

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

It seems that one of the more controversial events conducted by the CCAIA is the annual Distinguished Building Awards Program. Regardless of the criterion established and jury selected, complaints invariably arise from members regarding one or the other or both. If there were any continuity to the complaints registered from the membership, the task would be simple. Unfortunately, this is not the case. The most frequently heard criticisms are that the jury composition is too young or too old, too staid or too avant-garde, too limited by way of experience, too "east" or "west" coast and, thus, too regional in attitude, too biased in terms of architectural philosophy, and on and on. Another common criticism deals with the work which qualifies for submission. The disputes center on whether qualifying entries should be limited to work completed in the metropolitan Chicago area and designed by Chicago architects, work completed in this area and designed by architects anywhere, or completed work designed by metropolitan Chicago architects regardless of location. The time limitation for completion of the project is another controversial issue. Yet another criticism centers on categories of completed work, e.g., should a single-family residence be judged alongside a high-rise office project or a hospital.

For several months now, the design committee chaired by Cynthia Weese, AIA, has been evaluating these and other concerns, as well as learning how other major metropolitan chapters deal with similar issues. Substantive arguments can be made both pro and con on several of the issues, and the design committee and members of the board have given many hours of their time in an effort to produce guidelines for entries which are equitable for all, as well as responsive to the objectives of the Program.

I am pleased to inform you that George Schipporeit, AIA, has agreed to serve as chairman of the Distinguished Buildings and Service Awards Program for 1982. Those of you who know George recognize him as a fine architect of balanced views with a foothold in both academic circles and active architectural practice. We are all grateful to him for undertaking this arduous and frequently frustrating assignment.

Requirements for this year's program are:

1. Architectural projects and planning projects must have been completed during the period January 1, 1979 to July 1, 1982, inclusive.

2. Projects must be designed by registered architects (AIA member or non-AIA) with principal offices in the Chicago metropolitan area, which by definition shall include the counties of Cook, Lake (Illinois), DuPage, Kane, Will, McHenry, Porter (Indiana) and Lake (Indiana). Entries from firms with major offices located here and elsewhere will be limited to completed work designed by the office within the aforementioned geographical area regardless of project location.

3. Previously submitted projects which did not win an award may again be submitted if eligible under the time limitation above.

4. Entries will be accepted in three categories: New Construction, Extended Use, and Restoration. For convenience, projects will be listed as to building type, e.g., housing (single family), housing (multiple family), commercial, health care, industrial, scientific and research, educational, religious, recreational, government, planning and/or urban design and miscellaneous. This will facilitate jury review by building type. The jury will determine the number of awards, if any, in each of the three categories. Awards will not be made on the basis of building type.

5. The fee structure for entries will vary this year to recognize that the Chicago Chapter, AIA in large measure underwrites the cost of the Award Program. Fees per entry are as follows:

a. CCAIA members	$ 75.00
b. Other AIA members	100.00
c. Non-AIA architects	125.00

6. Entry submittals will also require that views of all exterior sides of the project be represented, in addition to site plan, floor plan(s), view(s) of interior, and data sheet(s) to facilitate evaluation.

In addition, we request that Chicago Chapter, AIA members consider submitting nominations for Distinguished Service Awards. Individuals who have made significant contributions to architecture and the architectural community as a whole, and deserving of such recognition would include artists, sculptors, craftsmen, renderers, model makers, researchers, educators, furniture designers, writers, historians, etc.

There is no fee for the submission of candidates for the Distinguished Service Awards. All candidates will be evaluated by the CCAIA and final determination of awards made by the CCAIA board. Detailed information on the nominee and a statement explaining the nominator's reason to support the nomination should be included. (Cont'd, pg. 7)

STANDING UP TO TIME

George Schipporeit, AIA and the Awards Committee are seeking nominations for the Chicago Honor Award, offered annually to outstanding local architecture between twenty-five and thirty years of age. This award is given to a building which has withstood the tests of time and the marketplace to emerge as a classic design.

Automatically considered are all winners in the Chapter's Awards program of exactly twenty-five years ago. The 1957 Awards honored were:

The Chess Pavilion, by Maurice Webster

Dunbar Vocational High School, by Holabird, Root and Burgee

Parking Facility Number 6, by Holabird, Root and Burgee

3950 Lake Shore Drive, by Shaw, Metz and Dolio

American Dental Association, by Childs and Smith

Continental Can Company, Inc., by Schmidt, Garden and Erikson

Marshall Field & Company at Old Orchard, by Loebel, Schlossman and Bennett

Carson, Pirie Scott & Company at Edens Plaza, by Welton Becket and Associates; and Graham, Anderson, Probst and White.

