his annual "Handbook" issue of Wisconsin Architect magazine plays a vital role in the fair selection of architects in Wisconsin. When people contact AIA Wisconsin looking for an architect, they are given this issue with its directories of AIA Wisconsin members and member-owned firms, information on selecting and working with an architect and a list of AIA contract documents.

Since 1986, AIA Wisconsin also has offered to assist public owners establish a Qualifications-Based Selection (QBS) process. The QBS Wisconsin program, co-sponsored by the American Council of Engineering Companies (ACEC) of Wisconsin, is a public service designed to help potential clients find the most qualified architect or engineer for their projects. QBS benefits facility owners by establishing an objective, fair and competitive selection process based on qualifications and competence.

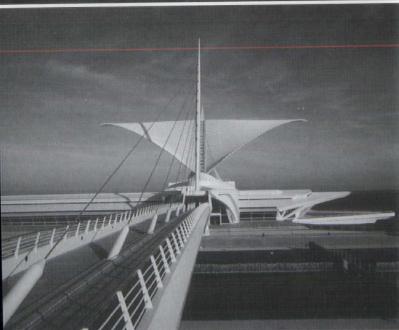

Earlier this year, AIA and ACEC representatives developed a new user-friendly "Wisconsin QBS Manual" that provides a step-by-step guide for implementing a qualifications-based selection process. This manual is available online at the AIA Wisconsin (www.aiaw.org) and QBS Wisconsin (www.qbswi.org) websites. With the help of a national QBS facilitator grant, we recently provided information on the QBS Wisconsin program to over 1,500 municipal and county officials throughout the state.

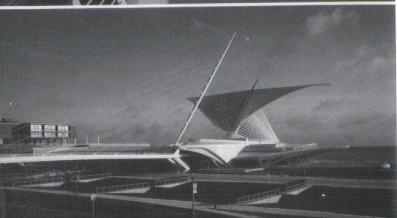

This summer, AIA Wisconsin assisted a city parks and recreation director implement QBS to select an architect for the restoration of an historic building for a community center. Here's what he had to say about the QBS Wisconsin program: "The whole QBS process was very helpful. My only regret is that I wish we would have adopted it sooner. We definitely will use the process again."

The innovative QBS Wisconsin program has been emulated by AIA Chapters across the country. Experience has demonstrated that QBS is an efficient and cost effective selection process that benefits both the public facility owner and the profession. On behalf of the AIA Wisconsin QBS Committee, I encourage you to visit www.qbswi.org for additional information on this valuable program.

Project: Milwaukee Art Museum

Architect: Calatrava Valls & Kahler Slater

Contractor: C.G. Schmidt

The Milwaukee Art Museum Board of Trustees desired a functional addition that not only satisfied the existing museum's unresolved needs, but also made a bold statement on the lakefront. Initially, the goals were to expand the public space for receptions and events, protect the art collection, incorporate a state-of-the-art auditorium and create a recognizable front entry. During the conceptual design phase, the scope increased in size. In the end, the 140,000 square foot addition encompassed public space, a reception hall, gift shop, restaurant, auditorium, changing exhibition gallery, pedestrian bridge and under-ground parking.

The design team utilized contrasting forms and materials in order to remain sensitive in addressing the need to balance the art museum's identity in relation to the existing 1957 Eeto Saarinen designed War Memorial Center that hovers above the 1975 Milwaukee Art Museum addition. The site design is predicated upon human scale while preserving lake views.

The focus of the addition is the 90-foot tall glass reception hall capped with a movable sunscreen. This sunscreen, or brise soleil, is actuated with a carefully designed mechanical and electrical system. High-performance glazing and the sunscreen addition allow the transparent design to meet strict energy code requirements.

To the north and south of the reception hall are vaulted wing forms that are kept low in order to preserve city views to Lake Michigan. The forms intersect and appear to penetrate through the simple geometric concrete base of the existing structure. This design concept also is expressed internally in the east galleria that connects the new addition to the existing facility. On the west, a new entry to the War Memorial links the existing building to the west galleria of the new addition.

To the west, a cable-stayed pedestrian bridge and a formal park serve as an extension of the city's orthogonal street pattern.

While totally exposing the project's structural elements, the distinctive skeletal forms enhance and define the character of the interior. These forms are carefully orchestrated with tapering arched elements and pin connections rather than constant sized sections.

The materials used in the design are simple and consistent. Glass and concrete capped with a metal roof comprise the exterior, while concrete; glass and metal are used in the interior. Carrera marble and bleached maple wood floors are also used to enhance the interior.

OPPORTUNITIES

More often than not, the old clichés have a strong ring of truth. In this case, it seems like the adage of "when it rains it pours" certainly feels true. We are definitely in a cycle of great uncertainty over personal finances and business profitability, state budget issues, national tragedies and global political events. It's natural to focus on these events to the extent they can overshadow the opportunities that also exist within them.

As visionary designers, natural leaders and excellent facilitators, we can be a voice of clarity in the discussions surrounding these issues and, as such, become an integral part of the solutions. Historically, we often have stood back while others frame the debate and decide the answers. We then present solutions that simply react to a path already defined.

By speaking with one voice, we have the chance to influence many of the issues facing us today. We have the opportunity to redefine the concept of "design" in a holistic way, so our clients understand the value that "design" can truly bring in solving more than just facility needs. We have the ability to demonstrate to our clients that our leadership is extremely valuable on projects at a much earlier stage. And, we have the obligation to engage in our local communities and governments to facilitate debates, define needs and help craft solutions.

