President's Letter

Dear Members:

It is my pleasure this issue to give you a report of the American Institute of Architect's Grassroots Meeting, January 14-16, 1971, Royal Orleans Hotel, New Orleans, La.

I arrived at the Royal Orleans shortly before noon, checked in and reported to a private room for the Central States Council meeting. Our Council meeting was presided over by our Regional Director of the Central States Region, which is made up of Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Nebraska and Iowa, Mr. Floyd O. Wolfenbarger. Two top Institute representatives, Mr. Robert Hastings, FAIA, Institute President, and Mr. William Slayton, Executive Vice President, met with the Central States Group.

Among those present in the Central States group from Missouri were: Springfield Chapter, Jim Matthews, President; Vern Hillman and myself; Kansas City Chapter, Dwight Horner, President, George Lund, President-elect, John Eggen, Secretary, and Bill Linscott, Past President; St. Louis Chapter, Ted Hoener, President, and Chester Roemer, President-elect; Mid-Mo. Chapter, Seth Evans, President.

Two primary concerns of the Institute for the coming year are: 1. the total environment including our ecological problems and 2. the concern for the people as reflected in the Human Resources Council.

The Grassroots meeting has been conducted for some four years at three locations for the benefit of the newly elected component officers. This year Grassroots were held in New Orleans, Washington, D. C. and Salt Lake City.

One of the primary purposes of the Grassroots meeting was referred to as input from the components to the national officers, committee chairmen and staff.

The American Institute of Architects Board of Directors at their meeting of December 5, 1970, adopted a report of the AIA Planning Committee for 1971. Delegates to the Grassroots were asked to bring their copy of the Planning Report but in case they didn't, the Octagon had copies available which were given out. This report was comprised of some 141 pages with the following basic sections: 1. Basic Institute Operations, 2. Recommended Institute Programs for 1971, 3. Committees and Task Forces for 1971 and 4. Action Requested.

Our new Institute President is making an effort to meet with the officers of each region on a face-to-face basis and our Central States had been scheduled for a meeting in Omaha which was later changed to the afternoon before the Grassroots in New Orleans. Everyone present had an opportunity to meet on a face-to-face basis and ask questions and make comments or suggestions. Friday before the Grassroots session started, our Central States Council had a breakfast meeting reporting on the activity of the various Chapters in our Region.

The Grassroots delegates were divided into smaller groups and a format very similar to that used last year at our Governor's Conference here in Missouri was used. Reports were made by national officers and comments, questions and discussion came from the members of the group.

Mr. Max O. Urbahn, FAIA, 1st Vice President, reported on the progress of the new Institute Headquarters building in Washington, D. C. which is expected to get underway within the next few weeks. Mr. Urbahn commented on the fact that the National convention will be in June this year in Detroit. The theme of the convention is the "Hard Decisions."

The next report was given by Robert J. Nash, Vice President of the Institute. Mr. Nash is the first black man to be elected to the Institute's Board. His first comment was that this very day, January 15, was the birth date of Martin Luther King. He is the Board member in charge of the

The Editor Observes:

A column such as this affords one a rare opportunity to expound on those topics of personal interest, as they relate to the organization, and advance personal theories and philosophies considered beneficial to the members.

The most difficult part of this pleasant task, however, is to maintain objectivity, a problem existing sometimes in what might be termed normal, everyday work routine.

So, before writing this I stole a few minutes from my work and, over a glass of Weston's best soothing syrup, with olive, leaned back to view MCA in as objective a perspective as possible.

What is MCA's greatest need? That was the real question. The real answer came before the olive drifted to rest upon an ice cube perch. Member participation! That was the very real, very acute need.

And, where was member participation most needed? Another glass of medicine was hardly downed before the answer came. At the annual meeting, of course!

The one feature that distinguished MCA from other professional organizations was the convention attendance, where the voices of the members should be heard echoing against the acoustical tile of the meeting room and competing with the laughter of others during the recreation and fun functions.

Where else is MCA to obtain the vitality and enervating qualities it must have? How is MCA to thrust forward to successful completion the many, many needed projects? Who is to carry, with intelligence and stamina, the MCA banner?

The answer to these questions is one word: members.

