Valor Radiant Gas Fireplaces

Valor
ONLINE

There once was a time when families spent the evening gathered happily around a warm flame, not a television. The Windsor Arch evokes this era, providing timeless beauty and bold craftsmanship.

As Victorian castings accompany polished chrome highlights, flames within radiate steady, even heat for many years to come. Unique in design and function, the Windsor Arch combines modern technology with a subtle hint of distinction and elegance from a time once forgotten.

"WHAT DOES GREEN REALLY MEAN?"

Efficiency of operation? Using sustainable materials?
At Bevolo Gas and Electric Lights, it means both.

NATURAL GAS is clean, abundant, reliable, efficient, safe, domestic, and is the cleanest burning fossil fuel. Bevolo's natural gas light fixtures feature the lowest burning gas tips on the planet, making them both environmentally- friendly, and money savers when it comes to fuel usage.

SUSTAINABLE MATERIALS Sustainability

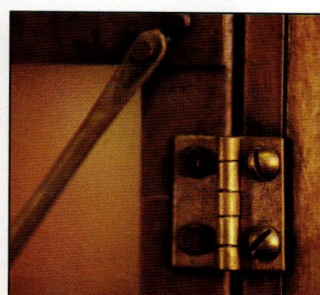

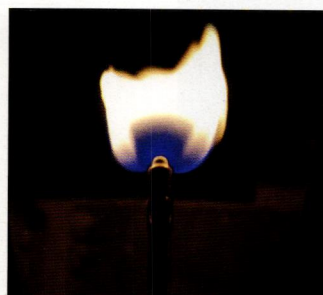

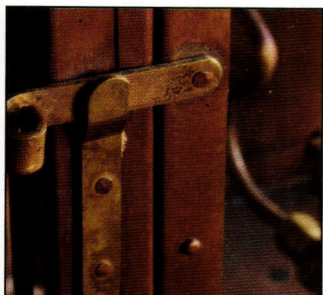

means existing for an indefinite period without damaging the environment or without depleting a resource. Once installed, Bevolo lanterns will last a lifetime and beyond, negating repeated replacements and disposal of discards that would negatively impact the environment.

HAND CRAFTSMANSHIP Each Bevolo light is constructed entirely by hand, from the first cut of the copper sheeting to the final hammered rivet, making our impact on the environment negligible.

"With designs that will accommodate the latest bulb technologies and lifetime burners, not having to change a light bulb for 20 years or a gas burner for over 50 is truly remarkable.

Whether it's changing a light bulb or lighting a match, Bevolo's ease of operation, accessibility and structural design are legendary."

FOREWORD

PERIOD-INSPIRED DOESN'T MEAN FROZEN IN TIME. It isn't even necessarily traditional. Rather, in looking to the best of 300 years of the decorative arts, the companies listed in this book offer wild, imaginative, extraordinary possibilities from way beyond today's designer showrooms. Whether your house is an antique, vintage, or new, you'll find ideas here.

This book presents hundreds of companies who, in the opinion of the editors of Old-House Interiors magazine, offer excellent products and good value. We herald the small company selling high-quality wares direct to the customer, whether through distributors or over the Internet. We also point to the appropriate specialty lines of major manufacturers. In deciding what to include, we tend to favor companies of high reputation, products with true authenticity, beautiful and timeless materials, and groundbreaking designers who are using a period-inspired vocabulary. (Generally available materials, like those easily found at lumber stores and big-box home-improvement stores, are not listed.)

More comprehensive (though still full of specialty suppliers) is the longer list of companies and products you can search through our website, oldhouseonline.com. Listings here come from the combined resources of Old-House Journal and Old-House Interiors magazines. Use this book to become familiar with what's out there (and to mark pages, share ideas, find contact information). Go to the website when your search gets more specific, and also to link to companies' websites.

Looking for timeless design that works with your house and won't go out of style in just a few years? Start by letting the house speak for itself.

IF YOURS IS an old house, or one modeled on American style traditions, congratulations! You (and your designer) already have all sorts of cues and clues for its decoration and furnishing, courtesy of the period and style of the house. That's not to say that your choices are limited—actually, the opposite is true. A vintage house suggests styles and treatments more creative, and far less trendy, than those found in a contemporary showroom. Period-inspired rooms can be innovative, interpretive, and personal. They need not be slavish reproductions.

