IN THIS ISSUE ...

Hawaii's large estates have had a strong influence on land use issues in the Islands. Do the estates fulfill their commitments to the people of Hawaii with responsible planning and architectural design? Several thought-provoking articles in this issue attempt to answer this question. (Ed. note: It is impossible in a magazine of this length to cover all of Hawaii's estate land holders. We have attempted to achieve a balance among the articles we received for the issue.)

COVER: Campbell Square, headquarters for The Estate of James Campbell, has been recognized for design that reflects a Hawaiian sense of place.

Clarification

In an article in the June 1997 issue of Hawaii Pacific Architecture, "The Retail Explosion on Guam," James B. Tucker & Associates, Honolulu, was inadvertently omitted as the designer of the interior of the Liberty House Tumon. TRS+A/Taniguchi-Ruth-Smith+Associates, Guam, coordinated, stamped and signed drawings and performed field inspections.