Therefore, may I close by saying that you should be at the annual meeting this year. After all, without each of you MCA would have no members, no vigor, no fibre, no soul.

May 7-8

May 7-8, 1971 is the date! Kimberling City, Table Rock Lake is the place! The event - ARCHITECT'S DAY, 1971! After one full year as an official component of the American Institute of Architects, the Missouri Council of Architects will hold its one official meeting of the year. The Springfield Chapter is in charge of all arrangements for this year's event.

This is the one meeting where Missouri's architects get together for their own meeting, and the MCA Board is urging all architects to attend. A review of the first-year operations of the Missouri Council of Architects is the time to add your help and ideas for future planning and projects of the organization. By-laws will be reviewed (elsewhere in this issue of the Missouri Architect is the official printing of the changes to be voted on), officers elected and other programs discussed.

The meetings have been scheduled to allow ample time for architects to enjoy this fast growing lake recreational playground and it is one of the most beautiful, not only in Missouri, but in the nation!

May is the perfect time to enjoy the beauty of the budding Ozarks.

On the following page is your advanced registration form. The MCA Board has budgeted no funds for Architect's Day and the Chapter hosting Architect's Day is now charged with the responsibility of making it self-sustaining. Because of this new procedure members must:

Mail advance registration in three weeks before the May 7 date for guaranteed accommodations.

Because of the limited budget this will be the only mailer or information sent to the membership. Please tear off and mail in at once.

You will note on the program - shown on the advance registration sheet - that there will be two free cocktail parties. These parties will be hosted by Acme Brick and Producers' Council on Friday night and Carthage Marble on Saturday night. Another added plus is a moonlight cruise on Table Rock Lake. Saturday night's festivities include a show and dance featuring the Dallas Bartley Combo.

... President Hawkins Reports On AIA Grassroots Meetings

In his President's letter in this issue of the Missouri Architect Prexy Hawkins gives MCA members a detailed report on this year's Grassroots meeting held January 14-16 in New Orleans.

The AIA meeting is scheduled each year following the election of new officers of the components, and gives component officers the opportunity for face-to-face communications with national officers to provide input from local components concerning programs, goals and priorities for the upcoming year.

Attending the meeting with Hawkins were Springfield AIA President Jim Matthews and Vern Hillman. Hawkins and Matthews were interviewed upon their return by the Springfield Leader and Press for a feature on the architect's role in environmental clean-up. The feature entitled "Blueprint for Better Living" focused on the need for changed attitudes about the environment. Matthews pointed out that the architect has the ability to create our physical environment . . . and that architects have a tremendous challenge in the future with rebuilding that will be required in the next 30 years. Hawkins stressed that while in the past we were concerned with the individual building, we are now concerned with our entire surroundings.

In the article, the designers also talked about developing more uniform zoning and building codes and up-dating them, and the national AIA's role in persuading the federal government to update federal codes.

Hawkins and Matthews related that the Springfield Chapter is looking at the Community Development Center program for answers to local problems. The Centers, it was pointed out, are being established in larger cities to provide services to people who have greater problems than just neighborhood clean-up that citizens initiate—with landscaping and building advice.

"We're hopeful that something similar to the CDCs will be set up locally, and we're working on the structure now," Matthews said. "As we're planning it, each AIA member office in Springfield will contribute, and we hope to get government aid, too," he said.

The two architects announced that a group of films dealing with the architect's view of problems in America and their possible solutions, films formerly used for national advertising, was available for use by Springfield groups. Later, it was stated, the Springfield Chapter hoped to make the films into a type of traveling exhibit.

"The client, financier and developer must be taught about preservation of the environment now and the man-made environment of the future," Matthews said.

"We have to re-orient humans," Hawkins said.

The feature in the Springfield newspaper significantly illuminated the changing role of the architect in a rapidly changing world.

Mid-Mo Chapter Receives AIA Charter

At a January 22nd meeting in Jefferson City, the Mid-Missouri Chapter of the American Institute of Architects breathed its first official breath.

Floyd O. Wolfenbarger, FAIA, Director of the Central States Region of AIA, made the charter presentation to the Chapter President, Seth Evans, whose efforts had spearheaded formation of the component.

