A Message from the National AIA President

The year 1976, in a sense, will be a tough one for AIA, just as 1975 has been a poor business year for many of our members. In 1975 and again in 1976, AIA nationally has been and is responding to two major membership concerns. First, AIA has recognized and reacted to the impact of the economic slowdown. We are concerned that national individual and supplemental dues have increased at a rate which has inhibited state and local components from increasing their dues income. As a result of these concerns, the 1976 program and budget will be 21% below that authorized at the 1974 convention. Individual AIA dues will be substantially reduced in 1976.

To accommodate this reduced income, the Planning Committee which I chair has recommended a reduction of both staff and programs. A budget reduction of this magnitude requires that special care be given to the evaluation of both existing and proposed programs. To this end, during the planning process this year, specific measurable goals were established for each program. For evaluation purposes, we realigned everything the Institute does into three areas of activity — Institute effectiveness, public influence and professional development. A survey of component officers early in the year helped in setting priorities.

In spite of the fact that we are temporarily tightening our belts, I firmly believe that, in the current economic downturn, we must have an even more active visible Institute. At the same time, I believe we are at a turning point. Institute growth at national has leveled off — and rightly so. Special emphasis has now been placed on strengthening components such as the Connecticut Society. While staff has been decreased in other areas, it has been increased in the Department of Institute and Component Affairs, that department which is responsible for program delivery through components.

As far as the programs of the Institute are concerned, the accent is heavily on the professional development area. Of major importance this year is the development of a formalized internship program. A few states are being selected for a pilot effort.

Energy conservation and how the architect can deal with the problem is a continuing interest. Look for and subscribe to the "Energy Notebook". It will be a design resource, updated quarterly, which will help the architect cope with the new demands of the energy crisis.

Probably the most important practice tool developed in recent years is the cost-based compensation system. Now that percentage fees are out of vogue, the "Cost-Based Compensation Guidelines" manual is a must for all offices. It is a systematic guide to developing adequate fees.

Increasing the market for architects will have a special emphasis in 1976 with the publication of guidelines to competing with the package dealer. And, somewhat related to this subject, a special task force will take a fresh look at some of the ethical restraints of practice — conflict of interest in construction, design-build and development work. Even the restrictions on advertising will be re-evaluated.

Still related to practice, but in the legislative area, the AIA nationally is taking a much more forceful role in state legislation. We have for many years had a strong federal lobbying arm. But a new effort, with increased staff in this area, is being made to assist the states, like the Connecticut Society, to strengthen their legislative efforts. On such issues as architectural selection procedures, statutes of limitation and registration laws, guidelines and a legislative clearinghouse are available at national.

Finally, in the practice area, professional liability is a primary concern. We are not willing to sit back and do nothing as insurance rates continue to escalate. In addition to seeking out other carriers, a new task force is looking at the basic causes of liability suits, perhaps with the doctors and other professionals, to determine whether, through legislative pressure, the trend can be reversed.

Anyone who has persevered this far in this brief account of national activities can tell that I am a practice-oriented architect. I firmly believe that the Institute exists solely for the purpose of serving its members. For the most part, these members are in practice and my primary interest is in seeing that these practices survive and flourish. To serve that purpose, AIA locally as well as nationally, must provide useful tools for practice — all of those things which we cannot do individually.

Louis de Moll, AIA
President, American Institute of Architects

A Message from the CSA President

Once upon a time, the role of the Architect was well defined. The Architect's self-image as a professional and the public's concept of his role were simple, and harmonious. He was a designer of buildings, and he performed his work in a time-established, orderly pattern. Numerous diverse skills were required and the task was not easy, but it was focused and, in that sense, simple.

