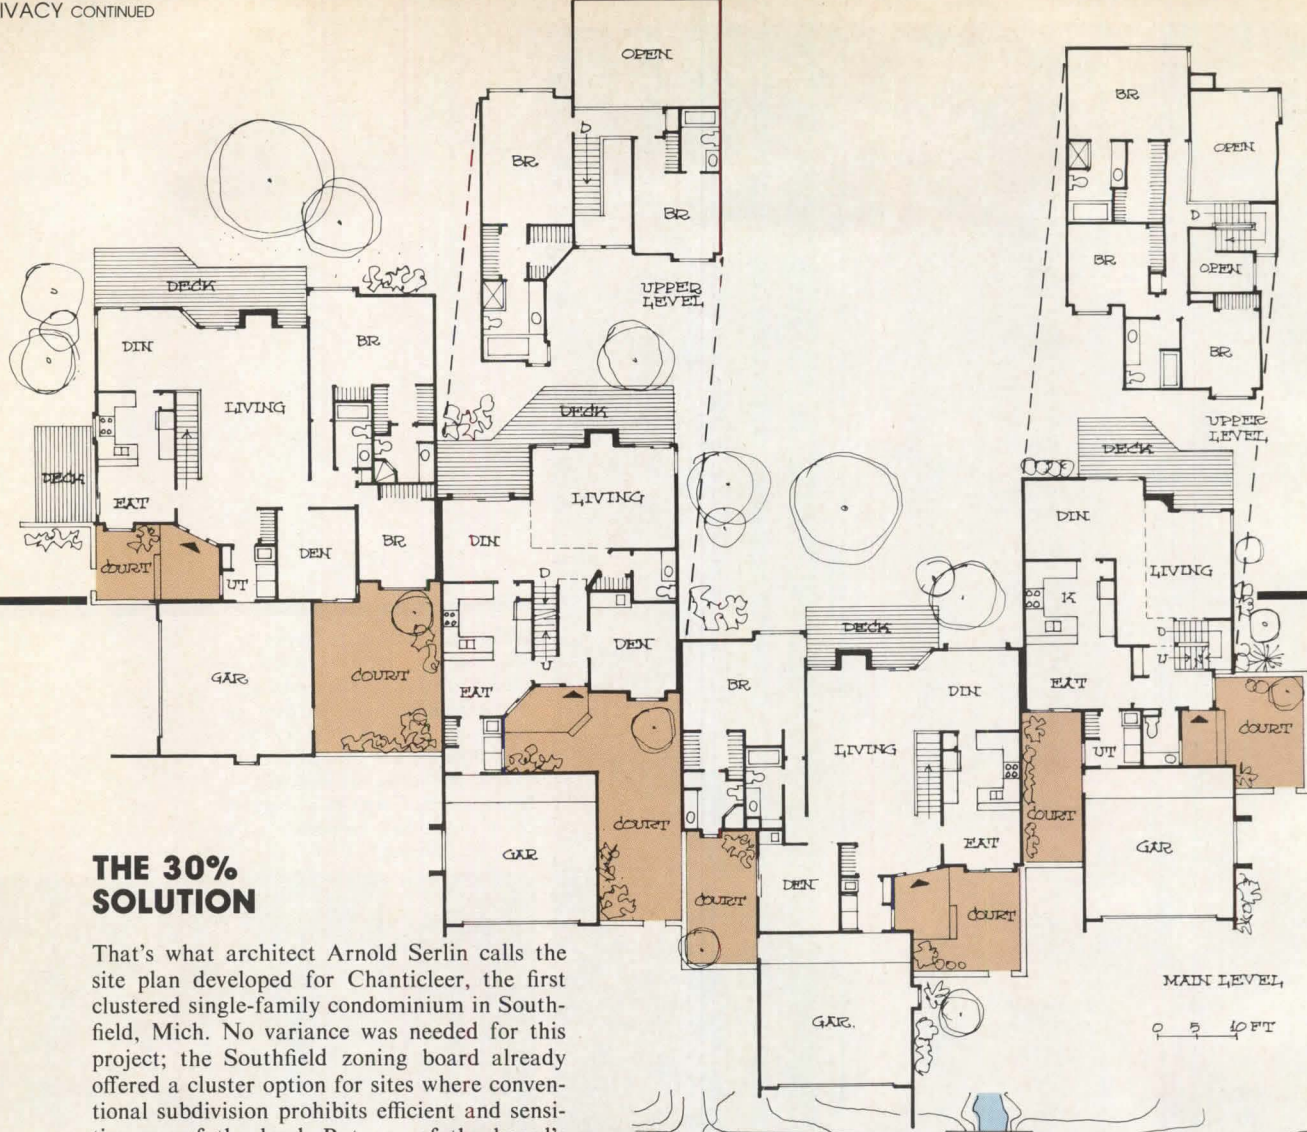

Woodland setting, as shown in photos at left, was enhanced by an extra $2,500 to $3,500 worth of landscaping per unit. The first ten houses, selling from $134,000 to $176,000, are now occupied. But says Milt Shapiro of the Green Briar-Somers Corp.: "Our biggest complaint is that prospects can't unload their houses."

Cluster plan leaves majority of 320-acre site intact. Despite the variance permitting clustering, conventional setbacks were required, making unit orientation "a little tricky," says DeVido.

Volume space is a hallmark of Green Briar interiors (left). Says Shapiro: "The prospects like the contemporary, open feeling created by the high ceilings and surprising spaces. You can walk around a corner and find yourself on a balcony or a deck."

THE 30% SOLUTION

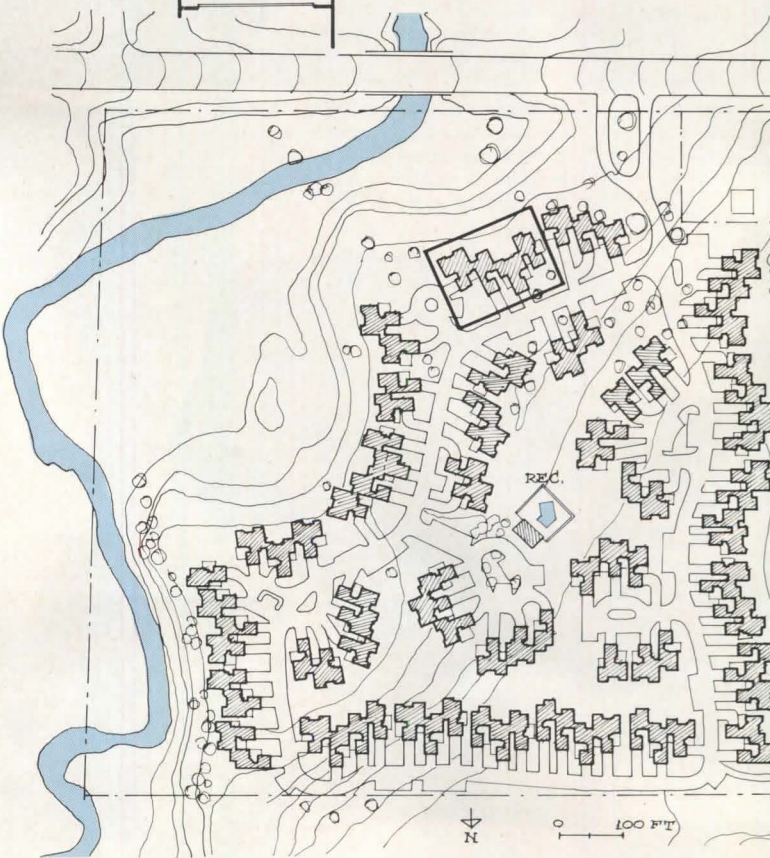

That's what architect Arnold Serlin calls the site plan developed for Chanticleer, the first clustered single-family condominium in Southfield, Mich. No variance was needed for this project; the Southfield zoning board already offered a cluster option for sites where conventional subdivision prohibits efficient and sensitive use of the land. But one of the board's stipulations was that no attached unit share more than 30% of a common wall.

