Masonry Institute of Michigan, Inc.

"M AWARD" WINNER

"The general shape, size and positioning of the library addition are commendable...the masonry walls express unquestionably a structural technology very different from that of the existing building...the narrow reveals and the horizontal slit windows tell that these are curtain walls, masonry sheets that enclose the interior structure and space just as the glass sheets do...the rock face stone base is appropriate and a good contrasting accent."

--Norman N. Rice, FAIA
Chairman, Awards Jury

The University of Detroit Law School Library in downtown Detroit, featuring oversize brick units and rock-faced Mankato stone carefully selected to harmonize with the brick and limestone in two existing buildings on the site, won for Smith, Hinchman & Grylls Assoc., Inc., of Detroit an "M Award" in the second annual masonry design program sponsored by the Masonry Institute of Michigan in co-operation with the Michigan Society of Architects. (Mason contractor on the project was Darin & Armstrong, Inc., of Detroit.)

This completes our look back at the four projects that were judged winners in the 1976 program. We are pleased to announce that the program will be continued on the same basis in 1977...and the entry box is now open for this year's awards. As a member of MSA, you will receive an official announcement, including complete details and an entry slip, by mail. Deadline dates this year are August 15 for entry slips and registration fees ($30 per project), and October 25 for receipt of completed entries. Judging will be held in November, and awards presented at a banquet on January 21, 1978. Projects located in Michigan that were completed after May 1, 1974, are eligible.

We urge you to enter your outstanding projects ...and join the distinguished roster of "M Award" winners. For additional information, call the Masonry Institute, (313) 553-2080.

NEW ETHICS AND BYLAW CHANGES

The American Institute of Architects adopted a new Code of Ethics and Professional Conduct which spells out in positive canons, ethical standards, and rules of conduct the architect's professional responsibilities to the public and to clients.

The code becomes effective as a new AIA bylaw on July 1, 1977. It is the result of more than a year's study, revision, and hearings at meetings of the membership around the entire country.

While reaffirming the Institute's standards of ethical practice, which have been effective since 1909, the code is set forth in a new format which clarifies and emphasizes the difference between aspirational standards and mandatory enforceable conduct. The "rules of conduct" enumerated in the code are mandatory, and their violation is subject to disciplinary action by the AIA.

In adopting the new Code, delegates defeated two proposed rules of conduct that would have permitted members to perform services that might bring their interests into conflict with those of their clients, so long as they gave written disclosure of this possibility of conflict.

These rules, included in the canon that "members of the AIA should serve their clients competently and exercise unprejudiced professional judgment on their behalf," would have allowed architects to become more involved in the construction, as well as the design, of their projects.

The new language states unequivocally that "members shall not undertake any activity or employment, have any significant financial or other interest, or accept any contribution, if these would reasonably appear to compromise the members' professional judgment or prevent members from serving the best interest of the client."

A second rule spells out that "members may not engage in building contracting where compensation, direct or indirect, is derived from profit on labor and materials..."

This measure was the most hotly contested issue of convention business, and it carried voting on the new ethical code into the third business session of the four-day convention. The proposed bylaw change which included the provision for contracting was introduced Tuesday by Institute President John M. McGinty, FAIA. He told the assembly that "this challenge" offers the "opportunity to increase the effectiveness of our performance, to do a better job in education, in design, and in project delivery."

He said that architects cannot escape conflict of interest, but "what makes us professionals is not the absence of potential conflict.

"Anyone who enters a profession--any profession--assumes an obligation to sacrifice when necessary profit, personal advancement, or any other personal goal if it conflicts with his obligations to society or his client," McGinty said.

Opposition to the contracting aspect of the ethical code was led by Atlanta Board member Jerome Cooper, FAIA, who said the alternative rules (which were later passed) would permit both the client and society to "comfortably rely upon the architect to reach decisions that will protect their interests without any concern for his or her own conflicting personal interests."