In the midst of a booming revival of traditional design, the history-inspired market has become the quality market. It's where you'll find products and furnishings of exceptional integrity, beauty, and uniqueness. So much is available: reproduction carpets and rugs, furniture, fabrics and wallpapers, and lighting specific to any era. Paint colors are grouped into well-researched period palettes; hardware is authentic in style and finish. Some of these reproductions are “document”—that is, a replication of the original, including its scale and colorway.

opposite: In an 1890 Victorian cottage lightly renovated as a family vacation home, the living room is comfortable with wicker furniture and nautical motifs, in keeping with its location near the sea.

Others are adapted for modern taste or use. Still others are the result of creative adaptation, and these often surpass the originals in every way. Add the traditional decorating market to historical reproductions, and it's quite a feast.

Period styles are fantastically diverse. The novice hears "Victorian" and imagines florid carpets and carved rosewood—but hasn't yet considered the delicate, almost oriental interiors of the Aesthetic movement, or the immensely pleasing designs of William Morris (whose fabric and wallpaper patterns have been in production, uninterrupted, for nearly 150 years). "Arts & Crafts" is not limited to Stickley's rectilinear oak furniture and pinecone-embroidered muslin. It extends to the abstracted glass designs of the Prairie School, the wood anything but white

Understanding the architecture is the first step to bringing out its best qualities. Case in point: using mid- and jewel-tone papers and paint with mellow Arts & Crafts woodwork. In an effort to "lighten up" such rooms, some owners resort to white-painted walls and high-wattage lighting. The result: a black-and-white room with dark, receding woodwork.

Much better to embrace the cozy mood of such rooms. Bring out the warm highlights of the wood with analogous colors of terracotta and deep gold, or contrasting colors of olive and smoky blue. Use low-wattage or carbon-filament Edison lightbulbs in sconces and table lamps.

joinery of Greene & Greene, even the presciently modern furniture and textiles of the era's English and Scottish designers.

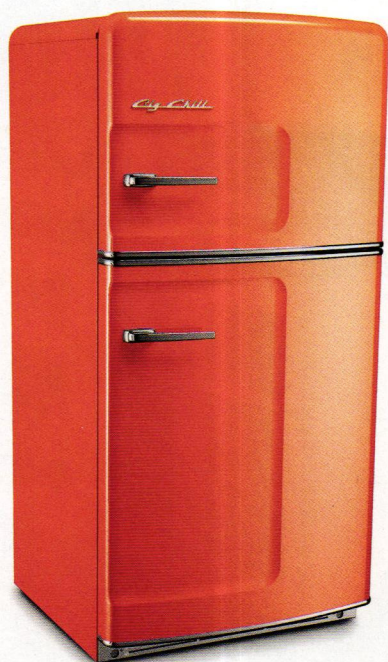

Do you lean more toward personal vision and an eclectic mix? No problem; decorating is not permanent. Once you know something about the styles that do complement your Queen Anne or Craftsman, you'll be armed to mix and match, and otherwise break the rules. A forward-looking frieze from the Victorian era may be the artful punctuation in a modern room; a growing collection of Arts & Crafts lighting and pottery can be as effective against gallery-white walls as in a period bungalow. If your old house is of indeterminate pedigree—or if it's had its pedigree remodeled right out of it—you can use period design to enhance what it does have to offer. You can create a cohesive interior where once blandness or confusion reigned.

— Patricia Poore

A PERIOD-INSPIRED KITCHEN is a good choice in an old house because it avoids the “time warp” sensation of walking from a restored parlor into a room gleaming with stainless steel. A frankly contemporary kitchen works if, say, it is placed in an addition. And you can simply add appropriate moldings and other details to a functionally modern kitchen.

How do you design a kitchen that will still look good in 20 years? Rely on timeless materials such as wood and stone. Downplay contemporary materials by keeping design simple or by incorporating period conventions—trimming out laminate counters in wood, for example, or using honed rather than polished granite. For cabinets and millwork, take design cues from your dining room, or from an old pantry in the house or the neighborhood. Also, try to use only details and materials that are related to the date and style of the house.

THE MOST SUCCESSFUL period-inspired baths are not slavish reproductions. Start with the basics: three plumbed, ceramic fixtures; a tile or linoleum floor; a medicine cabinet; a washable wainscot of varnished wood or tile. By all means, interpret and update to create a room both functional and beautiful. Rooms that have a personal vision—and of course good craftsmanship and materials—are the rooms that will age gracefully.

White fixtures have always been most common (and least expensive). Bathrooms inspired by those of the early 20th century are a good choice for most old houses, lending an indeterminate timelessness. These common bathrooms are of course perfectly appropriate for bungalows, Arts & Crafts houses, and Tudor, Colonial, or Romantic Revivals. Owners of 19th-century houses will find it easy to incorporate Victorian-period details: wainscot or tile, electrified gaslight-era fixtures, and freestanding or antique furniture.