That percentage was established, explains Serlin, "to preserve a private, single-family atmosphere in the area. It forced a significantly staggered plan, thereby creating a varied streetscape, and distinguishing each unit clearly from the next."

Another bonus from the Chanticleer plan: at least two enclosed courtyards per unit, one of which becomes a private entry (see center photo, facing page and note tan area in floor plans).

The 96-unit cluster plan also preserves the natural amenities of the 32-acre site. Under a conventional plan at two to three units per acre, extensive grading would have destroyed most of the pine trees—some of them 40' tall. "By clustering," says Stanley E. Guski, president of Chanticleer Development Co., "we could take advantage of greenbelt areas and preserve trees and floodplain areas."

The first 29 units moved swiftly, with half sold before Phase I was completed. Prices now start from $133,000. Who has been buying? "We have a real cross-section," maintains Guski, "from young married to young professional couples, all the way to retired widowers. This is definitely not a retirement community."

Brick-and-wood exteriors blend into wooded environment. Brick was used sparingly but thoughtfully to “create a quality atmosphere by putting the best foot forward,” says Serlin. Interiors, like the one shown at right, stress volume space and tall windows.

Ranch and two-story plans shown on facing page feature open, spacious living areas. They reflect revisions made to meet marketing considerations. “We found,” said builder Guski, “that prospects were more affluent than we’d expected, and wanted more luxurious master baths.” By adding only a few square feet, closet space was expanded, and a tub or whirlpool added to master bathroom, where only a shower existed previously. Prospects also showed a preference for single-level layouts, like the one at far left. “We had expected more young couples, who would probably have preferred the two-story plan.”

River views were a major factor in siting of clusters on east and south sides of property (see site plan, left). Other units are oriented toward greenbelts and the central recreation area. Because of zoning requirements, no more than four units could be attached in a group. “We’ve used every alternative available—no two clusters are alike,” says Serlin. Adds Guski: “For us, it was like putting together a big jigsaw puzzle.”

Recuperative heating systems help fight high fuel costs

Homebuyer interest is being captured by a new recuperative gas furnace introduced by Arkla Industries last January. The primary difference between this and other furnaces is a patented stainless steel recuperative cell that extracts heat from exhaust gases normally lost up the chimney and then redistributes it throughout the home (see diagram left).

The gas furnace offers several benefits:

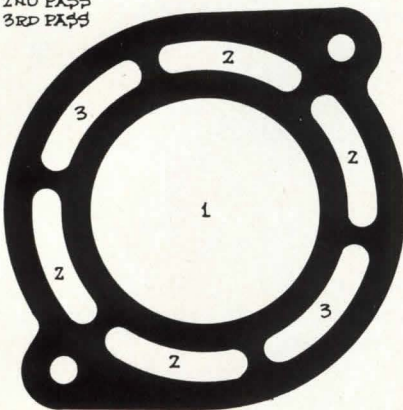

- Superior efficiency and output capacity. In a home where a 100,000 BTU conventional furnace is used, an 80,000 BTU recuperative unit will fulfill the same heating requirements.
- Substantial fuel cost savings. Savings will, of course, vary according to the length of the heating season. But with an AFUE* rating between 85.5% and 86.9%, the furnace is, according to the manufacturer, one of the most efficient on the market.
- Easy installation. The compact furnace requires no chimney, but a 3" diameter flue pipe that installs horizontally or vertically.

The recuperative gas furnace, certified by the AGA, is offered in both up- and downdraft models in capacities ranging from 40,000 to 120,000 BTUs. For more information, circle 200 on reader service card.

Recuperative furnace reduces flue temperatures from a typical 450°-500° to 150°-225°. A cutway drawing at left indicates how air flows through unit: Air enters at bottom (yellow arrow), travels to top of furnace (yellow arrows) for circulation through home. A "power venter" redirects gases (red arrows) through heat exchanger. Heat is removed and recirculated. Exhaust gases (brown arrow) are vented.

* Annual Fuel Utilization Efficiency

1ST PASS
2ND PASS
3RD PASS

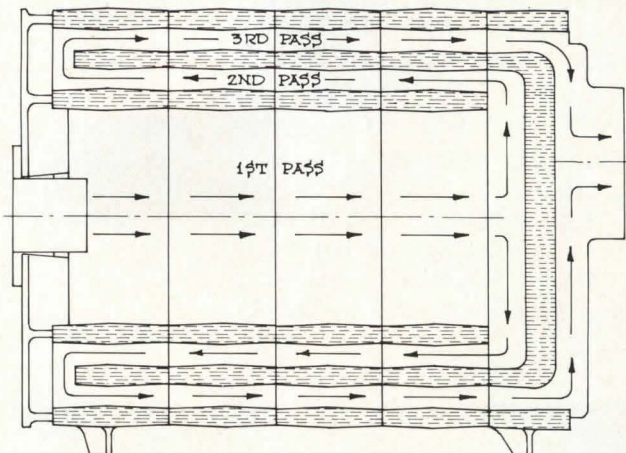

Three-pass unit (cross-section above) sends gases into four concentric horizontal passageways, as shown at right. The gases are returned to the front of the boiler and enter yet a third set of passageways to maximize heat transfer. "Wet base" design minimizes thermal shock and gives even heat exchange.

From Scandinavia comes a second high-efficiency furnace—this time an oil-fired boiler. Like the Arkla unit, the hallmark of the "Series T" boiler is that it directs flue gases back into the furnace, rather than allowing them to escape. The design of the unit, manufactured by Tasso Boilers, is entirely different from the one shown above, however. Its design is based upon a "Scotch Marine" system characterized by a three-pass pressurized firebox with higher combustion efficiencies and a large heat-transfer surface (see cross-sections at left and below).

The result: seasonal efficiencies of 86.6% and steady-state efficiencies of 87.8%, according to the manufacturer. Other unit advantages:

- Cast-iron construction—more resistant to thermal shock and corrosion than the typically-used plate steel.
- Easy installation—as with the Arkla unit, no chimney is necessary, and conventional venting is eliminated.
- Domestic hot water application—unit is compatible with storage hot water heater system.

The T-Series comes in five capacities, ranging from 80,000 to 360,000 BTUs. For more information, circle 201 on reader service card

Non-Residential development

BUILDING ASSETS FOR THE FUTURE

An intensive two-day course that will show you how to profit from small office buildings and shopping centers.

Today's higher interest rates and tight money are making it harder than ever for traditional residential builder/developers to survive. All over the country, builders are diversifying as a hedge against the cyclical nature of the housing industry...and to ensure themselves of a revenue base.

Small, non-residential projects offer new opportunities.