All buildings finished between 1952 and 1957 are eligible. This period was rich in eclectic styles as well as the strong, emergent voice of Modernism. A wide variety of entries will ensure that an outstanding project is chosen.

Entry forms were mailed with the Distinguished Buildings Awards entries; additional copies are available from the Chapter office. There is no entry fee; the winner will be named at the Awards Ceremony in September and will be included in the Art Institute exhibit.

COMPETITION TO HONOR WILLIAM LE BARON JENNEY

In Graceland Cemetery on the city's North side stand beautifully designed monuments to architects John Wellborn Root, Daniel H. Burnham, Louis H. Sullivan, and Ludwig Mies van der Rohe, as well as the famous Sullivan-designed Getty and Ryerson tombs. But William LeBaron Jenney, acknowledged as the "father of the skyscraper", also lies in Graceland Cemetery in an unmarked grave.

To right this wrong, and to celebrate the 150th anniversary of Jenney's birth, the Chicago Architecture Foundation is sponsoring a design competition for a Jenney memorial. The competition is open to sculptors, architects, designers, and students in these fields.

Those who have not received the program/entry form and are interested in registering may write Jethro M. Hurt, Coordinator, Jenney Memorial Project, Chicago Architecture Foundation, 1800 South Prairie, Chicago 60616.

2 CCAIA COMMITTEES TO DISCUSS TAX REFORM ACT

The benefits of the 1981 tax reform act, as they pertain to old and historic buildings, will be the topic of a noon-time panel discussion co-sponsored by the Historic Resources and Real Estate Development Committees. The discussion will feature experts from the legal accounting, and real estate appraisal professions. The meeting will be at noon on Thursday, June 17 in the Chapter board room. For more information you may contact Marshall Hjertstedt, 454-0327 or Sy Frolichstein, 641-6142.

COLLECTION: HANDLING THE NON-PAYING CLIENT

Donald J. Hackl, FAIA, will lead a round table discussion and idea exchange on how to get paid on time, and what to do when you're not paid. The Office Practice Committee will sponsor this discussion where you'll also hear about asking for and getting retainers, how to handle a client who attempts to bargain down your already-agreed-upon charges, and legal recourse against clients who refuse to pay. Information about publications on the subject will also be available. The committee is offering this program on Wednesday, June 23 at noon in the Chapter board room.

Various aspects of firm survival in this tight economy are the subjects of the committee's other summer programs. On July 21 we will have a presentation on systems drafting techniques and discussion of their impact on the firm's design and marketing efforts. The August 18 meeting will feature information about modes of operations: mergers, joint ventures, holding companies.

The committee is also planning a compensation survey in which we hope all member firms will participate. We are evaluating surveys done by other chapters such as New York City and mid-Florida; we hope that the survey will be ready to mail to all firms in August.

Martin Bruner, AIA

PROPOSED BYLAWS CHANGE

Chicago Chapter bylaws require a thirty days' notice to all voting members for any proposed amendments to the Chapter bylaws. The following proposed amendment will be subject to approval of the CCAIA Board of Directors at their meeting June 22:

Article IX, Section 5C to read, "If dues are not received by June 1, the member shall receive fifteen days' notice in writing that membership will be terminated on June 30." (Currently the bylaws state September 1 and September 30.)

Article IX, Section 5D to read "If firm dues are not received by June 1, the responsible member(s) shall receive fifteen days' notice in writing that his (their) membership will be terminated on June 30. (Currently the bylaws state September 1 and September 30.)

DOCUMENT INFORMATION

A201 will be revised, and the AIA is urging members to provide comments on this document. The Chicago Chapter will compile the comments from members and forward them to the Institute. Your suggestions should arrive at the Chapter office by June 30.

G602 has been temporarily suspended, in agreement with the request of the Association of Soil and Foundation Engineers. A revised document is planned for the first part of 1983.

Declaration of intent to submit entries and entry fee for each entry is due at the CCAIA office no later than June 28, 1982. Submissions of entries must be received by July 22, 1982. The jury will meet in August and the Awards Presentation will take place in September, 1982. Complete information and entry forms were mailed to CCAIA members the end of May.

We hope that the changes this year will enhance the overall quality of the Awards Program, and that each of you will consider submitting projects of merit for review by the jury. The CCAIA Distinguished Buildings and Service Awards Program is recognized among the foremost in the country and as continuing the tradition of excellence in architecture designed by Chicago architects.