Cooper pointed out that a major way to affect the development of the built environment is through ownership, in which instance the architect may construct the project himself. Nothing would prohibit the architect from participating as a member of a design-build team in his professional role, Cooper explained. But compensation simply cannot be contingent upon the profit or loss realized in the labor or material provided.

Rules pertaining to advertising by AIA members have been broadened slightly, to permit members to indicate specialties in telephone directories. But the rules continue to prohibit members from purchasing advertising in the public media to offer architectural services.

The rules were also broadened in permitting the use of a representative in seeking architectural commissions, with guidelines offered on such use.

Two other bylaw changes were adopted by the delegates. One provided the base for a broadening of AIA membership by stating qualifications for associate membership. This category would include those without architectural licenses who work in a professional or technical capacity related to practice of architecture, under supervision of a licensed architect.

The third new bylaw sets forth a new structure of dues assessment for AIA members and for the registered architects in their firms. While it becomes effective July 1, present members will not be affected by the new classifications until December 31, 1977.

LANSING R/UDAT

The Lansing R/UDAT has come to a highly successful conclusion. The Task for the Mid-Michigan Chapter and City is beginning.

The absolutely outstanding team of eight arrived here from all points of the compass late Friday afternoon and went into immediate session with the City Council, the Mayor's representative, President of the Economic Development Corporation and Mid-Michigan Chapter Board of Directors. This proved to be an outstanding inter-change and lasted until 2:00 a.m.

On Saturday the team spent from 8:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. in public session receiving testimony from public officials, private citizens and the business community.

Sunday was spent touring and photographing the city, meeting with additional resource persons and assigning tasks for preparing the report.

The big push started Monday morning at 6:00 a.m. and ended at 2:00 p.m. Tuesday, when the final sketch, photograph and column of typing was scotch taped to the masters and sent off to the printer, following which the team collapsed in their hotel rooms. The team leader was dragged from his bed at 3:30 for a press conference and spent the next four hours locating lost slides for assembly of the 7:30 slide presentation to the community.

The team has left behind a 103 page bound report filled with illustrated narrative and recommendations ranging from tree planting and traffic re-direction to a major city-state capitol city development commission and significant retail and cultural projects.

It has also left behind a feeling of purpose, a major charge of enthusiasm and a disbelief that so few accomplished so much in only four days. It is imperative that the state-wide R/UDAT proceed with enthusiasm and speed, for it is now obvious that the R/UDAT program will have a major impact on the direction of our state.

Editors Note: The Lansing R/UDAT was written by John Crouse, AIA, Co-Chairman of the R/UDAT and member of the Mid Michigan Chapter.

Following is a brief description of goals formulated by the R/UDAT team more fully described in the entire R/UDAT book.

The City should make Lansing a capital city worthy of being Michigan's heart.

The goals: What should be accomplished.

These goals, if accomplished would significantly contribute to the quality of life in the capital city.

1. Make the central business district unique in its own right. By building on its own resources, Lansing can improve its position as a major focus for retailing, entertainment, conventions, and office employment.
2. Establish a forum where the city, state, and business community can communicate about a planning strategy for the downtown.
3. State expansion should proceed in a manner which supports the quality of life of the city: economically, socially and environmentally.
4. The city should simplify its administrative structure so that responsibilities for program operation are clearly assigned to specific office holders.
5. The community should find ways of "enfranchising the unenfranchised". For the community, not just those who are normally organized into forceful interest groups.
6. The city should celebrate its neighborhoods. Efforts should be made to reinforce the special identity and character of each of these vital residential districts.

7. Preservation of the existing housing stock is of vital importance to the future of the community. All segments of the community must work to establish an atmosphere in which citizens and institutions feel positive toward urban reinvestment.

8. Lansing's rivers should serve as a living spine that link all parts of the city. These waterways can be beautiful natural areas that provide recreation opportunities, a setting for civic happenings and alternative access ways between neighborhoods.

9. There needs to be more concern for the interrelationships, context and human felicity which contribute to making an exciting city. In short, urban design concepts should be incorporated into all development activities.