Developing small, non-residential properties is the most viable—and natural—expansion for residential builders. In scale, design, financing and construction these projects are not so different from the housing you are already building...your experience, skills and knowledge will be a big plus from the start.

And, these income-producing properties may well be your key Real Estate assets in the near future.

Small, non-residential projects with high profit potential can provide you with tax shelters, revenue for capital investment as well as sound business alternatives.

But, the non-residential market is a demanding one.

It demands precise understanding of where the market is, its size and what it wants. It demands professional, flexible design and planning. It demands first-class marketing and management. And, it demands tight cost controls all the way from initial financing to the management budget.

This HOUSING seminar will show you how to meet those demands. Specifically, you'll learn:

Market research

- How to locate and identify prospective tenants
- How to identify market segments
- How to project absorption rates
- How to select the right site

Feasibility

- How to project construction costs, overhead and profit
- How to project cash flow
- How to project operating costs
- How to make the most of tax advantages
- How to handle depreciation

Design

- How to select an architect
- How to scale spaces to prospective tenants' needs
- How to handle tenant improvements
- When and how to provide extra amenities
- How to handle special construction details

Financing

- How to put together the best possible loan package
- How equity participation should be structured
- How to go the joint-venture route

A HOUSING SEMINAR

MANAGED BY  INFOSOURCE

Marketing

- How to select a leasing firm
- How to work with local brokers
- How to structure rents
- Short-term vs. long-term leases
- How to handle percentage clauses and escalation clauses
- How to advertise—and when

Management

- How to pick a good management company
- How much to pay for management—and what kind of service to expect
- How to use operating statements

And, you'll learn about special opportunities in recycled non-residential property

- The advantages of re-marketing existing properties
- Determining an existing building's potential value
- Deciding the right time to buy

You'll study with Michael F. Browning, assistant vice president of Real Estate Development Services at Coldwell Banker in Newport Beach, CA, Dr. Alfred J. Gobar president of the southern California-based real estate research firm, Alfred Gobar Associates, Inc. and Stephen E. When you put your best up here ...

You put your best into every home you build. So why not put our best around your homes? Quality ADS Polyethylene drainage tubing is perfect for all homesite and commercial drainage. Built tough, ADS should last the life of the home.

At a cost of just pennies per foot, ADS corrugated tubing is your best choice for basement, foundation and downspout drainage. Strong and durable, ADS tubing won't rust and resists rot and acidic or alkaline soils.

ADS heavy-duty tubing is lighter, easier to handle and requires less time and equipment to install than PVC, clay, concrete or corrugated metal. And, precision-made ADS snap-on fittings and couplings keep installation time and labor cost to a minimum.

ADS tubing is available through your local building supply-dealer. Ask for it by name. Our 21 manufacturing plants across the country assure you of readily available stock.

If you insist on quality in building materials, insist on ADS.

Put our best down here.

ADS corrugated polyethylene tubing.

ALL THOSE WHO WANT TO FRAME AN EXTRA HOUSE A DAY,

SAY

Say Residential TJI[®], that is. When TJI floor joists are used instead of conventional 2x10's or 2x12's, the same crew can easily frame an extra floor system a day. Maybe more!

That's because TJI joists are strong enough to be used 24 inches o.c., and come in continuous lengths up to 60 feet. So you need up to one-third fewer pieces. Fewer equals faster installation. And there's no blocking or bridging required, either.

Easy handling makes things faster, too. A typical 26-foot, 9½ inch deep TJI joist weighs in at less than 50 pounds. It's the one-man floor joist Residential TJI joists are made of strong, stable, MICRO=LAM[®] engineered lumber — virtually no warps, splits, twists or shrinkage.

The wood flange is easy to nail and the plywood web is easy to drill for wiring and plumbing. No special tools or techniques needed.

To speed up framing and hold down costs, say "I" to the Trus Joist Corporation products dealer in your area.

Our attitude is priceless. Our training is free.

Alabama has plenty of people who have a positive attitude about work.

And they're backed up with solid training.

Alabama offers industrial development job training second to none in the country. It's the model program other states are trying to imitate.

Our training begins in mobile units on site with the same kind of equipment used on the real job—even when that equipment is highly specialized such as with chemical processing or precision metal cutting.

Alabama's training assistance costs you nothing but it can mean everything in making you productive right from the start—and profitable sooner.

Cut out for Alabama where people are trained to your specifications and ready to work.

SUBARU OFFERS GREATER TRACTION. AND EVEN GREATER TRACTION.

We congratulate all the car makers who've finally noticed that front wheel drive improves traction. We, however, introduced front wheel drive in 1969. And we just don't think there's any substitute for experience.

As pioneers of front wheel drive, we use this experience to balance all the factors — drive train, steering, weight distribution, suspension — which make for remarkable adhesion to the road. Even around curves, in rain or snow.

The people of Maine, Idaho, Alaska and West Virginia think so much of our front wheel drive that they've helped make Subaru the best selling import in those states! States where good traction is absolutely essential.

But if you want even more traction, we suggest our wagon with On Demand Four Wheel Drive. Which allows you to go from front wheel drive to four wheel drive with the flick of a lever. On Demand. Without stopping.

(Any other 4 wheeler around requires a full stop before switching. And stopping is exactly what you can't do sometimes.)

Both models also help you keep things under control when it comes to gas mileage. So while you're holding on to the road, you can also hold on to your money.

And both offer plenty of room, with plenty of options, like power windows, power steering, AM/FM cassette tape deck, cruise control. The works.

But the best option of all is deciding what level of traction you want. Greater. Or even greater.

"GE's ENERGY AUDIT DIAGNOSED OUR LIGHTING NEEDS AND SAVED US $17,688."

Robert O'Herron, Vice President of Facilities, Akron General Medical Center.

"I'm always looking for ways to cut costs. That's why I was very interested in General Electric's lighting energy audit.

"I simply filled it out, marking in the number of each type of lamp we use. GE then calculated that we could save more than $68,000 annually in energy costs with GE energy-efficient lamps.

"We immediately changed one-fourth of our lamps to Watt-Miser® II fluorescents from GE. What's more, we did this without refixturing. Which meant a substantial $17,688 savings in annual energy costs with no capital investment!"

The GE energy audit may be able to save you a lot of money, too. Just fill out the form below and mail it in.

Gauging the climate for HVAC systems

The Homeowner's Guide to Coalburning Stoves and Furnaces, by James W. Morrison, provides comprehensive information needed for selecting the right furnace or woodstove for various residential needs. The 176-page book includes chapters on stove/furnace selection, placement of prefabricated chimneys, and installation of a domestic hot water heating system fueled by coal or wood. The text is clarified by a large number of graphics, including tables, maps, graphs, drawings and photographs. Also included are a glossary and an appendix listing coal information sources, such as federal and state agencies.

The Homeowner's Guide is available in paperback for $6.95, in cloth for $11.95, from Arco Publishing, Inc., 219 Park Ave. South, New York, N.Y. 10003.

A second guide to solid fuel heating is provided in Central Heating with Wood and Coal, by Larry Gay. This 114-page book discusses buying, hooking up and maintaining a solid-fuel furnace or boiler. Featured is a chapter on adding on such a furnace to an oil- or gas-fired system. The production of domestic hot water from wood or coal is also explained. Appendices detail furnace sizing methods, expansion tank sizing and the design of equipment. Tables, drawings and graphs are found throughout the text.

