SCHOOL ARCHITECTS - TAKE NOTE!

Mike Marshburn, AIA
Vice President, MSA

A few months ago an article appeared in the Michigan School Business Officials (MSBO) Newsletter to its members, alluding to the fact that the organization would provide feasibility studies for school districts planning changes or expansions to its facilities. This article was sent to the MSA with a request that we investigate to see if this service was being performed by registered architects and engineers and not supplanting our members' services. On behalf of those concerns, I offered to follow up with the MSBO and the particulars of that offer. My inquiry was cordially received by members of that organization, and my offer to supply them with a list of our members providing such services was openly welcomed.

MSBO lists among their associate members many of our State architectural firms. These associate members are benefiting from referrals from MSBO for the school districts answering the invitation to this pilot program. MSBO maintains a list of architects and engineers interested in providing these feasibility studies, strictly as a service to their members and it is the members' responsibility to pay for the services provided by those firms.

If you are interested in being included in this program, MSBO would be happy to hear from you; particularly if you are interested in becoming an associate member of that organization. Please contact:

FACTS FROM THE AIA

No one was surprised when we reported that 141 of the 160 architecture, A/E, and E/A firms included in Building Design & Construction magazine's "Top 300 Design Firms" are owned by AIA members. If it is a rather pleasant surprise, however, to discover that 65 of the "100 Interior Design Giants of 1990" listed in Interior Design magazine's January issue are AIA member-owned firms.

The value of products procured for, and services provided to clients by these 100 firms amounted to over $11.3 billion last year, and AIA member-owned firms were responsible for two-thirds of that amount. AIA member-owned firms also accounted for nearly 70% of the more than $600 million in direct billings in 1989.

The magazine reports that, on average, interior design projects make up 65% of the workload in the top 100 firms, followed by architecture with 21%, and engineering with 7%. Comparing firms' interior design fees to total billings, however, shows that interior billings make up only 28% of the revenues in AIA member-owned firms.

(Firms responding to the 1989 Firm Survey reported earning an average of 11% of their revenues from interior design projects.)

As would be expected, the "giants" tend to be large firms with staffs averaging 65 people. Interior design professionals and their support staff account for about 29% of the firms' employees.

MICHIGAN SOCIETY OF ARCHITECTS CONVENTION

October 18 & 19, 1990

The Radisson Hotel Pontchartrain
and Cobo Hall - Detroit, Michigan

ARCHIMATION UPDATE

On Tuesday March 20, 1990, the DC/AIA hosted one of its most successful events in recent years. The 125 people who attended the event enjoyed a computer product show, a video presentation showcasing the many possibilities for computer graphic animation, and a lecture by professor Skip Van Wyk of Ohio State University. Professor Van Wyk described the history of computer as they apply to architecture, and explained the process of creating computer animation.

Attendees learned that the applications for computer animation are far and wide. One of the greatest discoveries for many people was the fact that any firm can create computer animation with the right computer system and the correct software. No one will be limited by the size of their company. In the future we may be presenting our clients with an animated video tape that will walk them through their building. This will allow clients to have a much greater understanding about the design and construction of their buildings.

Boston Society of Architects
RE: Solution to the A201 Dilemma

If the MSA members are like Boston, the publication of the 1987 revision of A201, that most critical of AIA Documents, has proved often to be problematical.

While A201 remains a terrific document, I have learned over the past two years from my members that it needs to be significantly modified every time it is used on a new job by an architect. As a result, we felt a need to do something in our chapter to help our members cope with those modifications and to make A201 as generally useful as it should be.

We found the solution, which was to commission one of the country's leading construction law firms to prepare an annotated model for modifying A201. This annotation is 30-page, detailed, paragraph-by-paragraph guide to help architects modify the 1987 edition of A201. This is an important issue nationally and it occurred to me that you may want to make this document available to your members and, indeed, to anyone else who busy A201 (or any AIA Documents) from you chapter.

Our guide is called "A Model for Supplementary Conditions to AIA Document A201, General Conditions of the Contract for Construction." It is available to your member from the BSA for $40.

Please contact the Boston Society of Architects for more information.

MSA'S FIRST DESIGN RETREAT "IDEAS OF ARCHITECTURE"

The Michigan Society of Architects will hold its first Design Retreat on Saturday, September 15th, 1990.

The retreat is intended as a quiet time away from the rigors of practice, a time to share the "IDEAS OF ARCHITECTURE", and focus on design, the one element that differentiates us from our allied professions and makes us architects.

This program will bring together colleagues from across the state for discussion, for friendship, and for some fun.

In order to allow an openness to the dialogue of IDEAS, the committee has set the site for the retreat in the tranquil, natural environment at Camp Hayo-Went-Ha on Torch Lake. Blue jeans only.

Designers will present projects of quality, later to be discussed in a number of settings in keeping with the casual format.

CALL FOR PRESENTERS

The committee is looking for 16 presenters, each to present one built project with emphasis on the DESIGN IDEA developed from a variety of architects with varying practices, both in size and type of work. Presenters will be asked to give concise 10 minute presentations with slides with focus on how the IDEA was generated, how the IDEA was developed, and how the completed building expresses the original design intent.

The presenters, young and old, will be the designers who generated the IDEA, rather than the firm's chairman of the board or firm's best presenter.

The committee will provide electricity, slide projectors and screens for the presenters.

To be considered as a presenter, please provide the committee the following information to the MSA offices no later than June 28, 1990. The committee will act as a design jury to review entrees and select the 16 presenters. The committee will select projects from across the state, from a diversity of firm sizes, looking for projects of design excellence that emphasize IDEA.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR PRESENTERS

1. Name of presenter, title, address, city, zip code, telephone; AIA member, Associate member, or Professional Affiliate (circle member type). Include brief one page resume.
2. Presenters firm name, firm size, address, city, zip code, telephone number, firm history.
3. Project name and one page project description.
4. Six (6) non-returnable duplicate slides of the project clearly identified with presenter's name.

MSA greatly appreciates each presenter's agreement to register for and attend the complete design retreat.

WHY A DESIGN RETREAT ?

"Ideas of Architecture" is a retreat to create a gathering of young and old practitioners in a natural setting to concentrate on design and encourage fellowship among ourselves.

It's to be basic, to be natural, and fun. At $85 its an inexpensive trip offering you five meals, one architect designed T-Shirt, two overnights in a bunk bed with your favorite bedding, yours. Travel, bunk, eat, shower with your friends. We have water, sand, trees, grass and no bugs.

Watch 16 presentations of good work by less known young and old designers, 4 presentations at a time with 64 presentations in all. Architects do good work, and this is your chance to see it, at one sitting.

Michigan is rich with talented people working hard at being good and producing exciting work. This is their show. We want you to be there, share in every aspect of good friendship.

Richard E. Fry, AIA, Chair & MSA President