We have moved far from such a simple practice. Changes were wrought by many factors. Some were the result of an expanded concern for our total environment, and the interrelationship of influences on complex planning and building programs. As a result, Architects became programmers, planners, financial consultants, ecologists, energy consultants, and construction managers. Some changes were also the result of challenges from other disciplines, or sub-disciplines, to the Architect's leadership role in the total planning process. In response to those challenges, Architects expanded their capabilities as coordinators and managers of the total process. And finally, competition from design-build organizations, as well as the need for economic survival, drew Architects into new roles as developers and new business organizers.

I have always believed in the concept of the Architect as a "Renaissance Man" who had tremendously broad capabilities, and was knowledgeable and highly skilled in many areas. The contemporary Architect is called to be that kind of man; yet, can he fulfill all the requirements of the expanded architectural practice? Architects are challenged today in an unprecedented way. I believe that the most vital function of The Connecticut Society of Architects at this time is to respond to that challenge by maintaining high standards of professionalism in the midst of a complex and competitive environment.

There is a great temptation to proclaim, "I can do anything," especially when challenged by economic recession and competition from other professionals and from non-professionals. Expanded services should be provided to meet new needs, yet we must be honest with ourselves and with the public. We need to know what we can do, and what we cannot do. We must not compromise our reputation by "overselling". Our greatest asset is our professional integrity and competence. We should not fear competition from those outside our profession. If we are competent and honest, our future is secure. If we are inferior, we should be out of work. As we maintain high standards of performance, we assert our particular advantage in these competitive times.

With the support and participation of all members, I look forward to our continuing CSA programs to accomplish many objectives. In addition, a newly formed Council of Presidents, composed of past Presidents of the CSA, will develop guidelines for the future of our profession and, in particular, will deal with the currently expanding new forms of architectural practice and their competitive aspects.

Architects have always been at the forefront of change, exercising their imagination, initiative and professional skills. Our environment is still stimulating, and filled with opportunities to serve. 1976 can be a very good year!

AIA Standards of Ethical Practice

THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF ARCHITECTS

AIA Document J330 — Revised June 20, 1975

INTRODUCTION

These Standards are statements of ethical principles having broad applicability to professional persons. Accordingly, the enumeration of particular duties and the proscription of certain conduct does not negate the existence of other obligations logically flowing from such principles. Conduct proscribed as unethical must be construed to include lesser offenses, such as attempts and aiding-and-abetting. Deviation from these Standards shall be subject to discipline in proportion to the seriousness of the violation.

The Board of Directors of The American Institute of Architects, or its delegating authority, shall have sole power of interpreting these Standards of Ethical Practice, and its decisions shall be final, subject to the provisions of the Bylaws.

The following provisions of the Bylaws of The Institute form the basis for all disciplinary actions taken under the Standards of Ethical Practice.

IMPLEMENTATION

Bylaws: Chapter 14, Article 1, Section 1(c):

Any deviation by a corporate or associate member from any of the Standards of Ethical Practice of The Institute or from any of the Rules of The Board supplemental thereto, or any action by the member that is detrimental to the best interests of the profession and The Institute shall be deemed to be unprofessional conduct on the member's part, and ipso facto such member shall be subject to discipline by The Institute.

CHARGES PRIVILEGED

Bylaws: Chapter 14, Article 5, Section 1:

Every formal charge of unprofessional conduct shall be privileged. Except as noted in this Article, all charges, proceedings, evidence, data, notices, transcripts and any other matters relating to the charges shall be confidential. The same qualifications shall apply to any material coming before a chapter governing body or committee in any matter, formal or informal, of alleged unprofessional conduct. In unusual situations when the President of The Institute (or the Secretary in the President's absence) determines, after consideration of all the circumstances, that the best interests of the profession, or The Institute, or one of its component bodies so require, the President (or the Secretary in the President's absence) may authorize the release of sufficient information concerning a case to meet the situation.