For a copy of this book write to Phyllis Blocki at the Stephen Greene Press, Fessenden Road at Indian Flat, PO Box 1000, Brattleboro, Vt. 05301. The paperback is priced at $8.95; the hardcover, $12.95.

The technical approach is taken in the second edition of Alternative Natural Energy Sources in Building Design, by A. J. Davis and R. P. Schubert. The 287-page book has been updated to present detailed information about the latest developments in the fields of energy conservation, solar, wind and methane gas heating. The introduction states that the publication is oriented to the generalist, but stresses that the book also "serves as a substantial foundation for the specialist and researcher in both theory and practice of building design."

Specific topics of investigation include: regional and site adaptation to climate and fuel availability; natural cooling and ventilation by means of site planning and orientation, and building design; the feasibility of wind power; solar energy; organic fuels; the development of integrated systems.

Alternative solutions and applications are described for each type of energy source. Information is documented with more than 200 diagrams, tables and graphs. Detailed formulas are included in all discussions.

Also included: eleven appendices and a comprehensive reference list.

The book is published by Van Nostrand Reinhold, 135 W. 50th St., New York, N.Y. 10020. The paperback edition is $9.95; in cloth the price is $17.95.

"What are your choices?" That's the main question set and answered in a 15-page guide to reducing heating costs (see photo). The booklet, intended primarily for homeowners, presents a number of ideas for conserving fuel and eliminating infiltration. The effects of various efficiency measures are evaluated, and annual fuel cost savings estimated. Other subjects discussed: the effectiveness of builders in providing an efficient form of heat; zonal heating. The booklet is available from Weil-McLain, Advertising Dept., Dept. LRJ, Blaine St., Michigan City, Ind. 64360. Price: 50¢.

Air-to-Air Heat Exchanger for Houses, by William A. Shurcliff, surveys the range of small, inexpensive air-to-air heat exchangers on the market today. The 190-page book includes information on the main types of units: fixed-plate, rotary, heat-pipe and recuperative units. Those discussed represent technology from the United States, Canada, Japan, Sweden and other countries. Experimental devices are also evaluated.

The publication also addresses the current problems of indoor air pollution caused by tight construction and the use of materials that emit toxic fumes. Such pollutants are listed and discussed.

The text is enhanced by over 150 perspective sketches, cross-sections, graphs and other illustrations. The guide also includes a directory of companies and experts, plus an index of trade names.

The book is available for $14.00 from W. A. Shurcliff, 19 Appleton St., Cambridge, Mass. 02138

The "Pyroplace", a fireplace/furnace system, is introduced in a four-page brochure. The booklet describes how the system utilizes heat from a conventional fireplace, capturing heat normally lost up the chimney, and redistributing it throughout the home. Operation principles and three available models are fully described and illustrated. Specifications are included. Installation requirements are summarized. Pyrosolar Industries. Circle 300 on reader service card

A four-color foldout describes the Digistat™, a programmable, digital thermostat. The flyer describes how the homeowner can achieve 30% savings on energy costs—and get a 15% Energy Tax credit from the federal government. Thermostat controls are illustrated. American Stabilis. Circle 301 on reader service card

Energy savings, labor savings and filtered, fresh air: Those are said to be three of the main benefits of the CA/90® ductless fan, introduced in a four-page color brochure. The ductless fan filter cleans and circulates air, and according to the publication recirculates rather than exhausts already heated or cooled air. Several four-color photographs show typical installations. Rush-Hampton Industries. Circle 302 on reader service card

A 12-page brochure presents a full line of heating and cooling equipment for residential and commercial use. Included are the following products: heat pumps; split-system air conditioners; packaged air handles; gas furnaces; boilers. BDP. Circle 303 on reader service card

Ventilating fans and heaters are the subject of a 12-page catalogue. Included are ceiling/wall fans of various types, from fan-forced wall fans to vertical-discharge ceilings fans and combination heater/fan/lights. Model features are summarized. Broan. Circle 304 on reader service card

Introducing Tyvek® Housewrap.

It cuts heat loss through walls by 33%... and that sells homes.

It's a simple, inexpensive way to add appeal to your homes. Reduce heat loss through insulated walls by 33% when you cover sheathing with an air barrier of DuPont TYVEK* spunbonded olefin. Independent tests prove it! BOCA Report No. 79-34 confirms it. It's the kind of energy savings homebuyers are looking for. And it costs very little to add to your homes.

TYVEK Housewrap is not a film or paper. It's a special fabric with unique properties that block air, but pass moisture vapor to prevent condensation.

It goes up fast. Two men can install 1,800 square feet in less than two hours, with just a knife and staple gun. Once installed, TYVEK seals leaks through sheathing seams and through cracks around doors and windows.

That's a big sales advantage for you. And to make sure homebuyers know it, DuPont offers you FREE handout literature and a display for use in your models and sales office. They can help you close the sale.

Order TYVEK from your building supply dealer, and add solid sales appeal to your homes without adding much to costs. For FREE detailed test data, literature, or the names of your nearest TYVEK dealer, call (302) 999-2474, or write DuPont Company, Room C-11K4-H, Wilmington, De 19898.

*DuPont registered trademark

*Independent laboratory tests using 2x4 frame wall with 3½-inch, R-11 insulation in 15 mph wind.

RALLY'ROUND NuTone Paddle

Special NuTone Rally '82 Catalog

More than a million dwelling units to be built in 1982! That's the projection. What can we do with it? Together we can really...concentrate our strengths to make the most of the situation we have to turn it into an opportunity.

NuTone's contribution: unprecedented discounts on every product you need and the homebuyer wants. NuTone's commitment: to help you make more profit on every home you sell!

You've looked to NuTone in the past for the quality products that have contributed to your success. Now...look at the added value you gain with this program of products prepared especially for this time, this market.

A complete catalog of top quality, first-line NuTone Products — all at discount prices! 15% OFF on Paddle Fans; 10% OFF on Bath Fans, Heaters, Hoods, Bath Cabinets, Central Cleaning Systems, Intercom Systems, Chimes, Attic Ventilators and more!

NuTone

NuTone acts to RALLY homebuilders with a positive promotion designed to reduce your costs.

There will be a million plus dwelling units built in 1982! That's more than 2.5 million bathrooms, 3 million bedrooms, a million kitchens. That's a lot of brick, wallboard, bathtubs, fans, windows, hoods, towel bars, etc.

What you need are suppliers who will support your needs with quality products at the lowest possible prices. And NuTone is doing it, with special low promotion prices right now!

NuTone believes the RALLYing Point is 'Us!' You, NuTone, Everybody! We must act to begin the recovery so vital to our industry and our country.

So, as we at NuTone prime the pump with discounts to YOU, we are generating positive reaction elsewhere. NuTone suppliers have agreed to hold or reduce their costs! NuTone employees have responded with total dedication to increasing productivity!

And building publications, sensing the need to RALLY, are exerting every effort to provide data and information to help you get the most out of every home built in 1982!

A Message to President Reagan

NuTone management and employees have sent a message to President Reagan expressing their concern and support for the homebuilding industry and explaining what actions they are taking to help! NuTone is also suggesting that the President declare '82 the RALLY YEAR... to stimulate the involvement of millions of people across the nation who are looking for an opportunity to help reverse economic conditions. All companies can hold or lower prices! All employees can contribute to increase productivity. All of us can contribute our best effort, our spirit, our determination.