AIA WISCONSIN

AIA Wisconsin is our best opportunity to come together as one voice to help affect change. The AIA is an organization based on the volunteer service of its members. It's really the one "and only" place where we can come together as a group of professionals, with the potential to change the current paradigm.

In 2002, the Board of Directors took some initial steps to address these issues; and, in 2003, we are continuing the discussion to position ourselves for action. We will be inviting you to join us in these discussions and help build on the initiatives. The following are some of the successful initiatives that were started last year:

· At the Board level, we began the debate on how can we restructure AIA Wisconsin to both better serve our members and respond to our changing profession.

- With the leadership of Mike Eberle, AIA, and Paul Grzeszczak, AIA, the Young Architects Forum (YAF) has become a platform that gives the new generation entering the profession a much larger voice in AIA affairs.
- · Dan Roarty, AIA, revived the "AIA Report Card;" and, through an effective electronic survey format, we learned a great deal about what the membership would like to see us focus on in the near future.
- In August 2002, representatives of 15 allied design and construction industry organizations joined us at the annual strategic planning retreat to explore the opportunities and possibilities for greater collaboration.

In addition to these initiatives:

- The AIA Wisconsin Convention and Fall Workshop were each a tremendous success that provided valuable learning and networking opportunities for members.
- Wisconsin Architect magazine updated its look and format and, along with the AIA Wisconsin Website, continues to be an excellent way to reach out and connect members and allied professionals across the state and beyond.
- Our local AIA Chapters continue to provide informative programming for members to meet continuing education requirements.
- Finally, AIA Wisconsin continues to operate within a balanced budget with an outstanding and dedicated staff that works with volunteer leaders to coordinate effective professional development, public awareness and government affairs programs.

NEXT STEPS

This year, we continue to build on the work surrounding collaboration. AIA Wisconsin is compiling a contact list for design and construction industry organizations...or Group of Allied Professionals (GAP). This will allow the participating organizations to share information about upcoming meetings and other special events. GAP representatives met for a second time in November and will continue to do so during this year to discuss additional opportunities for collaboration.

Members of the Board of Directors continue the discussion about the structure of AIA Wisconsin, taking a close look at the present committee structure. We looking at all of the standing committees to determine which are truly bringing value to our membership. With the success of the electronic survey format, we will continue to utilize this tool as a way to access your thoughts and ideas and keep you engaged in the debate.

State and local AIA leaders remain committed to providing quality continuing education programs that are convenient and affordable. We also will be exploring new opportunities for increasing public awareness of architecture and how you and other AIA members make our communities more livable.

FINAL THOUGHTS

As I was preparing to write this last December, I read several of the messages prepared by previous AIA Wisconsin Presidents. I was particularly struck by one message that was written ten years ago, in 1993. This also was a time of change for our profession. The economy back then was forcing firms to layoff employees and uncertainty about the future was the order of the day. Very shortly after this, the economy entered one of its most robust periods of growth in our history; and we couldn't find enough people to do the work.

Architecture has always seemed to be a profession that reacts to both feast and famine. We have the opportunity to change this paradigm and create for our clients and ourselves a profession that brings value regardless of the economy or other outside influences. Speaking as one voice gives us the best chance to create this change.

Thank you for the honor to serve you this year. I look forward to a year filled with opportunities. Together, I know we can make a difference. Please do not hesitate to call me at work (920) 380-2124 or at home (920) 832-8262 regarding any of these issues. We have a lot of work to do; and, on behalf of my fellow Board members, I welcome your thoughts and expertise.

The following are remarks by Horst W. Lobe, AIA, in accepting the 2003 AIA Wisconsin Golden Award.

fter 30 years as staff architect for the UW-Madison, 21 years on Madison's Urban Design Commission and three years as president of Capital Community Citizens, did I make a difference?

The short answer: it's all how you look at it. The not so short answer took me a little longer. I also included laying bricks for 5 vears.

In Germany, at the end of WWII, I was 15 years old. There were hardly any schools open. There was an abundance of rubble and many potential careers involved in rebuilding the country. I chose to become a bricklaver apprentice with the hope of someday attending college and becoming an architect. At that time, it seemed like a dream. For three years as apprentice and two years as journeyman. I was part of the German economic miracle.

There were no 40-hour, five-day weeks. Unfortunately, there was not much equipment either. So, for many years the old Romans looked like excellent examples for materials and methods.

Did I make a difference? In a town of 6,000, 80% destroyed in the last months of the war, you bet. There are no plaques, but I do remember how hard we worked

As life became more normal, I attended the State Architectural School in Kassel, Hessen. I graduated in 1953 and spent a year in the United States as part of a Peace Corps-type program, the Brethren Volunteer Service. It was an amazing opportunity and led-after two years of practice in Germany—to a job offer from a firm in Des Moines. From 1957 to 1964, I worked for three firms and called Iowa my home. It was also the time to pass the registration exam, get the NCARB certificate and become a corporate member of the AlA. By the way, try establishing a NCARB file with most of the information needed from another country.

In 1965, when I accepted an offer from the UW-Madison Department of Planning and Construction, I substantially gave up my role as a designing architect. A conversation with a good friend and fellow architect helped me make up my mind. My friend Herb said one time, "We all would like to be little Mieses and Frank Lloyd Wrights, but very few really have the talent and the opportunity to have a design career. This profession needs many reliable architects in supervision, specifications, coordination and education. [In these roles,] there will always be a need."