Bylaws: Chapter 1, Article 1, Section 2:

The objects of The American Institute of Architects shall be to organize and unite in fellowship the members of the architectural profession; to promote the aesthetic, scientific, and practical efficiency of the profession; to advance the science and art of planning and building by advancing the standards of architectural education, training, and practice; to coordinate the building industry and the profession of architecture to insure the advancement of the living standards of our people through their improved environment; and to make the profession of ever-increasing service to society.

OBLIGATIONS TO THE PUBLIC

1. An architect shall above all serve and promote the public interest in the effort to improve human environment, and shall act in a manner to bring honor and dignity to the profession of architecture. An architect shall conform to the registration laws governing the practice of architecture in any jurisdiction in which the architect practices.
2. An architect shall practice in a manner that will support the human rights of all mankind and shall not discriminate against any employee or applicant because of sex, race, creed, or national origin.
3. An architect shall not use paid advertising; indulge in self-laudatory, exaggerated, misleading, or false publicity; or solicit, or permit others to solicit in the architect's name, advertisements for any publication presenting the architect's work.

Interpretation by The Board of Directors, December 1972:

The above prohibition against paid advertising does not prohibit architects or architectural firms from being included in lists which are compiled and distributed by a client group, and for which a nominal fee is charged to offset the cost of compilation and distribution; provided that such lists and the conditions of their preparation and use are specifically approved by The Board of Directors. Nor does this prohibition apply to architectural exhibitions sponsored, co-sponsored or specifically approved by The Institute, for which a nominal charge is made to offset wholly or partially the cost of processing and arranging such an exhibition and/or subsequent publication.

4. An architect shall not publicly endorse a product, system, or service, or permit the use of the architect's name or photograph to imply such endorsement. However, an architect may be identified with any product, system, or service designed or developed by the architect.

OBLIGATIONS TO THE CLIENT OR EMPLOYER

5. An architect shall preserve the confidences of the architect's client or employer.
6. An architect shall represent truthfully and clearly to the prospective client or employer the architect's qualifications and capabilities to perform services.

Statement in compliance with Consent Judgment entered June 19, 1972:

“Under the Standards of Ethical Practice of The American Institute of Architects the submission of price quotations for architectural services is not unethical. An architect is free to state a fee in offering his services. In so doing, however, he must be careful not to violate any law, ordinance, rule, or regulation of any government or agency, official or instrumentality thereof. He must never subordinate the quality and adequacy of his services to any consideration which would tend to impugn the integrity of his professional practice or to jeopardize the professional standards which should at all times guide the practice of his profession.”

7. An architect shall not undertake any activity or employment, have any significant financial or other interest, or accept any contribution, if it would reasonably appear that such activity, employment, interest or contribution could compromise the architect's professional judgment or prevent the architect from serving the best interest of the client or employer.

Interpretation by The Board of Directors, June 1971:

This Standard provides that the architect must avoid any activity which would put, or which could reasonably be construed to put, the architect's financial interest in competition with that of the client; activities during the construction phase are particularly sensitive to such conflicts.

An architect may not engage in building contracting where compensation, direct or indirect, is derived from profit on labor and materials furnished in the building process.

An architect may engage in construction management as a professional for professional compensation only.

As a participating owner of a project, an architect may perform in any role legally consistent with the position of ownership. A real or apparent conflict of interest must be resolved in the best interest of the client.

The Institute holds that the Standards of Ethical Practice are compromised when a member is employed by individuals or organizations offering to the public architectural services which are in any manner inconsistent with these Standards.

8. An architect may take contributions of service or anything of value to those endeavors which the architect deems worthy. An architect has the right to participate in the political process and to contribute time and money to political campaigns.

An architect shall not, however, contribute, or promise to contribute, either directly or indirectly, any gift, compensation, or other consideration of value in order to retain present work or employment, to obtain future work or employment, or to reward anyone for the award of past work or employment. An architect shall not exert improper influence in obtaining professional work or employment or with respect to activities in the construction industry.

The term “improper influence” means influence, direct or indirect, which induces or tends to induce consideration or action with respect to any prospective work on any basis other than the merits of the matter.