Big Discounts on Products Needed in Every Home Built!

NuTone's RALLY '82 Catalog illustrates every discounted product offered. Wait 'til you see the big selection of quality NuTone Bath Fans, Heaters, Hoods, Paddle Fans, Door Chimes, Bath Cabinets, Bath Accessories, Radio-Intercoms, Built-In Cleaning Systems, Energy-Saving Attic Ventilators—all available at unprecedented discounts during the special RALLY Promotion Period.

NuTone is dedicated to helping the homebuilding industry!

Some things we can't do. Some, we can. "Worrying about those things over which we have no control can seriously handicap the industry's efforts to make the most of what is available," says J.A. Rankin, Executive Vice President of Scovill's NuTone Housing Group. "NuTone is dedicated to helping the home construction industry in every way possible. Offering special RALLY pricing and working with employees to increase productivity and with suppliers to hold or reduce costs are our immediate goals."

A RALLY changes attitudes! The positive spirit can turn defeat into victory! A RALLY can be the start of a trend toward recovery in the housing industry. And Mr. Rankin concludes: "Nothing is harder to stop than a trend!"

Join in the RALLY today.

NuTone's RALLY '82 Promotion

There will be a million plus dwelling units built in 1982! That's more than 2.5 million bathrooms, 3 million bedrooms, a million kitchens. That's a lot of brick, wallboard, bathtubs, fans, windows, hoods, towel bars, etc.

What you need are suppliers who will support your needs with quality products at the lowest possible prices! And NuTone is doing it, with these special low promotion prices right now!

NuTone primes the pump with action!

We have generated a positive response from our suppliers! They are pledged to holding or reducing prices. Our employees, stimulated by the idea they can make a contribution to reversing the trend which affects their jobs, are pledged to increase productivity.

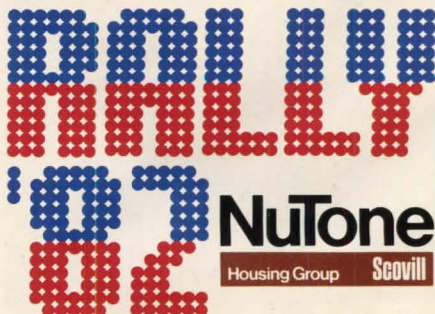

The RALLYING CRY is spreading through the industry via publications we all read and depend on for data and information to steer us into more saleable homes and ideas and products!

NuTone's message to President Reagan

We believe so strongly in the need for a coming together to RALLY, we are sending a wire expressing our concern and support for the homebuilding industry and explaining what action we are taking. The wire will be signed by every NuTone employee.

NuTone invites you to join us in common action!

Working together we can help change the attitudes of potential homebuyers, the first step needed to reverse a trend. Together we can inspire activity and build for the future.

HOUSING MAGAZINE'S 1982-83 BUYERS' GUIDE

This is a convenient guide to the manufacturers who make products for homebuilding, non-residential construction, land development and property management. Manufacturers are listed two ways: alphabetically and by product categories. A bold-face listing means that the company has an advertisement in this issue, so you can get additional information about its products by turning to the page indicated.

This guide also contains two special alphabetized sections: one listing factory-built housing producers, the other a handy reference to trade and professional associations.

When you want to locate a particular manufacturer

Check the alphabetical section that begins on page 118. It provides addresses, telephone numbers and—in some cases—a handy guide to the company's distributors, who are listed geographically.

When you want to know who makes a particular product

Check the 10 product category sections that begin on page 159. They are: Doors & Windows; HVAC; Kitchens & Baths; Outdoor & Recreational; Plumbing & Electrical; Roofing & Siding; Structural; Surface Treatments; Tools & Equipment; Miscellaneous. Each section is divided into subcategories that provide a quick reference source of manufacturers (all subcategories are listed on page 156). As a further aid, subcategories are broken down by codes, which are explained at the beginning of each subcategory.

Thus, if you were looking for prefinished aluminum insulating horizontal siding you would: 1) turn to the product subcategory index on page 156; 2) locate "Siding-Horizontal"; 3) turn to the page indicated. The key at the beginning of that entry would tell you the designation for prefinished (pf), for aluminum (a) and for insulating (i). Only those siding manufacturers with (pf,a,i) next to their names make the product you are looking for.

The 10 product category sections list manufacturers' names and addresses only. To find telephone numbers, you should check the alphabetical section.

When you want information on factory-built housing

Check the section beginning on page 257. It provides names, addresses and telephone numbers of producers of all types of factory-built housing. Codes indicate which type each manufacturer produces—modular/sectional, panelized, precut or mobile. Codes also indicate whether units are designed for single-family, multifamily or other markets.

When you want additional information

Try the trade and professional association section, beginning on page 262. Groups listed in this section are excellent reference sources, particularly for information on government and industry standards and regulations related to the housing industry. Many offer technical specifications, booklets and other research materials.

HVAC

Manufacturers of the biggest energy users in the house, heating and air conditioning products, are cutting down on the amount of energy their products consume. For the most part, the industry has concentrated on refining technologies that have been around for a few years to make HVAC equipment more energy efficient. The production of high efficiency air conditioners and heating systems and emphasis on the importance of insulating duct work has been the space conditioning industry's response to the energy crisis.

Heat generating amenities are also becoming more efficient. No longer sold for their visual appeal only, fireplaces come with glass doors to keep the system from drawing in heated air from the living area, in-take vents for combustion and devices that circulate air heated by the fire into the room.

Some manufacturers have scaled down their equipment to better fit today's smaller houses. For example, Carrier recently introduced a through-the-wall heat pump that takes up only 29" x 46" of space, rather than a separate utility room. The interior portion of the pump is covered and can be decorated like any other part of the wall.

In the solar area, manufacturers are also refining products that have been on the market for a few years. Many companies are experimenting and offering solar collectors with a variety of glazing materials. Some are looking at new coatings, called selective coatings, for the panels. The selective coatings absorb more of the sun's energy than paint. They can also be used to help Trombe walls absorb more energy.

One trend to watch in the solar area is the use of plastics to form the collector. Some products are already on the market and more are due shortly. If they perform as well as manufacturers hope, they will cut installation costs because they are lighter and easier to handle.

KITCHEN & BATH

Convenience is the hallmark of many of the products now on their way to both new and remodeled kitchens and bathrooms. One example is kitchen cabinetry which, according to Gary Sheldon at Excel Wood Products, is being further accessorized—that is, more pull- and swing-out of shelving, more wire basket systems. In other words, manufacturers are providing more storage possibilities in less space.

Labor-saving features continue to appear on ranges and ovens; one manufacturer has introduced a gas range with a lift-up cooktop for easy burner cleaning. Digital controls on appliances are becoming increasingly popular as well as more complex. And according to a spokesman for Hotpoint, "microwaves are still the hottest appliance on the market."

To help builders cut labor costs, lightweight plastic or fiber glass tub-and-shower units offer fast installation—particularly the tub/shower enclosures that come in easy-to-carry sections. There will be more acrylic, acrylic-coated fiber glass and PVC units, especially if the current remodeling boom—for which these units are especially useful—continues as expected.