Working as an architect and being the client was a new experience. You get to see your peers from new angles. It does have its rewards to interpret the faculty needs into a fullbuilding program and find that your bubble diagram survived as part of the floor plan. While all the buildings were university buildings, the range was substantial. It stretched from research and teaching labs to theaters, TV and radio facilities, libraries and animal holding buildings.

Madison has the well-earned reputation of having a high degree of citizen participation. I followed the call and joined Capital Community Citizens, the "orchids and onions people." Over the course of several years, I chaired their Orchids and Onions Committee and served as president of CCC for three years. A number of architects served on the board and as presidents over the years. It gave me great satisfaction to help identify local architects as recipients of the much cherished Orchids Certificate. Still today, I occasionally enter a building or a reception room where an Orchid Certificate is displayed and, somehow, I feel I made a difference. There is satisfaction in sharing architectural awareness with a group of lay persons who are dedicated in improving the built environment.

Through my CCC involvement, I was appointed as a member of the newly established Urban Design Commission. I served for 21 years, under four mayors, frequently as chair, and was recognized by the mayor and council with a special citation. I remember discussions with my peers in the 1950s in Iowa and the re-occurring topic of architectural design control and its appropriateness. Usually, I ended up on the losing side, the typical comment followed, "That's why we all came over here, to get away from controls." I remember a British architect's observation: "The US has the handsomest buildings and the ugliest cities." Why not accomplish success in both?

Looking back at more than 20 years on the city's Urban Design Commission, did I make a difference? At least the mayor and city council thought so.

And, how much difference have I made after 30 years on the UW-Madison campus? Not enough in some areas. In our profession, it is always more obvious where we have failed, than in others. There is not enough ivy in this world to cover some of our mistakes. Knowing the limitations of the position of the staff architect and the process, a lot is accomplished. As with other architects, you know all the good reasons why your job fell short of perfection.

Now I still have many more opportunities to be an architect . . . to a client, to my neighbors, to the AIA, the people at Hospice and the Fitchburg Center. At first, I thought I should not turn anyone down who is willing to admit the need for an architect.

Did I make a difference? Well, I am sill trying. And, so should you.

With over 1,400 members, AIA Wisconsin represents architects and allied professionals in private practice, businesses, industry, government and education.

The American Institute of Architects is the voice of the architecture profession dedicated to serving its members, advancing their value and improving the quality of the built environment. The AIA serves architects and their clients by promoting ethical, educational and practice standards for the profession and by advocating excellence in design.

AIA Wisconsin is composed of four local Chapters: Southeast, Southwest, Northeast and Northwest. Each AIA Wisconsin member also is a member of one of these local Chapters.

The accompanying 2003 AIA Wisconsin Membership Directory is divided into four sections corresponding to AIA Wisconsin membership categories as follows

AIA Architect Members: Registered architects who are Architect members of The American Institute of Architects (AIA). Within this membership category, Fellows of The American Institute of Architects are designated by FAIA.

Associate AIA Members: Associate AIA members include individuals without architectural registration from a U.S. licensing authority who either are eligible by education and experience and actively working towards licensure as an architect, employed under the supervision of an architect, have a professional degree in architecture, are university faculty involved in architectural research or teaching, or have an architectural license from outside the U.S.

Professional Affiliate Members: Individuals who are not architects, but who may be registered to practice their professions where such requirements exist. The category includes professional engineers, landscape architects, interior designers and other professionals whose work is related to architecture.

Student Affiliate Members: Undergraduate and graduate students attending architectural schools and technical colleges in Wisconsin.

The AIA Wisconsin Membership Directory includes the following information for each member: name, firm name, mailing address, daytime telephone number and local Chapter. The Directory is updated annually through a survey of all members.

ALA WISCONSIN DESIGN AWARDS 2003

Ala Wisconsin, the state society of The American Institute of Architects, has recognized ten building projects for excellence in architectural design as part of its 2003 Design Awards program.

The award-winning architecture represents artful and innovative design solutions for a diverse range of projects in Wisconsin and abroad. The common thread is that all of the projects are designed by architects who are members of AIA Wisconsin.

The annual Design Awards program represents the highest recognition given for excellence in architectural design by AIA Wisconsin. Honor Awards recognize overall design excellence. Merit Awards recognize excellence in particular aspects of architectural design. Projects also can be selected for Special Recognition.

The 2003 AIA Wisconsin Design Awards were presented to the architects, building owners and general contractors at a special awards ceremony in May at the Monona Terrace Community and Convention Center in Madison.

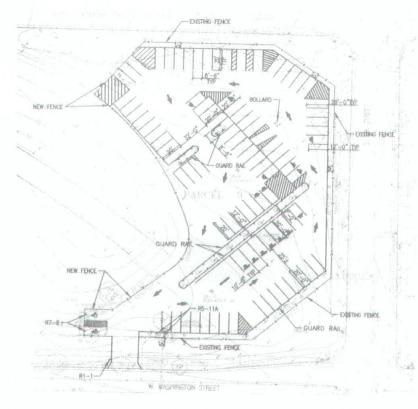

A distinguished jury of architects from outside of Wisconsin selected the award-winning projects. Members of the 2003 Design Awards jury were Kirk Blunck, FAIA,
Des Moines; Evett Ruffcorn, FAIA, Seattle; and Amy
Stein, AIA, Philadelphia.