10. Every effort should be made to replace the trees which once lined all the city streets. This natural element can contribute tremendously to the aesthetic quality of the city.

11. The transportation and circulation must be put in better perspective with other elements of the city. The goals are:

- not to sacrifice intimately scaled residential streets to commuter auto traffic
- not to use key building sites for parking lots
- not to demolish historic buildings for parking lots

12. The community should move in numerous ways to strengthen the cultural life within the city.

13. The media and the community should develop a new sense of self-awareness about Lansing's situation. In this process the city should shed its undeserved stereotyped image of a decaying urban center and develop a realistic appreciation of its positive community values.

14. Steps should be taken to reinforce Lansing's basically healthy economic base by achieving a higher degree of industrial diversification.

LEGISLATIVE

Synopsis of Senate Bill III regarding the Statute of Limitations is written by Joe Neussendorfer of the Builders Exchange, and introduced by State Senator John F. Toepp, 1977.

S. B. III would improve the existing statute of limitations in Michigan by addressing various issues raised by courts in Michigan and elsewhere which have rendered statutes similar to Michigan's present law unconstitutional.

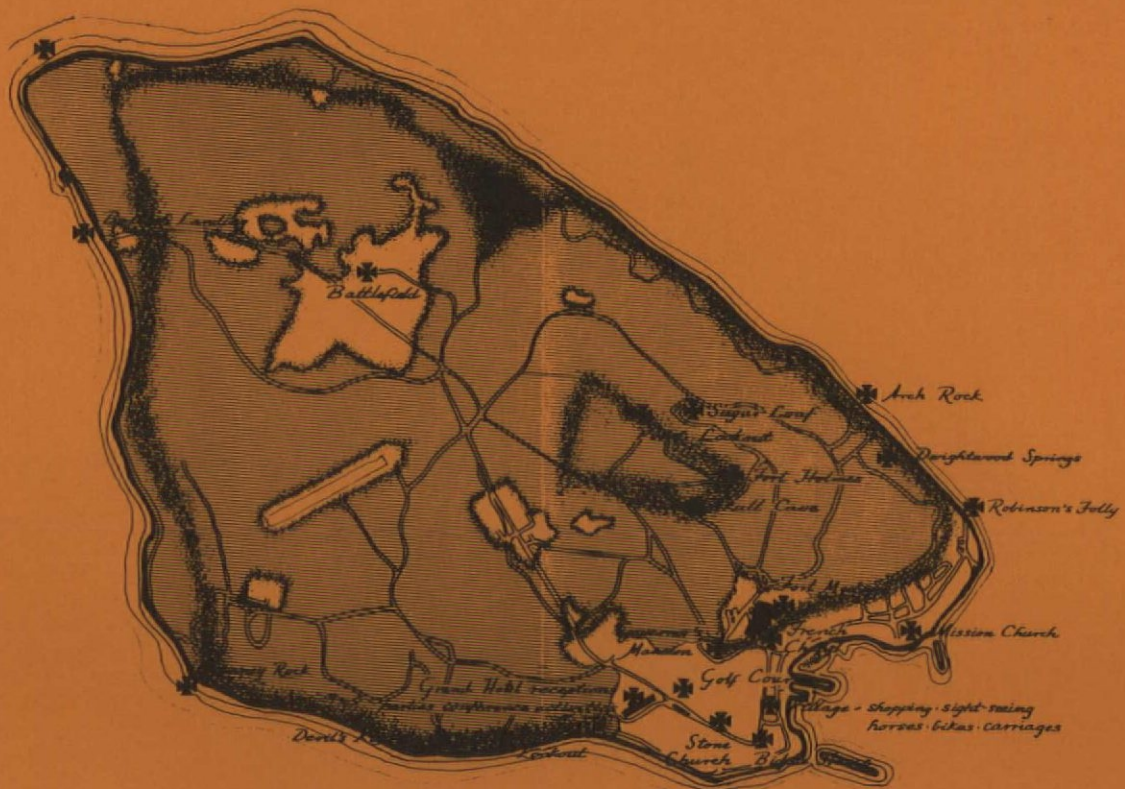

The Wisconsin Supreme Court declared that state's statute of limitations unconstitutional on the basis that it arbitrarily discriminated among persons as it defined the class of protected parties too narrowly by omitting such people as planners, materials suppliers, and contractors. There was a relatively similar finding in a circuit court in Michigan.