An architect, in making a political contribution, shall do so publicly, in the architect's own name and as an individual citizen.

An architect shall not engage an agent or representative to solicit work on the architect's behalf whose compensation is either (a) unreasonable or (b) contingent, in whole or in part, upon the obtaining of professional work for the architect.

Interpretation by The Board of Directors, May 18, 1974:

Nothing herein shall prohibit an architect seeking regular employment from utilizing the services of an employment agency on customary terms.

Interpretation by The Board of Directors, March 5, 1975:

The prohibitions against contingency compensation does not apply to full-time, bona fide employees of the architect.

OBLIGATIONS TO THE PROFESSION AND THE BUILDING INDUSTRY

9. An architect shall not attempt to obtain, offer to undertake or accept a commission for which the architect knows another legally qualified individual or firm has been selected or employed, until the architect has evidence that the selection, employment or agreement of the latter has been terminated and the architect gives the latter written or other equivalent notice that the architect is so doing.

Interpretation by The Board of Directors, March 5, 1975:

Termination, as used here, does not necessarily mean that all conditions of the agreement between the original architect and owner or employer must have been fulfilled to the satisfaction of both.

10. An architect shall recognize the contribution of others engaged in the design and construction of the physical environment and shall not knowingly make false statements about the professional work, or maliciously injure or attempt to injure the prospects, practice, or employment position of those so engaged.
11. An architect shall encourage education and research, and the development and dissemination of useful technical information relating to the design and construction of the physical environment.
12. An architect shall not offer services in a design competition except as provided in the competition code of The American Institute of Architects.

We think a sign should accent,
not dominate.

An effective identification sign must communicate quickly and clearly while at the same time establishing a distinctive, favorable identity. We design and fabricate identity to meet the individual requirements of the client. Location, setting, product, and service are all carefully analyzed to create a sign concept that fits your needs and accents your architectural and environmental surroundings.

United Advertising Corporation, serving the northeastern states for over 50 years, welcomes the opportunity to serve you.

The Organization & Functions of the CSA / AIA

The Connecticut Society of Architects, a chapter of the American Institute of Architects, derives its organizational structure from the Institute which divides its activities into commissions, headed by commissioners.

The chapter's commissioners are given freedom to choose activities that they feel are important and that they feel they can accomplish during their oneyear terms. There are, however, certain activities that take place every year. By enumerating these, this article will illustrate the commissions' areas of concern and the functions of the chapter.

The Commission of Chapter Affairs handles matters that come within the chapter itself. Programs for meetings and the production of chapter communications, such as the Bulletin, are under it. The chapter office's job clearing house, membership solicitation, group insurance and document service are also handled by this commission.

The chapter's annual Honor Awards Program, which gives recognition to architecture performed within this state that is deemed to be exemplary by an Award Jury, is administered by the Commission on Environment and Design. The annual Lay Person Award Program, honoring people who are not architects for their contributions to an improved physical environment, is administered here. Recently, this commission's activities have included designing for energy conservation and the use of alternate sources of energy.

The Connecticut Society of Architects' relations with Federal and State government are managed by the Commission of Government Affairs. Specific legislation is often proposed by the chapter to the General Assembly. Bills relating to architecture and the construction industry are monitored, and the chapter's reactions to them are communicated to the appropriate legislators. Architects are provided to make statements before legislative committees. The chapter, working closely with AIA headquarters in Washington, reacts to legislative proposals in the Congress.

An important concern of the Commission on Professional Practice is professional liability insurance. A task force under this commission has developed a series of seminars on the reduction of exposure to potential claims. It is also researching the various sources of professional liability insurance and, when through, will disseminate this information to architects. Practice aids developed by the Institute and elsewhere are reviewed by this commission.