WHEN IT COMES to handmade tiles, we're approaching a true art form. Perhaps that's why tiles old and new have become collectibles. These works of art and craftsmanship can enhance everyday places like the kitchen backsplash, shower walls, and fireplace surround.

Choices include glossy tiles in every color palette (with or without special effects like crackle glazes or aged patinas); matte, slip-glazed tiles in diverse and earthy field colors; and decorative (or "deco") relief tiles that depict a motif. Revival tiles include De Morgan and Low style Victorian tiles, accurate reproductions of Arts & Crafts-era Batchelder tiles, boldly colored Moorish Revival deco tiles, and cuerda seca and tube-lined tiles. Even matte-finish encaustics are back. Metal tiles make another option.

Even manufactured ceramic tile has gone far beyond the 4x4 square. Choose from hexes, octagons, oblongs, diamonds, and rhomboids in all sizes.

WHERE TO BEGIN when there are so many wonderful styles in lighting fixtures? Start with our subcategories.

COLONIAL: Styles dating from before 1820, even if electrified, including patinated copper lanterns, chandeliers with "tapers," onion lamps, and mirrored sconces.

GASLIGHT ERA: Victorian period lighting, usually electrified in reproduction. Includes designs adapted from fixtures that would have burned gas (shades face up rather than down).

ARTS & CRAFTS: Stylish lighting of the period 1890 to 1925, with allusions from English medieval to Asian-inspired Californian. This is "bungalow lighting" and includes Cotswold style, art glass and mica, hammered copper and Mission sconces.

ELECTRIC ERA: Designs from after the dawning of the age of electricity, including Colonial Revival, Art Deco, and "Sputnik." Includes bowl ceiling fixtures, schoolhouse lights, urban fixtures, and traditional and industrial designs.

LIGHTING ACCESSORIES: Edison-style lightbulbs, push-button switches, glass shades, and cloth-covered electrical wiring.

WHEN IT COMES TO hardware design, what goes around comes around: The best ideas tend to repeat. A hand-forged colonial latch-key entry clearly shows its medieval roots. So does a wrought-iron thumb latch manufactured for a 1920s Tudor Revival home.

Many early Americans outfitted their homes with black or gunmetal-gray strap hinges and door latches forged by a blacksmith. The more affluent imported brass fittings. Porcelain and cut-glass doorknobs debuted in fine Greek Revival homes. During the late 19th century, mass production brought some of the most ornately designed hardware ever made: rosettes, escutcheon plates, even doorknobs elaborately decorated with fashionable motifs, thanks to adaptation of centuries-old methods of mold-making, including lost wax and sand castings. American Arts & Crafts artisans sought to return to handmade objects of simplicity and utility. Find all this, and some arcane delights, in the pages that follow.

TIME-TESTED DESIGN, NOT FADS

AND DECORATING ADVICE YOU CAN REALLY USE

In the midst of gut-wrenching renovation, I planned my someday kitchen, imagined the period-style bathroom I would add, the leather chairs and wicker porch swing and Morris fabrics I would buy. Period design became my passion, which I share with you in the pages of Old-House Interiors. There's nothing stuffy about decorating history, nothing to limit you. On the contrary, it's artful, quirky, bursting with ideas I couldn't dream up on my most creative day. Armed with knowledge about the period and style of your house, you'll create a personal interior that will stand the test of time . . . an approach far superior to the fad-conscious advice given in other magazines. Join me. I promise you something different!

The event for anyone who wants to know how to create, decorate, learn, preserve, restore, renovate and display our Nation's Architectural History. This show is an invaluable tool for both professionals and homeowners!

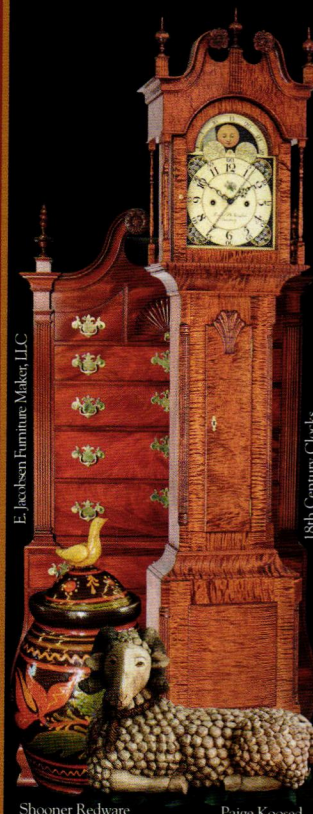

THE NATION'S PREMIER OLD-HOUSE EVENT!

