Promotion of the Profession

This past April 20th, The Institute celebrated the 125th Anniversary of its founding with a number of gala festivities. In Detroit, a plaque of historical designation was placed at the front entry of the Beaubien House/MSA Headquarters. The intent of both of these activities was to create a public event, or to make the public aware of the architectural profession.

A most important aspect of our profession and business potential is related to public awareness. How do we promote our profession at its best to our community and potential clients.

Here in Michigan, each Chapter received some material to assist in the announcement and promotion of the 125th Institute anniversary. Did your Chapter develop something for the local media? Was the Institute's anniversary or your Chapter mentioned this past month? How about the month of April?

Every effort must be taken to place the profession before the public eye. The 125th anniversary was one way and an event for the public. If your Chapter didn't do anything, a good opportunity was missed.

With the present economy as it is, our profession faces difficult times. The services of the Architectural profession must be fully brought forth to the general public. More than ever before, now is the time to promote the profession of architecture.

MSA CONVENTION NEWS

Work is progressing on the 1982 MSA Convention to be held at the Hyatt Regency Flint, October 13-15, 1982. Focusing on the convention theme, CHALLENGES: The Architect in Michigan's Future, the program committee chaired by Jim Tomblinson is reviewing a wide range of topics.

Programs are planned to present three main areas of the architects future: 1. Business Management and greater office efficiency (historical tax incentives and enterprise zones, development packaging and financing, computer aided drafting), 2. legislation affecting the profession (effect of sunset legislation and statute of limitations, and the new lien law) and, 3. new markets and how to capture them (robotics, earth sheltered structures).

The spouse program will offer financing and money management seminars in addition to tours of the Flint Cultural Center.

The 1982 MSA Convention will be of interest to everyone, architects, related professionals, associates, spouse and students. Hope to see you there.

THE ARCHITECT IN MICHIGAN'S FUTURE

PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Charles T. McCafferty, AIA
Detroit Chapter President,
1982

MEMORANDUM

At the end of the toughest winter in a generation, on top of the continuing worst economic situation since the Depression, one wonders if things will ever be right again.

With the arrival of spring, however, and even though belated, we are assured again of at least the promise of renewal, regeneration — and warm weather.

That notion of regeneration is important to us in the architectural profession because this year marks the initiation of a massive, Institute-sponsored program of expanding our membership.

The reasons for this program are several, but two will suffice for this memorandum. The first is that if the Institute is going to represent the architectural profession to commerce, industry, government, and institutions then it is indeed necessary that it be truly more representative in numerical terms of those who are licensed to practice architecture. The second reason is the reverse point of view. The Institute is a tremendous resource for those of us engaged in architectural practice. While at the 'Grass Roots' Conference in January of this year, I was reminded again how broad and deep are the resources that the Institute makes available to each of us: small office, large office, employee sole practitioner, student. The real limitation is only our ability as individuals and individual office to utilize the many technical, administrative, design and other resources immediately available to us.

In this light I want to inform you of the initiation of a two-year program to expand our membership and enlist your aid as individuals to assist the chapter in meeting this goal of a minimum 16% increase in total members by the end of 1983. A formal committee is in the process of being formed under the joint direction of myself and Ted Kurz, FAIA, as co-chairman. We will be calling on some of you to participate directly. Any volunteers would certainly be welcome!

One can hardly imagine a less auspicious time for the initiation of such a program, considering the great difficulties of the architectural profession and the general economy of Michigan. Nevertheless, NOW is the time, and with our eye on that long-term goal of expansion of the benefits of the American Institute of Architects and in development of a stronger more representative chapter, I am confident that in spite of the difficulties that we will be successful.

The chapter looks forward to your help.

There's a lot worth saving in this country.

Today more Americans who value the best of yesterday are working to extend the life of a special legacy.

Saving and using old buildings, warehouses, depots, ships, urban waterfront areas, and even neighborhoods makes good sense. Preservation saves valuable energy and materials. We can also appreciate the artistry of these quality structures.

Energy Management Ideas from Detroit Edison

Heat pump space conditioning can help lower the cost of doing business.

Whether you're an architect/designer or a contractor, you can help your clients lower their cost of doing business by specifying a heat pump space-heating system. You can connect a heat pump to most electric, gas, oil or L.P. forced-air heating systems with no, or minimal, modification.

A heat pump lowers costs because it moves the natural heat, that's always present in the outside air, inside to heat any kind of building. The heating system only has to go to work when the outside temperature is below freezing.

A Detroit Edison Specialist can give you straight answers on heat pump savings and recommend the kind of heat pump that will do the best job for any business. He can also recommend economical and efficient methods to improve interior and security lighting, assist you in selecting waste heat recovery equipment and advise you on maintenance schedules to keep all machinery operating more efficiently.

Whatever your business, energy management is a lot simpler when you can depend on a reliable power source. And you can in Southeastern Michigan because Detroit Edison provides this area with electricity that's more than 90 percent generated from abundant coal.

So take advantage of Detroit Edison's vast energy experience and set up an appointment with one of our Specialists soon. Call (313) 237-9228 or write Energy Management, Detroit Edison, 348 WCB, 2000 Second Avenue, Detroit, Michigan 48226.