Manufacturers also report on a growing segmentation of the market for kitchen and bath products. There are now products to accommodate nearly any style of bathroom; to wit: from the most Victorian—with several manufacturers offering pull-chain toilets with wooden seats—to the most contemporary. Artistic Brass has just introduced what might be called the ultimate luxury faucet: It's offered in brass, pewter or even 24-carat gold finishes—with handles made of genuine Wedgewood.

Other developments to look for: more water-saving appliances and fixtures, especially dishwashers, toilets and shower heads; more pewter and gold finishes on bath faucets; more leaded glass cabinet doors and decorative wood covers for range hoods.

OUTDOOR & RECREATIONAL

The national preoccupation with fitness and outdoor living has been a real boon to the manufacturers in this category of products. Saunas and hot tubs have been indoor and outdoor fixtures in southern and western areas for a number of years now. But the demand for more luxurious bathrooms has carried these units into even the most northern areas.

The units themselves are being designed for comfort of the user—hence the increasing number of contoured tubs that are molded to the shape of the body. Often included too are molded-in seats, soap dishes and storage compartments for shampoo and accessories for the ease of installation for the builder, with many pre-plumbed so that only a few simple hook-ups are necessary.

In addition, with the market for spas widening, there are more kinds to choose from. Units are available constructed of molded plastic, of tile, of redwood. There are more sizes to choose from, too, and more finishes available. A larger variety of options is also offered from decorative trim kits of tile and wood to step configurations and jet systems.

Gym and outdoor exercise equipment are finding their niche as low-cost but popular amenities in community centers and rec areas. Versatile, compact multistation exercise systems are a recent addition to recreational equipment.

Landscaping is a facet of homebuilding that is only now beginning to draw the attention it deserves. As marketing becomes a more essential part of the business, builders seek attention-getters that will impress their prospects before they walk into the sales office. Brick and tile manufacturers, for example, are encouraging the use of these quality products outdoors. Much of that kind of pizzazz is available from suppliers of fencing and lumber, decking materials, artificial shrubs and turf, patio stones and other landscaping materials.

PLUMBING & ELECTRICAL

Among the most significant developments in building products these days are those occurring in the plumbing and electrical categories. One example: a closed sewage treatment system from PureCycle Corp. When it was publicized in the new-product pages of HOUSING last year, it pulled thousands of inquiries from our readers. The reason for so much interest: cost-saving advantages such a product offers. Says Mark Palmer, regional sales manager for the manufacturer: "A builder can avoid the tremendous expense of installing a central sewage system."

Concurrently, a need to keep labor costs to a minimum has encouraged manufacturers to develop products that cut installation time. Plastic piping fits that bill, and several companies have introduced it into their lines. Says Frank Cassella of Nibco, a faucet manufacturer: "Plastic piping is much easier for a builder to work with, and it also doesn't corrode." There is another side to the plastic piping story, however. For considerable concern exists about its flammability and toxicity when it burns.

Another item that benefits from increased pressure for more labor- and cost-saving products is flat-cable wiring. Such systems are already used in open-plan offices. And experts are looking into their feasibility for housing—especially for rehab/remodeling applications.

Soaring rates for electricity have sparked renewed interest in fluorescent lighting, with its lower operating and maintenance costs. In response, several manufacturers have widened their lines of fluorescent fixtures—redesigned them with a contemporary look.

Other developments:

- More energy-efficient light fixtures
- Lighting/energy management systems
- Brass and woodgrain finishes on lighting products to complement warmer decorating colors
- An increasing number of water purification systems.

ROOFING & SIDING

The roofing industry is in the midst of evolutionary change. For the past few years, growing numbers of manufacturers have been introducing lines of fiber glass-based asphalt shingles. And the products have gained larger shares of the market. The shingles are made with an inorganic mat that doesn't absorb moisture or support combustion, leading some companies to offer longer-term warranties for the products. At present, about 35% to 40% of all asphalt shingles sold have fiber glass mats. The industry expects the number to reach about 50% by mid-decade.

The rise in the popularity of fiber glass mats coincides with the rise in three-dimensional, earth tone shingles. The colors along with the shadow lines cast by the laminated shingles gives the roof a more textured, richer look.

While many companies are working toward obtaining the look of wood shakes and shingles, at least one wood shingle producer, Shakertown, has made handsplit cedar shakes easier to apply. The company has bonded 24"-long shakes to exterior grade plywood in 8'-wide panels. The panels are nailed over wood decking.

Introducing newer colors seems to be the trend among siding manufacturers. Case in point: Masonite recently added five new colors to its line of planked panel siding, and three to its line of lap siding.

On the remodeling side, vinyl siding manufacturers are beginning to offer darker colors in their products, something the aluminum manufacturers held claim to in the past. The darker colors, made possible by a new manufacturing process, could increase vinyl's rapidly growing share of that market. However, industry sources indicate that white is still the dominant color.

Companies that manufacture accessories such as gutters and downspouts are jumping into the market with colors that match or contrast with the new siding products.

STRUCTURAL

In recent years, manufacturers of structural building products have geared their R&D efforts toward producing conservation-conscious products—both the conservation of energy and natural resources.

The great number of such products available gives architects and builders a variety of options for designing various versions of energy-efficient housing. Everything from sealants to entire wall systems can help the specifier attain the level of energy efficiency he wants and that he thinks will sell.

Wall and ceiling insulation is no longer the beginning and end of the energy-efficient house. It is a starting point. From there a host of caulks and sealants can fill the gaps in wall systems. A wide variety of insulated sheathings can encase the house in an envelope that not only resists heat flow but cuts down on air infiltration as well. And, in a relatively recent development, sheathings can also protect foundation perimeters from heat loss. In short: Many of the structural components of a house are designed to help cut the building's energy consumption.

Besides the components that make up a wall-framing system, some companies offer entire wall systems. For example, Solarcrete has designed a polystyrene/concrete wall as a high R value alternative to wood frame construction. A 4'-thick core of insulation encased in wire mesh and covered with concrete helps the builder attain an R-20 sidewall. The thicker the insulation core, the higher the R value.

While no one has come up with a way to increase the R value of wood, many lumber companies have found new sources for lumber and plywood-type products. Products like waferboard and oriented strand board use more abundant—thus cheaper—tree species, such as aspen, to provide structural integrity to the building. Producers can now use plentiful species because of relatively recent advances in the manufacturing process.

SURFACE TREATMENTS

Colors and patterns are major considerations in the selection of flooring and wall covering. What do the experts say about the trends surfacing today?

In terms of color: The pastels are moving in to join the earthtones, which seem here to stay. "People are definitely interested in the warm, neutral colors. We just added almond and a warm beige/gray to our floor tile lines. They're colors that people can live with for a long time," says Mary Rohrer Dann of American Olean Tile Co.'s public relations staff.

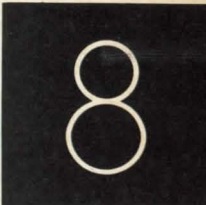

Jenny Duncan, assistant color stylist at Wilsonart, agrees. "The main trend (in plastic laminates) today is toward pastels and the softer earthtone colors, such as grey and taupe. The earthtones in general are still our biggest sellers. They'll be around for a long time."

In terms of pattern: Textures, Dunn and Duncan say, may be more prevalent for tile and laminates in the future.