The co-chairs of AIA Wisconsin's Design Awards program are Katherine Schnuck, AIA, Whitefish Bay, and Mark Kruser, AIA, Middleton.

United Community Center Parking Area 3

Photography: Cora Monis

Special Recognition

Architect: J&V Affiliated, LLC

Owner: United Community Center

Contractor: Payne & Dolan

Location: Milwaukee, Wisconsin

This project accomplishes a great deal more than fulfill a need for safe accessible parking. The design solution also provided a relevant way to welcome clients and the surrounding neighborhood through the use of colorful murals. Implementing the theme "The Wonders of Latin America," artists painted scenes indigenous to their own Latino countries using the 30-foot support columns as their canvas. Young apprentice students from city schools assisted in making the parking lot an "outdoor gallery" that is culturally linked to the community.

Jury Comment

"This project is recognized for the involvement of the neighborhood, the community and the artists. The architect, as the lynch pin, is being commended for community advocacy and leadership."

Banana Worker Housing

3m 2.75m

Photography: Harry Van Oudenallen, AIA

Merit Award

Architect: Arquitectura, Inc.

Owner:

Cooperative Housing Foundation

Contractor: Tela RR Co.

Location:

La Lima, Honduras

This unique project responds to the devastation caused by Hurricane Gilbert in the entire banana-growing region of Honduras. The architect was commissioned to design a pilot community for banana field and plant workers, including 6,000 housing units. This ongoing phased project lays out the schematic infrastructure of neighborhoods, streets, schools, civic and religious buildings and parks as envisioned for the worker housing settlement.

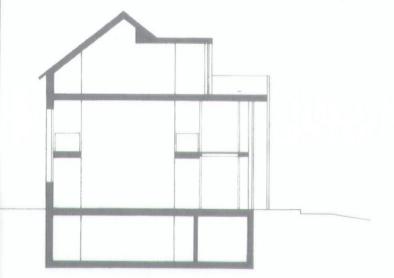

Jury Comment

"The architect really stepped up to create a very large vision for the community. If there is any doubt about the potential influence and power of Wisconsin architects, it has been put to rest with their ability to influence something on this scale in Honduras."

Fuerer Gastrau Architektur

Location:

Gossau, Switzerland

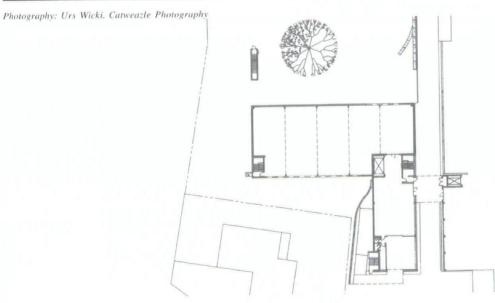

With this single-family residence, the architect succeeded in satisfying the client's request for a modern design while abiding by the local requirements for traditional-style exteriors. The design solution resulted in a composition involving the marriage of two forms. To the north, the home incorporates the local architectural guidelines, displaying a conservative face. To the south, the design expresses the desire for a modern open home that captures the view of the Alps. These two distinct elements, one opaque and the other translucent, create the final composition, which evolves into three distinct living levels. The home incorporates maintenance-free materials and sustainable design strategies.

Jury Comment

"The architect was able to respond to some very prescriptive requirements and design a more interesting, more creative modern home. It's a great juxtaposition between the traditional house forms and that of almost a civic-scale facade."

Max Mitschjeta AG — Metal Fabrication

Merit Award

Architect:

Fuerer Gastrau Architektur Gastrau Fuerer & Associates

Owner:

Max Mitschjeta AG

Contractor:

Fuerer Gastrau Architektur

Location:

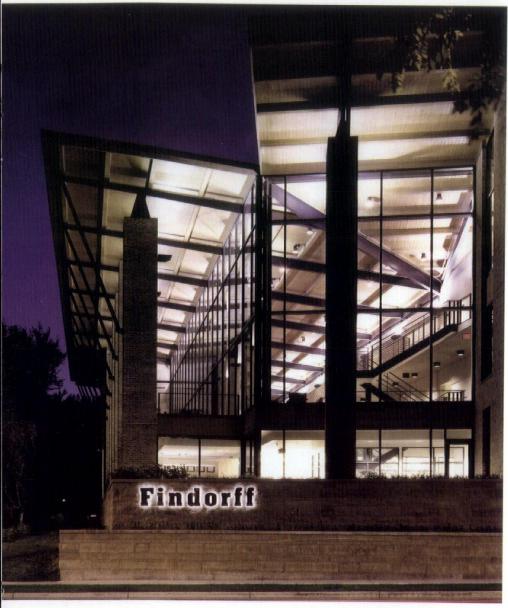

Gossau, Switzerland

This project demonstrates an atypical approach in the design of a light industrial facility. Sensitive to the surrounding neighborhood, the architect minimized the normally overbearing qualities that accompany industrial buildings by responding with simple clean details and the thoughtful use of materials. The design consists of a modern box clad with titanium panels, using forms and details that are non-abrasive in nature, respectful of its urban presence and reflective of its own industrial origins.

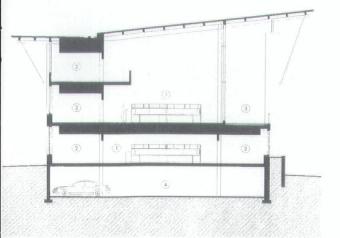

Jury Comment

"The strength of this project is that a light industrial building can be thought of as a finely crafted and detailed sculpture. It's just cool to look at. This building is architectural design at a different, higher level than might be normally expected for this type of project."