This chapter's comprehensive continuing education program is administered by the Commission on Education. Programs, ranging from evening seminars on technical matters to full day workshops on management topics will be developed by this commission either by itself or in cooperation with universities within the state or the American Institute of Architects. The Connecticut State Architectural Registration Board and the chapter co-sponsor clinics for candidates for the architectural licensing examinations.

Architects' activities that focus directly on a city or town, as opposed to the state, are administered by the Commission on Community Services. The role of this commission is to develop programs, beneficial to the community, that will help the public understand the profession of architecture. Through this commission, speakers are furnished to civic groups and to the community's schools. Guidance in the procurement of architectural services is also given to the communities.

An article on the chapter's activities would not be complete without mention of the inauguration of a new service to its members and the entire construction industry in the state—the sales of AIA documents. The chapter office has a complete stock of AIA documents in the A,B,C,D,E and G series and intends to give prompt service on orders taken. Documents will be mailed First Class. Orders received by the chapter office before 11:00 AM will be put in the mail at noon and should arrive at most locations within the state the next day.

How to Select an Architect or Architect Services

When you embark on a major construction program, you are in fact committing your organization to what may be a multi-million dollar investment in an unknown quantity. While it is possible to define the proposed facility in terms of size, function, and certain other requirements, which together make up the "functional program" for the project, there are many imponderables.

How well and how long will the facility serve its intended purpose? Will it be responsive to the needs of its users and the community? What will it say about your image?

The architect you select to design the facility will be a major determinant in answering these questions. Investing in a construction project is unlike purchasing a commodity. Only a known need and a few ideas exist at the outset to define the scope of the project. These ideas and requirements become the basis for the architectural program, the conceptual design, and ultimately, the working drawings and specifications from which the facility will be constructed.

The individual primarily responsible for this process is the architect. The architect will determine the functional, esthetic, and financial success of the project. During the process of design and construction, he or she serves as adviser, coordinator, and synthesizer, as well as creative artist. For a period of months or years, your architect effectively becomes a partner in your organization.

Obviously, selecting the right architect is not and cannot be a casual or offhand process.

What selection process works best?

Federal, state, and local governments throughout the country, and many independent commissions, school boards, developers, and others in private industry currently rely upon architect-selection procedures that have been formulated and systematized in the crucible of actual practice. This general procedure has been formally adopted and enacted into law by the federal government and a number of state governments for selection of professionals for the design of public projects.¹ While the details may vary, the process includes these basic steps:

Invitations to a number of firms to submit information concerning their experience, qualifications, specialized abilities, personnel, and similar data. This invitation includes such pertinent data as the scope of the work, budget, and time limitations, together with some indication of the professional services to be rendered. It does not include a request for sketches, cost estimates, or the suggested compensation which the architect would receive.

Evaluation of these submissions to determine which firms appear best able to handle the proposed project. Evaluation criteria should include performance on previous projects, professional standing of the firm's principals, etc., as well as such performance factors as management, coordination, accuracy, completeness, and cooperation.

Discussions with representatives of the firms you have ranked highest, to narrow the field to those most qualified for the project at hand.

Ranking of the top firms (usually three to five) in order of competence, understanding of the project, and ability to meet your budgetary and schedule requirements. This last consideration will to a great extent be based on the firm's personnel and its current and projected workload.

Discussions with the top-ranked firm to determine its ability to perform the required services within a stated time-frame and in accordance with budget requirements.

Negotiation of the architect's compensation. If a fair and equitable agreement on the cost of architect's services cannot be reached with the first-ranked firm, negotiations are officially terminated, and the second-ranked firm is invited to enter into negotiations concerning schedule, project budget, and compensation.

What should you know about the architectural firms which are under consideration?

In addition to such information as name, address, and telephone number, each firm should be asked to state the year in which it was established, the names of principals and the states in which they are registered to practice, the names of other key personnel with a resume of their experience, and the types of facilities for which the firm is particularly well qualified.