Later this year we may see the advent of marble and onyx panels. A recent advance in cutting technology has made available very thin stone panels with fiber glass or board backings that make installation and handling of these luxury materials easier. Man-made marble is also making a strong showing on floors, walls, tub surrounds and countertops as the luxury bath becomes more popular.

And solid wood paneling is on its way back, according to one manufacturer. Sales of this type of paneling, said a spokesman from the Building Products Div. of Champion International Corp., had dwindled to nearly nothing several years ago. But for that company it was the hottest-selling paneling in '81.

Other developments: increasing use of tile in more areas of the home, such as foyers, dining/living rooms and in passive solar applications; continued emphasis on the maintenance-free floorings and wallcoverings.

TOOLS & EQUIPMENT

The more complex a construction job, the more varied the steps required to complete it. And manufacturers are flooding the market with tools and equipment designed to make every step of the construction process as uncomplicated as possible.

Two such companies, Senco and Duo-Fast, offer pneumatic, hand-held nailers and staplers that are tailor-made to handle specific tasks. For example, the automatic nailer a workman uses for wall and floor framing will be different from the one he uses for finishing work on cabinets and baseboards. And for jobs that are too big for hand tackers, yet too small for air compressors, electric staplers fill the bill. These tools are handy for installing insulation.

Similar tools are designed to be part of automatic fastening systems used on assembly lines producing factory-built units. Basically, such systems consist of a number of tools connected to equipment that produces entire wall systems or subcomponents.

In the area of large equipment—trucks, loader/backhoes and the like—manufacturers also offer a number of options.

One example: The J. I. Case Co. offers an extensive line of loader/backhoes that permit the purchaser to make trade-offs depending on his specific requirement. One model in the line is fuel-efficient. If the purchaser's prime concern is the cost of operation, he might choose that model. Another of the models is less fuel-efficient, but has a bigger capacity and can get a crew on and off the site quicker.

Yet another model offers four-wheel drive for jobs that would be impractical for standard, two-wheel drive equipment to tackle; a job in muddy terrain, for example. The company's four-wheel drive model is a relatively new addition to its line, but similar equipment has been offered in Europe for some time. The front axle of the four-wheel drive model can be disengaged when two-wheel drive can handle the job.

MISCELLANEOUS

This category of building products measures how the industry evolves. Some of the entries in this section—barely introduced a decade ago—seem destined to make big inroads in the future. The two with the greatest potential for growth are security systems and computers.

The term protection encompasses everything from fire to protection against intruders. Presently some builders use such devices as smoke detectors and intercoms purely as marketing tools; others to conform to building codes. It seems safe to bet that there will be increasing use of these kinds of products as the question of safety gains importance in the minds of consumers and government officials alike.

Look to the computer field for one of the biggest booms in product use, because of the options they offer to the builders.

A builder, for example, can offer computers as high-end amenities, which buyers can use for video games, home education and managing family finances. A few rungs above that kind of system is the computer that controls the physical plant of the house. A great amount of research is being done on computer systems that regulate a home's heating and cooling equipment, even solar devices.

The other side of the computer coin—and one that may offer the greatest potential—is the array of units that help run a business. Scores of builders, architects, and others in the construction industry have already invested in such systems, and more join the ranks everyday. Anyone who has his business on computer can usually control job costing, accounting, estimating and property management more efficiently than someone who relies solely on a manual system. A caveat: Computers are expensive and—at first—a time-consuming investment. It's best to have a definite understanding of just what you want a system to do before you go shopping for one.

HOW TO PLAN, SITE AND MERCHANDISE

THE SMALLER, HIGHER-DENSITY HOUSE

Two days of intensive study in ... Site Planning, Floor Planning, Merchandising and Model Presentations for Townhouses, Duplexes, and Patio Homes

Here's why you should attend...

Because today's rapidly rising land development and construction costs have made the small house homebuilding's key product for the immediate future

Because small houses demand special skills in siting, planning and merchandising if they are to be successful in the marketplace

And because prospects have to be sold on a different kind of lifestyle before you can turn them into small-house buyers

Housing's "How to Plan, Site and Merchandise the Smaller, Higher-Density House" seminar will show you...

How to site medium and high-density housing

How to design small houses that appeal to specific market segments

How to effectively merchandise small houses to these specific markets

Specifically, you'll study these key subjects:

Site Planning:

- Why site-planning subtleties become critical as living units become smaller
- How to avoid the "toy village" look of small-home developments
- How to increase density without sacrificing market appeal
- How to provide privacy in high-density housing
- How to develop street patterns based on actual need rather than out-moded conventions
- How to determine how much common space is needed and where it should be
- How to design for and around the automobile
- How to handle the problems of garage doors, narrow front elevations and setbacks

Product Design:

- How to create floor plans that feel—and live—bigger than they really are
- How to relate floor plans to density
- How to make the most of smaller living spaces—indoors and outdoors

San Francisco, CA, May 17-18, 1982
Hyatt on Union Square

Single Family Attached and Detached,

- How to gear floor plans to specific market segments
- How to use natural light to open up tight floor plans
- How to maximize square footage in key areas
- How to make creative use of interior volume

Merchandising and Model Presentation:

- How to create models that show buyers the comfort of living in a small space
- How to make your models appeal to market groups
- How to scale furnishings for small houses
- How to use color and light effectively
- How to present the unfurnished model effectively

You'll study with Barry A. Berkus, AIA, president and founder of the Berkus Group Architects with offices in Santa Barbara and Santa Ana, CA, and Washington, DC; Walter J. Richardson, AIA, president of Richardson-Nagy-Martin, an architectural and planning firm based in Newport Beach, CA, and Gene E. Dreyfus, president of the Childs/Dreyfus Group, an interior design firm based in Chicago with offices in New York, NY and Palm Beach, FL.

More debate on the pension fund/mortgage issue

HOUSING: Congratulations to Michael Amenta for taking a stand and suggesting affirmative action in your "Speaking Out" section of the January 1982 issue.

However, Mr. Amenta's comments do not connote the "innovative thinking" which he accuses others of not having regarding the current condition of the residential mortgage markets. Although his assessment of the economic conditions which have created the current condition are basically correct, his suggested solution of legislation to require pension funds to invest a certain portion of their assets in housing is, to use his words, hog-wash! Further, Mr. Amenta obviously does not possess knowledge of certain current investment considerations and trends of pension fund managers. Although the traditional fund manager is conservative, it is not correct to state that he shuns any type of investment other than stocks and bonds. Investment trends by pension funds into real estate during the past few years do demonstrate a willingness by the fund managers to diversify and to adopt new investment vehicles.

Institutional investment processes and policies are relatively slow to change; but legislation to force such change not only destroys ERISA's "prudent man" standard, but also would remove from the pension manager his ability to make investments within his realm of fiduciary responsibility to plan members.

It is hard for me to believe that Mr. Amenta is actually a National Real Estate Partner in his firm. From a pension manager's standpoint, Mr. Amenta's firm seems to offer real estate "insulting" services rather than consulting services.

It is my opinion that, in the near future, pension plans will be providing substantial dollars to bolster the U.S. Housing Market by purchasing blocks of mortgages in both the primary and secondary markets. These investments will be made at prevailing market rates and not at below market rates, as Mr. Amenta suggests. If there is to be new legislation, let it be structured so that the thrift institutions may again be a major source of capital for our housing market. In fact, certain such legislation has been passed.