Located on the edge of downtown Madison, the new headquarters building rests on the same property where this construction company was originally founded over 110 years ago. The architect's design respects the contextual fabric of the historic industrial neighborhood; and the building showcases the profession it represents. The materiality and process of construction are on display throughout, with finely crafted and exposed concrete, steel, stone and birch woodwork. This modern building design is expressive of the work it performs.

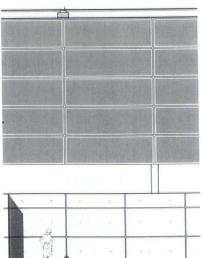

Jury Comment

"This building demonstrates what a very good contractor and a very good architect can do when they collaborate with one another. It becomes a lot easier for an architect or contractor to state that they can create fine buildings if their own workspace is finely executed."

This project resolved the issue of exposed infrastructure in an increasingly high pedestrian area. In order to conceal what was viewed as unsightly, the architect turned the massive utility substation into an object of beauty. The design solution involved the placement of a screen wall consisting of a perforated stainless steel panel system to shield the 34-foot tall substation grid. Serving as both screen and translucent veil, the panel system successfully conceals and beautifies the necessary utility infrastructure.

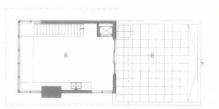

Jury Comment

"This is an innovative and creative project. The architect chose to elevate the project from what could have been a chain-link fence around electrical equipment into a screen wall that lights up at night and becomes an attractive symbol for the neighborhood and surrounding area."

This project involves the redevelopment of a former industrial corridor located along the Milwaukee River into a high quality residential and commercial neighborhood. The design solution created a striking new urban design product. Ranging in price from accessible to high end, the open loft-like qualities of each living unit complement the historical context of the site. This project has elevated a typically developer-driven market into an innovative urban designed neighborhood, with walkable connections to the city, the river and surrounding areas.

Jury Comment

"This project reflects a successful collaboration between architect and developer. They worked together on this design to really push the creative edge and to create housing that is fresh and new in an up and coming industrial edge area of the city."

This project involved the complete renovation of the 1853 Cathedral. Due to a fire, the church interiors were extensively rebuilt in 1943, changing the original floorplan. The design solution involved returning the altar to a place of prominence and proximity to parishioners in the main worship space, creating a place for music that accommodates a large choir and orchestra, as well as incorporating new lighting, sound and mechanical systems to support liturgical activities. The current transformation of the Cathedral marks the return to its rightful place as a "Jewel of the City."

Jury Comment

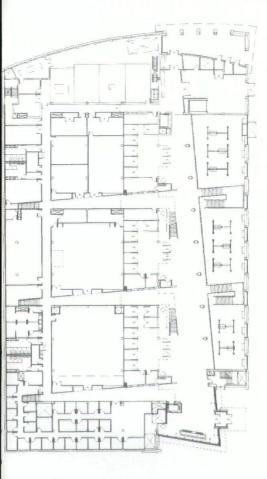

"While this project is an excellent example of preservation, the architect accomplished much more than preservation. They intervened and changed the function of the church by reconfiguring the interior and inserting new architecture at very precise moments, which really helps to engage the congregation with the altar."

This project creates a dynamic flexible environment that integrates the latest advances in research and education in a single new facility. The three-story building is organized as a series of interdisciplinary "centers" that focus on fields such as nanotechnology, plasma manufacturing and biomedical engineering. Designed to meet these needs, the spaces range from open workshop areas and adaptable meeting rooms to flexible lab spaces and class-10 clean rooms.

Jury Comment

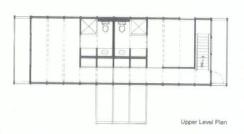

"For a university and institutional facility, this is a beautiful, well detailed, very consistent and muscular building that is very well designed. It has a great presence and is well integrated with the campus."

Location: Moose Lake, Wisconsin

The design solution for this project addressed a unique challenge to affordably build a one-of-a-kind custom weekend retreat on an unforgiving site without sacrificing design quality. Using the merits of pre-fabricated construction, the architect created a two-story lake home comprised of four modules that bring design sensitivity and flexibility to a typically uninspired market. The project features very specific views of the water and natural surroundings, a clerestory ribbon band of windows and an unencumbered living area emulating an urban loft in a rural setting.

Jury Comment

"If I had a vacation house, I'd want one like this. It takes the notion of a case study on housing from the 1950s and 1960s and really elevates that genre to an art form."

Wisconsin congratulates this year's award winners for their significant contributions to the profession and our built environment.

Advancing the profession of architecture requires an uncompromising commitment to excellence.

The execution of a well-designed building requires the collaboration, inspiration and enthusiastic support of the architect, owner and contractor.

Zepnick, Jayme M. —NE 924 Jaworski Rd Pulaski, WI 54162-9674 (920) 822-9240 Whether you are building your own home or planning a commercial facility, selecting the right architect is important to a successful project. The architect is the one professional who has the education, training, experience and vision to guide you through the entire design and construction process, from helping you define what you want to build to helping you get the most for your construction dollar. Working with other design and construction professionals, an architect can help you achieve a well-designed project that meets your needs and works within your budget and time frame.

Architects analyze your functional needs, long-term goals and budget. Using this analysis, the architect can design a building that meets your current and future needs. When designing a building, an architect seeks to balance several often conflicting elements, including function, aesthetics, economics and technology. And the architect must balance these elements within the context of building codes and zoning regulations.