The Chapter was the result of months of work, initiated by the Missouri Council of Architects Board and the appointment of Evans as Chairman of the project to explore the possibilities of creating a Chapter in the central Missouri area. A number of architects had long expressed a desire for the formation of a Chapter more accessible than the distant Kansas City, St. Louis and Springfield Chapters. All three Chapters had endorsed the project to form a new Chapter.

In his charter presentation, Wolfenbarger stated he had "enthusiastically endorsed and supported the establishment of a Mid-Missouri Chapter. Thus, it is a genuine pleasure as well as an honor for me to be here and present, in behalf of The American Institute of Architects this charter for the newest Chapter in the Institute.

" . . . Congratulations to you as a Chapter, and in particular to those who motivated this action, and to those who have become charter members. Your Chapter Executive Committee has originated an action which I believe to be excellent and commendable; that of preparing a handsome certificate (See Cover) for each charter member which designates his being a charter member.

" . . . Within the structure of the Institute the Chapter has a key role in the accomplishments and the success of AIA objectives. The Institute shall function in local areas or on a state-wide basis through its Chapters . . . "

At the meeting, the following officers were elected: Seth Evans, Jefferson City, President; James T. Darrough, Columbia, Vice President; C. Wynn Brady, Columbia, Secretary; and J. Kay Cleavinger, Moberly, Treasurer. Elected Directors were Burl Sammons, Sedalia; Dale Watson, Linn Creek; and John I. Paulus, Jr., Jefferson City.

Other charter members of the new Chapter are Roy J. Pallardy and Arthur Jablonsky, both of Jefferson City; R. C. Dragoo, John A. Cooper, William J. Cragin and Dave P. Clark, all of Columbia; and Donald D. Buller of Sedalia.

Members of the Missouri Council of Architects Board of Directors were present at the historical meeting as were Hal W. Hawkins, President of MCA; Dwight Horner, President of the Kansas City Chapter; Ted Hoener, President of the St. Louis Chapter; and James Matthews, President of the Springfield Chapter.

MCA Board Invited to Mid Mo Launching

The MISSOURI ARCHITECT is again indebted to President Hal Hawkins for providing photographs of the memorable first official meeting of the Mid-Missouri Chapter, where members of the MCA Board and the Presidents of the Kansas City, St. Louis and Springfield Chapters participated in the charter presentation.

St. Louis Chapter Produces Document of Month

A Speaker's Bureau Brochure produced by the St. Louis Chapter, AIA, was selected by the American Institute of Architects as "Document of the Month" for February.

The brochure, strikingly designed in red, blue and black, was created to stimulate greater public interest and understanding of architecture and publicize informative programs on varied subjects.

The brochure takes advantage of the impact of reversed copy against a generous black background and lists topics of major import to both the profession and the public.

Topics on which films are available, to be shown by an architect, include highway construction, housing developments, and the effect of outdoor signs.

Programs also are available on architectural practice, St. Louis architectural landmarks, special building types, and foreign travel and architecture.

Human Resources Council. He also heads a task force on Professional Responsibility to Society, which involves such things as community design centers, educational aid to minority groups and aid in attaining accreditation of predominantly black schools of architecture in the country.

Next report was given by Mr. George White, Vice President of the Institute's Task Force on Structures. The structures of the Institute have been changed some six times in the last 25 years. The Task Force has as two basic goals, (1) to get the word to the policy making level on needs of the membership and (2) more efficient organization, and he commented on the fact that in these times "status quo" means falling behind.

The next session was held with Scott Ferebee, FAIA, Chairman of the Commission on Professional Practice, Mr. M. Elliott Carroll, FAIA, Deputy Executive Vice President of the Institute, and Mr. Joseph T. Siff, President of the Architect's Student Chapter of the United States having been recently elected at their meeting in Berkeley. Mr. Siff is an architectural student at Rice in Houston.

The Institute has been quite active in revising and updating contract documents for use in the building industry. Also, computerized specifications are now available for members known as MasterSpec.