Showcasing juried craftsmen and distinguished artisans—offering the serious collector the “best of the best” in American craftsmanship.

Visit HistoricHomeShows.com to see dates, locations and times or call 800.782.1253 for more information.

Don't miss the special wine and hors d'oeuvres preview party on the show floor. Be the first to view and purchase rare collectables and hard to find items!

VISIT MOST FURNITURE showrooms, and you're on your own to figure out what will best complement your house. In the pages that follow, however, you'll find manufacturers and craftspeople attuned to period design. Remember, though, that while Renaissance Revival furniture will always look good in an Italianate parlor, style is just one starting point. Develop an eye, look at interior design books, ask for help, have a plan—then buy what you love, one piece at a time.

The “small goods” of the past offer extraordinary aesthetic and practical value, meeting the admonition of the artist–craftsman, which was eloquently stated by William Morris: “Have nothing in your house which you do not know to be useful or believe to be beautiful.” Whether your house is historic or part of a revival, take a long view when selecting finishing touches that authenticate a room—the plein-air painting, the gilded picture frame, the brilliant glass. Don't settle for mass-produced and anonymous things in your house. Live instead with fewer objects of unique beauty.

ALTHOUGH LATE VICTORIAN rooms are heavily layered, textiles do not have to be excessive to be effective. The homespun, damasks, and quilts of early American interiors added color and comfort without fussiness. Similarly, the Arts & Crafts movement of the early 20th century relied on appliqued pillows, embroidered window curtains and portières (or interior doorway curtains), stenciled table scarves, and plush carpets for softness and color. In all periods, drapery has been the most significant use of fabric, but you can get an appropriate look without extravagance.

Curtains and carpets, pillows and fringe add softness, comfort, and texture. They muffle sound. They round out a dominant color scheme or introduce spots of accent and contrast. They suggest a style or period by virtue of their design, color, volume, material, and trimmings. A house without textiles is just architecture, not yet furnished.

EVEN WHEN DECORATORS of the past specified “white,” whether for kitchen cabinets or a Colonial Revival hall, they didn’t mean white the way we do today. They may have been referring to such off-whites as ivory, bone, soft gray, or buttercream—even soft pink or tan. The true colors of the 18th century included brilliant yellow, Prussian blue and turquoise, clear green, blood red, plus black and tinted ivories. By the 1870s the tripartite treatment had walls divided into dado (or wainscot) below the chair rail, a fill or field section, and a frieze at the top. Raised-panel wainscots and plaster created three-dimensional ornaments. The Arts & Crafts period is often described as a reaction against Victorian excess—but, by modern standards, these interiors were still highly decorated. In living and dining rooms, a frieze finished the wall over a high wainscot. Colors were earthier yet included gold, grass green, and eggplant, with pastels in the bedrooms.

WOOD FLOORS SUGGEST durability even as they convey understated beauty. Slate and limestone create drama in a foyer or bath. Today's stone floors are more likely to be beautifully cut slates and limestones or granites with some sort of manmade relief—evidence of clefting and pick marks, for example.

Thanks to reclamation and remilling, as well as the salvaging of river-bottom logs, wide-plank floorboards are available from specialty lumber companies. Reclamation means you can get species tapped out a century ago, including longleaf heart pine and chestnut. A new option, the engineered floor, can give the look of strip or plank flooring at far less cost.

For practicality and color choice in the kitchen, you can't beat a resilient floor. An amalgam of ground cork and linseed oil, linoleum is a great medium for inlaid floor patterns. And cork is perfect for a mid-century modern house.

house & garden

YOUR HOUSE WILL GUIDE YOU. Look at existing elements for clues to style. Sometimes there is more than one theme; for example, a predominantly Arts & Crafts house may have Colonial Revival woodwork in the dining room. Go ahead and honor the original intention, but pick a dominant theme when adding major elements. When you stick with a single architectural style, everything you add will look as though “it’s always been there.” Decorating and furnishing are ephemeral and can be more personal, eclectic, or mixed.

Nowadays, you can get anything you want. Indeed, this Sourcebook could be subtitled “Elements of Style, Available for Purchase.” The pages that follow treat you to a sampling of those permanent fixtures that are key to style. Included, too, are garden details that round out the impression. For authenticity, consider using the occasional part salvaged from a house of similar vintage.

Mechanical systems don’t generally fall within the scope of a decorating book.

Some systems, though—invisible air conditioning or pretty heat registers—offer practical or aesthetic advantages peculiar to old houses, and are described here.