WISE INVESTMENT

Architects are trained to solve problems in creative ways, translating your needs into square feet and three dimensional space. With their broad knowledge of design and construction, architects can show you alternatives and options you might never think of on your own.

Working with an architect is a wise investment because:

- A well-designed project can be built more efficiently and economically. Architects plan your project with you. As your ideas evolve, changes can be made on paper much less expensively than later on when construction is underway. Thorough drawings also make it easier for the contractor to accurately price and build your project.
- The architect can help you select the appropriate materials and systems. An architect can help you choose materials and finishes that are durable as well as beautiful, saving on frequent maintenance and replacement costs. Architects develop the drawings and specifications to help you get bids for construction that are based on your requirements. An architect can design an energyefficient building to maximize heating from the sun and let in natural light, thus reducing your heating, cooling and electric bills over time.

- The architect can make your life easier. Building is a long process that is often disruptive, particularly if you are living or working in the space under construction. The architect you hire looks out for your interests and tries to find ways to make that process go smoothly. If your project requires engineering or other design services, the architect can coordinate this team of experts so you don't have to. During construction, the architect visits the site to help verify that the project is being built according to plans and specifications.
- Good design sells. A well-designed house has a higher resale value. A well-designed store draws customers. A well-designed work environment attracts employees and increases productivity.

YOUR ARCHITECT

Your architect will work with you to help you:

- Clarify and refine your building needs. Through a process called programming, the architect examines your requirements, budget and building site and then works with you to define what is to be built and to establish the project's scope.
- Look ahead. Architects are planners who look beyond your immediate requirements to design flexible buildings that will accommodate changing technology and adapt to your changing needs.
- Manage the building project. From conception to move-in, the architect is your project leader. As the central clearinghouse for ideas, schedules and every other facet of the project, the architect manages and coordinates the project elements.
- Maximize your construction dollar. A building designed for maximum energy efficiency can cut your heating and fuel

A design to meet your current and future needs bills. The architect's efficient use of space may reduce the square footage you require. A well designed building not only can reduce initial costs, but also can increase its value.

• Take a broad view. Architects look at the impact the building will have on the people who use it, the surrounding area and the natural environment. The result is the creation of office spaces that make interaction between departments move more smoothly, retail areas that display your products in their best light and prompt customers to buy, and factory and administrative environments that stimulate employee productivity and satisfaction.

SELECTION

Architecture firms come in a variety of sizes and types. Each firm brings a different combination of skills, expertise, interests and values to its projects. Some firms specialize in one or more project or facility types. Some firms include in-house engineering services or other design disciplines. Other architects introduce these disciplines through appropriate consultants. The right kind of firm for your project will depend on the specific demands of your project.

First-time clients, and even experienced clients facing new situations, often have many questions about architect selection. The following are some of the more common:

- When should I bring the architect into the picture? The best time is as early as possible. Long before plans and specifications are developed, there are many crucial decisions to be made. Architects can help you define the project in terms that provide meaningful guidance for design. Working with a preliminary evaluation of your needs, an architect can help you find a site that presents the best opportunity to construct the kind of building you envision. Other predesign services architects offer include economic feasibility studies, assistance in developing project budgets and schedules, and help in obtaining project financing.
- Should I look at more than one firm?
 Usually, yes. The exception, of course, arises when you already have a good relationship with an architect and it makes little sense to change.

- How do I find suitable firms to contact? Start building a list of potential architects. Contact other owners who have developed similar facilities that you've admired or that seem especially appropriate. Get recommendations from friends and relatives who have worked with architects. AIA Wisconsin publishes directories of AIA member architects and member-owned firms, and also assists public owners establish a complete qualifications-based selection (QBS) process.
- What information should I request? When contacting firms, describe your project and ask if they are available to take it on. If they are, request literature outlining the firm's qualifications. If the architect is unable to handle your project, ask if they can suggest another firm. The materials you receive from interested firms might include a letter of interest, brochures, fact sheets, photos of past work and biographical material about key personnel. Look beyond the style of the brochure to determine which firms have the right experience and capabilities for your project. At this point, you should be able to narrow your list to the architects you will interview.
- Why are interviews desirable? An interview addresses one issue that can't be covered in brochures and printed materials: the "chemistry" between you and the architect.
 It also allows you to investigate how each architect will approach the project. Remember, you will be working with the architect for a long time and will want someone with whom you feel comfortable.
- How many firms should I interview? It often is recommended that you interview between three and five firms, enough to see the range of possibilities, but not so many that an already tough decision will be further complicated. Treat each firm fairly, offering, for example, equal time and equal access to your site and existing facilities. Ask to meet the key people who will work on your project.
- What can I realistically expect to learn from an interview? During the interview, ask a lot of questions. You can learn how the team the architect has put together will approach your project. Ask how the architect will gather information, establish priorities and make decisions. Ask what the architect sees as the important issues for the project. Evaluate the firm's interest in your project and its style, personality and approach. If, during the interview, there is something you do not understand, ask the architect for clarification.

- How should I follow up? Tell each firm what you intend to do next and when you plan to make your decision. If you haven't talked with past clients, do so now. Assess both the performance of the firm and the performance of the resulting architecture. Notify the selected firm as soon as possible. Remember, conditions change; the firm may not be able to offer the same project team if you take several weeks or months to decide.
- On what should I base my decision? Personal confidence in the architect is paramount. Then seek an appropriate balance among these factors: technical competence. professional service, cost and design skills. Once you've selected the best firm for your project, you'll need to reach an agreement regarding scope.

