IN THIS ISSUE ...

Design and building industry professionals are becoming more aware of the environmental impact of construction and are devising creative solutions using environmentally responsible building materials and technologies. These technologies will only increase in importance as landfill space and resources are depleted. Read about the strong and growing sustainable building movement in Hawaii in this issue.

COVER: The tent structures at Molokai Ranch's Paniolo Camp offer visitors a rustic, back-to-nature experience. The camp is an excellent example of sustainable architecture in action. See the story on p. 5.