The next workshop was on government relations which was conducted by Mr. William Marshall Jr., Chairman Government Affairs Steering Committee. The efforts of this group have been primarily in the field of architectural and engineering contracts with the different government bodies and legislation pertaining thereto. The Institute is establishing a new department which will be concerned with compiling legislation of the different states pertaining to the construction industry for aid in those states that do not have certain laws. Missouri, for example, does not have a Statute of Limitations on the design of buildings. Aid will be given on how to get important legislation passed in other locations.

The next workshop was conducted by Daniel Boone, FAIA, Chairman of Public Affairs Committee. He reported that certain endeavors of the Institute under Bailey Ryan, his predecessor, have been very successful, such as spot television advertising and some of the films made by the Institute; and several of the films which the Springfield Chapter own won national awards. "A Child Went Forth" won top awards. The Public Relations theme for the coming year will stress the following: (1) "Good Design is Essential for Preservation of the Environment," (2) The Public Relations kit is to be updated, and (3) A survey of the components is to be made on what they are doing in the field of public relations and what aid they want from the National AIA.

Up to this point the national advertising has been on a professional basis which primarily points out that architects are concerned about the conditions of our cities in the state of environmental pollution. This year more emphasis will be laid on the above that, "Good Design is Essential to Preserve the Environment" and orient our communities more toward the individual rather than being the victims of our technology.

The Grassroots meeting was well attended and considered very beneficial by those present.

Respectfully submitted,
Hal Hawkins, AIA
President, Missouri Council of Architects

Nixon Names AIA Officer Architect of the Capitol

George M. White, AIA, of Cleveland, a Vice President of The American Institute of Architects, was named Architect of the Capitol by President Nixon on January 27th.

An attorney and engineer, as well as a registered architect, White is only the ninth man and fifth professional architect to be appointed to the post. He succeeds J. George Stewart, who died on May 24, 1970. One architect who held the position previously was the late Thomas Ustick Walter, who was the second President of AIA, the national professional society of architects.

White, 50, heads the architectural firm bearing his name in Cleveland, and also is president of a marine hardware company. The son of an architect, he holds M.S. and B.S. degrees from Massachusetts Institute of Technology, an M.B.A. from Harvard University, and an LL.B. from Case-Western Reserve University. He formerly taught physics and architecture at the latter.

Long active in AIA affairs, White was elected to a second consecutive term of Vice President in 1970. He served as chairman of the Institute's Documents Review Committee in 1969, and chairman of the Insurance Committee the two previous years.

Commenting on White's appointment, AIA president Robert F. Hastings, FAIA, of Detroit, said, "The American Institute of Architects commends President Nixon's selection of George M. White to fill the important post of Architect of the Capitol. An eminently qualified architect, attorney, and engineer, Mr. White will bring to the position at the Capitol not only his unique experience in several professions, but also his extensive knowledge of, and respect for, the best in architectural design and tradition."

Two Killed in Plane Crash

E. E. (Gene) Butler, a Springfield architect, and his administrative assistant, Larry Keith, were killed January 11 in a plane crash about 11 miles northwest of Houston, Mo.

The crash occurred a short time after Butler and Sexton took off at 9:30 p.m. from the Houston airport in Butler's 4-place Mooney Executive plane.

Butler was founder and president of Butler and Associates, a Springfield architectural, engineering and planning firm. He is survived by his wife, seven children, his parents and three brothers. Sexton is survived by his wife, a daughter, his parents, two brothers and a sister.

Educational Facility Planning Trends Viewed

A quiet revolution in the planning, design and financing of educational facilities may bring substantial changes to the nation's schools in the 1970s.

This is the conclusion offered by experts preparing eight regional workshops for this spring where the trends will be examined by some 1,400 architects, school officials, and civic leaders.

The educational facilities workshops are sponsored by the U.S. Office of Education, The American Association of School Administrators, The American Institute of Architects, the Council of Educational Facility Planners, and Educational Facilities Laboratories, Inc., a Ford Foundation subsidiary.

They will be held in Washington, D.C., East Lansing, Mich., Des Moines, Tacoma, Tempe, Ariz., New Orleans, Knoxville, Tenn., and Albany, N.Y.

"Schools are for people rather than just for children," said Harold B. Gores, president of EFL, in a report filmed for the workshops. "The walls are coming down, inside between the classrooms and outside to the community," he added. In the past 10 years, with systems-building, team-teaching, and central libraries or learning resource units, spaces inside school buildings have become highly flexible, he noted. "Now, in the next 10 years, schools will go to the community itself."