ADDITIONAL GUIDANCE

However the architect selection process is approached, it is worth taking the time to do it well. Here's some additional guidance:

- · You are engaging the services of a professional. You will work closely with the architect through the life of the project, and your relationship may extend to future projects. Invest at least the care it takes to select a financial or legal advisor.
- Yours will also be a business relationship. Find out how prospective architects do business, how they work with their clients, how responsive they are to your management and decision styles, and how well their work stacks up against their clients' expectations. The best way to find out is to talk with other owners for whom the firm has provided professional services.
- Ask questions. Tell the architect what you know and what you expect. Ask for an explanation of anything you don't understand. The more on the table at the beginning, the better the chances for a successful project.

· Get it in writing. Once you have selected the architect, you are ready to put in writing the terms of your agreement regarding the scope of work, services, schedule, construction budget and architect's compensation. This written agreement can take many forms. The American Institute of Architects has developed a variety of standard contract forms which are used industry-wide. The AIA Wisconsin office maintains a complete inventory of these AIA contract documents.

SUCCESSFUL PROJECTS

The best building projects are created when the client and architect work together as a team. Both you and your architect can take specific steps to help meet your quality, time and budget goals.

Design and building are group activities. Many people and firms come together to do a project. They may not have worked together before: and they may not work together again. They collaborate to produce a unique building on a specific site. As the project unfolds, hundreds of individual design decisions and commitments are made. Needs and conditions change; and work is modified. A strong and healthy relationship between owner and architect is essential to keep the project on track.

Design and construction projects typically involve several steps or phases. These may include: programming, schematic design. construction documents, bidding or negotiation with contractors and construction. However, on some projects several of these steps may be combined; on others there may be additional phases involved.

The architect's involvement normally does not stop with the preparation of construction documents. Architects also provide construction administration services. These services may include assisting you in hiring the contractor, making site visits, reviewing and approving the contractor's applications for payment and keeping you informed of the project's progress.

Designing a building is exciting and creative. Both the architect and building owner bring something to the relationship that the other needs. As the owner, you have a building goal and the financial resources to realize that goal. The architect brings extensive professional Evaluate the architect's interest. style and approach.

Experience tells us that successful projects those that respond to owner needs and aspirations, that are accomplished within schedule and budget and that contribute to the quality of our communities and our lives - result from clients and architects who form solid professional and business relationships. These relationships are formed early on and are nourished by clear expectations and a willingness of both you and your architect to accept your responsibilities for achieving a successful project.WA

This brief introduction to selecting and working with an architect was adapted from three publications by The American Institute of Architects: A Beginner's Guide to Architectural Services, You and Your Architect, and Building Relationships.

Architects in Schools

Connecting Teachers with Architects Students to Architecture

The "Architects in Schools" program was created to encourage greater awareness, understanding and appreciation of Architecture and our built environment.

The program helps teachers make connections with architects in their own community who can assist in developing lesson plans and learning activities that will introduce students to important ideas and concepts through Architecture. It is offered as a community service by members of AIA Wisconsin, the state society of The American Institute of Architects.

Architecture often is described as a combination of Art and Science; so it's a natural component for these two subjects. Architecture also can be used effectively as part of the curriculum for other subjects, such as History, Social Studies, Language Arts and Math.

Information & Contacts

Architects in your community are available to join teachers and students to discuss how Architecture shapes the world around us and influences our lives in many ways.

esign and building are inherently excit ing: and there is nothing more satisfying than a successful project. The secret to success lies in the professional relationship between building owner and architect. Whether you are building or remodeling your home or planning a commercial, industrial or public facility, selecting the right architect is important to achieving a successful project.

Members of AIA Wisconsin have been selected for major projects across the country and have received many important awards. AIA Wisconsin member architects have assisted thousands of clients with creative solutions to their building needs.

Investing in the professional services of an architect is a wise use of often very limited building resources. A well-conceived project can be built more efficiently and economically. An architect can design a building to maximize natural light, thus reducing heating, cooling and electric costs. Your architect can help you select materials and finishes that are durable as well as beautiful, saving on maintenance and replacement costs. A well-designed store draws customers and a well-designed work environment attracts good employees and increases productivity.

If you need the professional services of a qualified architect, you will find a suitable firm in this 2003 AIA Wisconsin Firm Directory. The firms listed will welcome the opportunity to discuss your project with you.

The AIA Wisconsin Firm Directory includes the following information on each firm: firm name, address, county, telephone and fax numbers and e-mail and Web site addresses: names of the principals or partners of the firm; number of registered architects and total employes; and a description of the firm's practice.

The information contained in the Directory was provided by the firms as part of an annual survey of AIA Wisconsin members. It is a roster of firms owned by AIA Wisconsin member architects. To be listed, at least one of the firm's principals or partners must be a registered architect and an AIA Wisconsin member.

You are encouraged to keep the 2003 AIA Wisconsin Firm Directory handy for reference throughout the year. Contact the firms listed for further information about their practice and the professional services they can provide for your project. If you have any questions or suggestions regarding the Directory, please contact: AIA Wisconsin 321 S. Hamilton Street, Madison, Wisconsin 53703; (608) 257-8477/1-800-ARCHITECT, aiaw@aiaw.org.