To deal with the question of arbitrary discrimination, S.B. III adds related professions to the earlier law. It further changes the

Re: Gas Piping; Tubing Joints and Fittings

It has been brought to our attention that metallic tubing joints used in natural gas and liquefied petroleum gas applications are not being installed in accordance with the National Fire Protection Association Pamphlet 54. The pamphlet states in 1.2.6.1 (1975 edition): "Metallic ball sleeve compression type tubing fittings shall not be used for this purpose." Only approved fitting joints will be accepted by this office.

In one installation using compression joints, an explosion occurred as the result of leaking gas, and three other joints were found to be cracked. This occurs as the result of improper torque on the nut which results in cracking the nut and causes an improper seal.

Approved fitting joints shall be of the flare type or bear the label of the testing laboratory or the manufacturers name or logo.

MSA CONVENTION

DRAFTSMEN COMPETITION

Frank Klaetke, AIA, of Detroit reports there will be a revival of the SMACNA Draftsmen Competition.

This competition will be run by a joint committee and will coincide with the 1977 MSA Convention at the Detroit Plaza Hotel, November 2-4.

Watch the Newsletter for details or call Frank at (313) 963-2735 for information.

MSA CONVENTION ROAD RALLY

The Motor City will welcome the MSA Convention this year with an opening night Road Rally through the convention floor. Architects and their guests will compete for the checkered flag timed by the stop watches of the committee. Allowances will be made for re-fueling at the "pit stops". No one will want to miss having their rally card stamped at the secret check point.

Pack your driving gloves and wear your racing cap.

HOUSE ACCOUNT!

We had the first party on Flag Day, just for the WORKERS on the Beaubien House move-in. About sixty of the hard core showed up to partake of the picnic goodies. The weather man was very cooperative and the flag looked great even though we had to hang it from the second floor window instead of on our flag pole.

The flag pole, just incidentally, has been ordered from the Baartol Company down in Ohio and will be delivered the week of July 4th. The committee members in charge of flag poles and eagles are Ed Francis and Gene DiLaura, who are guaranteeing authenticity and installation. This might be the occasion for another get-together to supervise the construction crew.

Our brand new flag was the gift of Adrian N. Langius, FAIA, some years back, but it was a little difficult to fly it properly from the 13th floor of the Mutual Building. Gus had it flown over the capitol building in Lansing before he sent it to the Society, so it is special.

The flowers planted in the front of the house and in tubs in the back courtyard are the result of a trip to the Eastern Market early one morning. The planting crew organized the front into a red, white and blue color scheme, geraniums in the cast iron pot on the column in the front yard (would like to know what that is from!) and ageratum and alyssum in the border around the brick paving. The back is in pink begonias, (the price was right on a case of them) with the remaining ageratum and pachysandra filling in.

The living room now has four nice comfy beige chairs from Jack Cartwright, Inc., courtesy of Ginny Pinnell. This room is the scene of the Bookstore operation and our general reception area. We will have proper display racks for our brochures on membership, and how to hire and work with an architect, and education materials for members and the public.

We have in stock all the AIA Contract Forms and Documents as well as an enlarged supply of books all listed in the AIA Catalog. We will be adding books of other publishers from time to time and welcome suggestions from you regarding new and interesting volumes we should have available.

If any member needs a place to hold a meeting, the second floor Board Room is available upon request. Just call Renee to book the time and make sure the schedule is clear. When you are in town, please stop by for a visit and a tour, it is a great place!