Dana S. Whitmer, Pontiac, Mich., School Superintendent, speaking for AASA, said that a school to open next fall in his community points up the trends. Located in the center of the city, it will draw rich and poor, black and white students to a $5.5 million plant which shares its gymnasium and auditorium with health clinics, housing and job counseling facilities, branch libraries, adult education areas, meeting rooms, and even a public restaurant. A walkway - called a "roof street" - on top of the elementary school carries citizens from a housing neighborhood through the services area to city hall. "Schools like this (called the Human Resources Center) will become a part of the whole galaxy of services," he explained.

"Joint occupancy and funding" may be an answer to the crisis in school plant financing, U.S. Commissioner of Education Sidney P. Marland will tell the regional planning sessions. Rejection of bond issues by citizens hostile to property tax increases has helped create a backlog of 750,000 classrooms in the U.S., Marland said. The property tax cannot carry the magnitude of necessary school construction, he added.

Schools may be built in office buildings, as part of housing developments, or even with commercial space "where they won't remove taxable property" or where income is possible to help pay for the schools, suggested Marland. He noted that "better use of plants - more efficiency -" also could ease the financial crisis. European schools are pointing the way to full-day and year-round use of educational plants, he said. He predicted that the federal government will increase aid for school construction.

The U.S., which is already spending an estimated $8 billion a year for all kinds of educational facilities, may in the 1970s see:

- Schools designed so that they may be changed as functions and methods of instruction are recast, according to Robert F. Hastings, FAIA, of Detroit, President of The American Institute of Architects. This has been done to some extent with factories and could happen with schools, he added.

- "Air conditioning of new schools is now routine; the battle of carpeting is over;" now change will come in furniture and materials inside schools. Gores predicted wide use of such synthetics as plastic ice for skating rinks and "pneumatic furniture" that could withstand hard use and be cast into all kinds of new shapes. "We've frozen furniture" into old forms and need to change it for new uses and variety, added Hastings.

- "Building systems will prosper," aided by HUD's Operation Breakthrough, and giant aerospace companies will see potential for profit in the work, said Gores.

- "Individualized instruction" is now the major thrust of school planning and this means variety and adaptability in new buildings, said Donald J. Leu, Dean of Education at San Jose State College in California, speaking for CEFP.

- Facing the threat of vandalism, crime, and disturbances, school planners must gamble on winning support from students and the neighborhoods, said Gores. "We must design for warmth as well as enlightenment. Help us defrost these chilling places."

Program information and registration for all the workshops is available from CEFP, 29 Woodruff Ave., Columbus, Ohio 43210.

HAYDITE

"THE ORIGINAL LIGHTWEIGHT AGGREGATE"

LIGHTWEIGHT—approximately $\frac{1}{3}$ lighter than ordinary blocks made with sand and rock. Reduces deadload without sacrificing strength or other desirable qualities.

STRENGTH—in excess of Federal and ASTM specifications and local building code requirements.

FIRE RESISTANCE—Underwriters Laboratories Standards for Safety UL 618, August 1958, tests rate 8" Haydite block, with a $1\frac{1}{4}$ " face shell, at 2 hours. A $1\frac{3}{4}$ " face shell is rated at 4 hours.

UNIFORMITY—in size, texture and color for accuracy and beauty.

ACOUSTICS—are improved by the cellular structure of the aggregate and the texture of the block. Approximate noise reduction coefficient of a medium textured, unpainted Haydite block is 0.45.

THERMAL INSULATION—the U factor (average) on 8" Haydite blocks is 0.32 and on 12", 0.29.

DURABLE—exceeds Federal and ASTM specifications for hollow, load-bearing masonry, above and below grade. Laboratory tests show 100 cycles of freezing and thawing without visible damage or loss of weight.

NON-STAINING & NON-CORROSIVE—the chemically inert composition of Haydite eliminates discoloration of the block, or to paint or plaster applied to the block.

ATTRACTIVE—a pleasing texture and natural gray color suitable for many applications without further treatment.

...the difference in concrete blocks starts with the aggregate
