IN THIS ISSUE ...

Although working in Guam and Asia presents a number of challenges to building industry professionals, the results of their efforts can be some of the most innovative and structurally-sound buildings in the world. Hawaii Pacific Architecture explores some of the practical and cultural issues facing design and construction professionals working in these developing areas.

COVER: Guam is a sleepy little island no more, thanks to tourism-related development such as Planet Hollywood. Photo courtesy of Fletcher Pacific Construction, a contractor for the project.

Hawaii Pacific Architecture is the bi-monthly journal of the AIA Hawaii State Council. Subscriptions are $24 per year. Foreign subscriptions: $48. Opinions expressed by authors do not necessarily reflect those of either the AIA Hawaii State Council or the publisher.