Besides this basic information, the prospective client should attempt to determine the firm's current and projected workload, number and type of support personnel, and some index of past professional accomplishments (for example, a list of previous clients during the preceding several years).

Visits to current and recent projects and discussions with their owners are also useful, as is information on the standing of the architect within the profession.

The federal government has developed a questionnaire (General Services Administration Standard Form 251) which its agencies use to solicit information from architectural and engineering firms about their experience, personnel, and general professional accomplishments. Many firms maintain completed copies of this form in their files. Such a document can serve as a valuable tool in screening a number of firms to help you determine which ones should be investigated further.

The actual selection is normally made by a committee or by an individual familiar with the procedures involved. It may be helpful to obtain the advice of a registered architect familiar with the type of project envisioned. Sometimes, for large complex facilities, an open pre-interview meeting is held, with all interested architects invited, to discuss the general scope of the project.

How do you determine the architect's compensation?

Once a firm has been selected on the basis of its qualifications and its ability to perform the work required, fee negotiations begin.

Compensation for architectural services is established in several ways, including the following:

1. Lump sum—commonly used when the scope of services required is known or can be realistically determined in discussions with the selected architect.
2. Direct cost times a multiplier to compensate for overhead and profit—used by many clients for commercial facilities.
3. Percentage of construction cost—often used by state and local governments (although other methods are being used with more frequency in recent years). Under the percentage method, compensation is generally determined on a declining basis; i.e., the larger the construction cost, the lower the percentage. However, the relative complexity of the facility must also be considered in determining an appropriate percentage.
4. Cost plus fixed fee—The architect is paid a fixed fee for his personal professional contributions to the project and other office and consultant expenses are paid for on a basis similar to that in (2) above. This type of arrangement is sometimes used when the client desires the substantial personal attention of a particular architect, because of unusual project requirements and because of that individual's special expertise in dealing with such requirements.
5. Per diem rates—sometimes used for unusual consultant services.

Architects and clients may also agree on a basis for compensation for other professional services which are not included in their contract, but which may conceivably be required at a later time. In addition, certain items such as long-distance travel and the reproduction of documents are paid for as direct reimbursables.

At the negotiating session, your preference as to method of compensation and the method the architectural firm considers appropriate should be discussed and a conclusion reached.

The General Services Administration (GSA) has had a wealth of experience in negotiating contracts for architectural and engineering services. One top-ranking GSA official has stressed the importance of positive attitudes during the negotiating process, saying, "A willingness to bargain and a flexibility to adjust during the negotiating process will lead to a successful conclusion. Rigidity and failure to recognize that negotiation is a two-way street will result in an impasse and termination of negotiation. In a truly successful negotiation, both parties at the conclusion should feel that they have obtained their essential objectives, and unreservedly stand ready to carry out their contractual obligations."

Most architects have a copy of the AIA publication, "Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice," which includes further details on architect selection and methods of determining compensation. AIA also publishes many useful contract forms which reflect years of experience in the construction industry and which can be used in drawing up contracts for professional design services and for construction.

For nearly half a century, we've designed coverage for many of Connecticut's leading companies. Casualty. Fire. Bonds. Group. Liability. Errors and Omissions. We've designed and built package plans that provide better coverage at less cost than individual policies.

But we provide far more than dollar coverage. We pride ourselves on meticulous service from career insurance professionals. And attention to accounts often turns up cost-saving opportunities. When your work is finished, ours begins. To protect what you've built.

Accredited Programs in Architecture

The National Architectural Accrediting Board was established in 1940 by joint action of the American Institute of Architects, the Association of Collegiate Schools of Architecture, and the National Council of Architectural Registration Boards. It produces and maintains a current List of Accredited Programs in Architecture in the United States and its jurisdictions, with the general objective that a well integrated and coordinated program of architectural education be developed which will be national in scope and afford opportunity for architectural schools with widely varying resources and operating conditions.