There is no point to "spooking" our legislators into creating more restrictive investment policies for any capital source. That can only serve to make a bad situation worse.

PAUL H. SAYLOR, president
Ackerman Advisory Associates

HOUSING: I agree with this article; however, I feel you did not point out that construction workers depend on their work to perpetuate their own funds. When housing starts drop and fund administrators are placing construction worker funds into the stock market or even secondary mortgages, it is not to the advantage of new construction where the jobs are.

U.S. Steel (has) merged with Marathon Oil. I am sure this $9-billion merger helped the stock of these two companies, but did it put a single carpenter or bricklayer back to work? It is time the construction worker put his pension money where his job security is. I speak from experience I have had as a bricklayer for 13 years and a contractor for 10 years.

RUSSEL L. STEWART, president
Century 21 Stewart Realty Inc.
Waukesha, Wis.

HOUSING: Mr. Amenta's article regarding pension funds being forced into the housing market is the best I have read. It articulates the problem in a manner which even our elected officials ought to be able to understand. I particularly liked the reference to bringing the Federal Reserve "money managers" under the control of elected officials. Maybe then we get some control.

Mr. Amenta gets my vote for visionary of the year.

DUANE H. DIETRICH, president
Dietrich Homes Inc.
Brooklyn Park, Minn.

HOUSING: I haven't read such an interesting article in a long time and I agree completely with Mr. Amenta. As for Savings & Loans, I agree they should be allowed to compete with the banks and let the chips fall where they may. I had already decided that depending on S&Ls for interim as well as long-term mortgage money was a lost cause.

Mr. Amenta's proposal to have all pension funds (not just the construction industry) invest from 25% to 30% of their funds in long-term home mortgages so that a reasonable supply of money will be available for our industry is good.

The huge federal deficit must be brought under control; and, of course, I liked the tax cuts but I think it was a little early with such drastic cuts as we could balance the budget quicker with a more gradual tax reduction, and a balanced budget is what we need. The defense budget should be no sacred cow and should be pared down. Eliminating an antiquated B-1 bomber from the budget is a good start. From being a former operations auditor in the defense industry, I can tell you that the waste is unbelievable.

The biggest problem facing our industry is the high interest rates. They are stifling builders and other small businesses who in the long run hire many more people than the large corporations. I would be surprised if the Federal Reserve Board's actions of tight money and high interest rates will work on really reducing the inflation except for short periods of time. The extra interest cost will be passed on to the consumer and the farmers could go bankrupt with the rest of us. Until interest costs are reduced, we cannot expect any real recovery soon in the building industry.

Land tax 'absurdity'

HOUSING: I read with interest your editorial in the December issue.

While we do not presume that we are experts in the field of housing we wonder if too much attention is being given to the interest rate. Would it not be well worthwhile for those in the construction industry to consider the price of land?

Is the interest rate, and the availability of credit, really the stumbling block which has caused so much havoc to the building industry?

When one considers that a subway ride cost 5¢ in the '30s and now is 75¢, 15 times greater; the cost of the (N.Y.) Daily News was 2¢, now 20¢, 10 times greater; is the price of money—the interest rate—really out of line with the escalation in prices caused by the horrendous increase in the money supply? As the prime rate was probably 2% to 5% in the '30s, even a 20% prime would be four to ten times greater.

It appears to us that if anything is inhibiting building of homes, it is not so much the interest rate, or credit availability, as the price of land and the nation's absurd system of real estate taxation.

Land prices have increased at a much greater rate than goods. This probably is due not only to people purchasing land as an inflation hedge, but also to our tax system which encourages land speculation at the expense of potential homeowners and entrepreneurs.

Taxing land to the point where the community obtains the full economic rent would tend to reduce the price of land to negligible proportions. At the same time if all taxes on improvements were removed, the potential homeowner would probably be well able to pay any increased interest rates on his mortgage. Also, with a low price for land, his mortgage would be that much smaller, so credit availability would probably not be so difficult.

THE SOURCE:
What's available?
Who makes it?
Where can I buy it?

How many times a week do you ask those questions? 25? 50? 100? Whatever the answer, this is the issue of HOUSING you'll want to keep handy over the next 12 months; for it contains our Annual Buyers' Guide—the source book for our industry. Every issue of HOUSING presents borrowable ideas, new products and techniques—a host of useful information. This issue goes one step farther: It tells you builders and architects who makes what and where you can obtain the products you need for everything from homebuilding to property management. For example:

Listed on the previous pages are 2,300 companies by 170 product classifications. If you will refer to the alphabetical section you will find addresses and phone numbers for each manufacturer and in many cases, distributor listings as well.

Why do we spend the best part of a year compiling the data? Simply because it is our commitment to be the source, the best source of all information that's important to our readers. That's why—by way of comparison—you won't find a directory, catalog or any other printed listing with the coverage of your business and sources of supply to compare with HOUSING's Buyers' Guide.

Talk about commitment. Those of you who attended the 1982 NAHB convention in Las Vegas saw HOUSING's commitment to the industry—HMX-1, our showhouse of ideas. It was the star attraction at the convention because it provided builders, architects, developers, designers and manufacturers with a three-dimensional example of viable housing for today's market. And those of you who weren't able to see HMX-1 "in person" were able to tour it in the pages of HOUSING's February issue.

We interviewed hundreds of the thousands of builders who did tour the house at the convention, and discovered some interesting facts. Next month, on this page, I'll share with you the results of that survey. In the meantime, I can tell you that most of those interviewed expect their business to be up over 1981. We personally interviewed builders from 48 of the 50 states. Three out of four said they had picked up specific new ideas on downsizing and higher density—and nine out of ten liked what they saw and found the HMX-1 product to be viable for their market.

Some of the oft-repeated positive comments were: "The overall concept is superb, small but workable"; "Super space, how much privacy you can have in so little space"; and "Remarkable feeling of spaciousness in small square footage."

On the other side, several builders surveyed felt HMX-1 was either oriented to warmer climates or too costly. But one must remember that a prototype as well-designed and furnished as HMX-1 is bound to look expensive. That's why in our March issue we showed hard costs for a basic version would run about $34.10 per sq. ft.—and in February published alternate elevations and floor plans showing how HMX-1 could be built in any climate.

I'd like to know what you think—not only of HMX-1, but of the source: HOUSING. Over 93% of the builders who toured the house at the convention told us HOUSING is the source for current information on their business. How about you? Write me at: HOUSING, 1221 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10020

OPERATION WARM MAJIC:

THE FIREPLACE THAT CAME IN FROM THE COLD

"TELL YOUR PEOPLE THE FIREPLACE
HEATS EVEN BETTER THAN EXPECTED.

I HAVE NEW EVIDENCE."

If you build homes for top energy efficiency, you'd better build in this fireplace.

Because Majestic's new Warm Majic™ fireplace with its fan option can deliver about the same heating capacity as a typical gas furnace for a 1500 sq. ft. home.

And recent NAHB surveys show 9 of 10 home buyers want a fireplace. And 8 of 10 want a home that's energy efficient.

Well, this is the fireplace that lets you give them both.

And unlike typical masonry fireplaces that can suck all the home's heated air up the flue in about 30 minutes, Warm Majic reduces that heated-air loss by almost 90%.

The fact is, builders all over America are using Warm Majic to make their homes sell better.

Call your Majestic dealer. Or write us. Majestic makes the fireplace America wants most.