Only accredited first professional degree programs in architecture are listed. In some cases, as noted, the school is in the process of phasing out the Bachelor's program, while retaining or initiating a Master's program. Information about pre-professional, post-professional, or other degree programs which cannot be listed as accredited, may be obtained from the individual school.

engineered masonry construction

STRUCTURAL CONCRETE MASONRY WALLS and PREFABRICATED FLOOR AND ROOF SLABS

Low Initial Cost ■ Structural Integrity ■ Flexibility of Design ■ Speed of Construction ■ Improved Sound Control ■ High Fire Resistance ■ Reduced Maintenance and Operating Costs

The Plasticrete engineered masonry construction system is particularly well suited to multicellar dwellings such as apartments, hotels and student housing. The walls and floors essential to structural integrity inherently yield excellent properties of fire resistance, sound control and permanence . . . characteristics which are most desirable for these building types. No other system can offer all these advantages . . . and economy too! Send for FREE detailed literature.

THERMALBAR

A decorative, insulating panel that waterproofs and protects.

1. Available in a wide range of colors and textures.
2. Excellent insulating value.
3. Maintenance free.
4. Shiplapped all four sides.
5. Factory applied, highly resilient, tape sealant that insures against leakage.
6. Stabilizes wall temperature, thereby minimizing structural thermal stresses.
7. Lightweight - less than 3 lbs. per sq. ft.
8. Quick and easy to apply.
9. Can be installed over any structurally sound wall.
10. For new and existing structures.
11. Constructed from a lamination of normal density expanded styrene, a tenacious high strength polymer reinforced concrete with a granular/acrylic emulsion finish.
12. An economical and high performance product.

IMAGINATION and FLEXIBILITY in wood frame construction

The Acorn building system provides the architect with a design and structural framework to economically satisfy a variety of applications. Individual building sizes range from less than 800 to more than 8,000 sq ft, and components for clusters of 50,000 sq ft have been supplied.

Acorn saves design, supervision and construction time. The high quality of the finished product is assured by good materials, precise factory fabrication, and well thought-out and proven details.

Acorn's capabilities are demonstrated in our three brochures: Single Family Houses, Cluster Houses, Specialized Structures, and in our bulletins on Energy Conservation and Solar Heating. For further information contact: Arthur Milliken, General Sales Manager. And you are invited to visit our plant and see our solar heated model house in actual operation.

Building Today For Energy Tomorrow

Many people know us as New England's largest mechanical contractor. In fact, we are one of the largest in the nation.

One area of our business gives us special pride—energy related projects. This work has been a major factor in tripling our business volume in the last five years. And it has let us contribute to the solution of tomorrow's energy problems.

Some of our recent and ongoing projects in this area are:

Nuclear

Waste system modifications for Connecticut Yankee Nuclear Power Plant, Haddam, Conn.

Heavy Fuel Oil

Construction of the first electrically traced (heated) pipeline of its kind in the United States for NEPCO.

Construction of tanker unloading, piping and transport facilities for United Illuminating Company, New Haven, Conn.

Construction of piping and mechanical facilities, ARCO tank farm (Atlantic Richfield Co.), New Haven, Conn.

Liquid Propane

Turnkey contractor and design/build assignment for construction of a 400,000-barrel storage facility for a U.S. subsidiary of Gazocean, a French corporation.

Natural Gas

Construction of piping and mechanical work for new liquefied natural gas plant for Connecticut Natural Gas Company.

Jet Fuel

Construction of two separate jet fueling facilities at Logan International Airport, Boston, Mass. For Delta Airlines and for the base operator.

Defense

Shore power facilities for nuclear submarines, Electric Boat Division of General Dynamics, Groton, Conn.

Recycling of Materials

Electrical systems for several New Haven Trap Rock-Tomasso facilities, converting accumulated rock dust to valuable construction aggregate.

At C. N. Flagg, we're working on the future. It's something we've been doing for more than 60 years.