We select our projects not by size, type or revenue, but for the possibility of creating good architecture. Our main concern is to produce significant, properly constructed buildings at a cost appropriate to their use. Our practice is clearly modernist, contextual, without misplaced sentimentality or pastiches of past styles. We have an unwavering philosophy to design, refine and repeat in order to create buildings of grace and elegance for our clients. We search for solutions that embody both understandable and memorable experiences and images. Our practice is guided by passionate belief in three central tenets of spirit, craft and place.

AIA Wisconsin Architecture Firm Award Call for Entries

The AIA Wisconsin Board of Directors and Firm Award Committee invite members and others to submit nomination materials for the AIA Wisconsin Architecture Firm Award program.

The Architecture Firm Award is the highest honor that AIA Wisconsin, the state society of The American Institute of Architects, can bestow on a member-owned firm. The Architecture Firm Award will be presented at the 2004 AIA Wisconsin Convention.

The following provides important information regarding the purpose of the award, award criteria, eligibility requirements and nomination procedures. Please read all the information carefully and adhere to the guidelines. If you have questions about the Architecture Firm Award, please contact the AIA Wisconsin office.

Purpose

The purpose of the Architecture Firm Award is to recognize an AIA Wisconsin firm for outstanding achievement in the advancement of the architectural profession for a period of at least ten years through significant contributions in one or more important areas of practice, including architectural design, building technology, education and research, community leadership, public service and awareness and service to the AIA at the local, state or national level. This is the highest honor that AIA Wisconsin can bestow on a member-owned firm.

Eligibility

Wisconsin-based firms that have at least one principal who is an Architect member of The American Institute of Architects and AIA Wisconsin and that have provided architectural services in Wisconsin for a minimum of ten consecutive years are eligible. Firms that no longer exist are not eligible. Prior recipients are not eligible to receive more than one Architecture Firm Award in a fifteen-year period.

Award Criteria

Nominations for the Architecture Firm Award will be judged on the firm's significant contributions in one or more of the following important areas of practice:

- Architectural design
- Building technology
- · Education and research
- Community leadership, public service and awareness

- · Service to the AIA
- Other significant contributions to the advancement of the architectural profession

Selection will be based on the preponderance of evidence of significant contributions provided in the nomination materials. No individual award criteria or contribution to a particular area of practice will have any more weight than any other. For Wisconsin-based firms with offices in other states, the award will be based on significant contributions for which the Wisconsin office is primarily responsible.

Nominations

Eligible architecture firms may nominate themselves or be nominated by someone else, including community groups and others outside of AIA Wisconsin membership. All nomination materials shall be submitted in a single 8½" x 11" format clear acetate-sleeved three-ringed black binder furnished by the nominator. The nomination materials should clearly demonstrate the significance and ongoing quality of the firm's contributions in reference to the specific areas of practice established for the award. Nomination submissions shall contain the following documentation in the following order:

- 1. A concise summary statement in support of the nomination that highlights the firm's significant contributions, identifies specific area(s) of practice in which these contributions have been made and describes why firm should be considered for the award. This summary statement should not exceed three pages. Summary statement shall be signed by individual or by authorized officer of organization submitting the nomination.
- History of the firm, including description of its founding, areas of practice, notable contributions, significant projects and principals. This narrative should not exceed two pages.
- 3. No more than 20 graphic images (e.g. photographs, drawings, slide transparencies, etc.) of firm's work that relate to award criteria and demonstrate a consistent pursuit of excellence. Appropriate credit for all such graphic images shall be included.
- No more than five 8" x 10" black-andwhite glossy photographs of representative work for publication by AIA Wisconsin,

- including photography credits. (Photographs should not be permanently affixed to backing.)
- 5. List of awards, honors or recognition received by the firm.
- List of books, articles or publications written about the firm's work or professional contributions; published materials written by the firm may be included.
- Completed "Firm Data Sheet," including signature of a principal of the nominated firm. (This form is available from the AIA Wisconsin office.)

All nomination materials submitted, including slides and photographs, shall be retained by AIA Wisconsin for historical records and for use in publicity in the interest of the profession. It is recommended that only duplicate slide transparencies and photographs be submitted with nomination. It is critical that all information presented is accurate and complete. AIA Wisconsin will not accept responsibility for errors in the submitted nomination materials. By submitting a nomination, the nominator certifies that permission has been obtained from the photographer(s) to publish the images included.

Thanks to the strong support of Wisconsin architects and allied professionals, the WAF provides annual tuition scholarships to Wisconsin architecture students, program grants to student chapters at universities and technical colleges throughout the state, underwriting support for licensing exam preparation programs and grants for quality continuing education programs. The WAF also increases public awareness of architecture with support for a traveling exhibit on the Wisconsin State Capitol, educational materials for elementary students and their teachers, an architectural summer camp for high school students and public lectures on architecture.

Thank you for your support of the Wisconsin Architects Foundation. Please call (608) 257-8477 for more information.

The Wisconsin Architects Foundation is a non-profit tax-exempt 501(c)(3) educational foundation governed by a nine-member Board of Directors elected by the WAF membership.

Avoid Potential Conflicts with Clients Using the B141

By Werner Sabo, FAIA, and James Zahn, FAIA

The AIA standard contract, B141 Owner-Architect agreement, was completely revamped in 1997. All the "good" stuff is still there, along with a number of new features. One big change is the requirement for an upfront understanding of the project. This is found in Article 1.1, which requires that the owner and architect discuss a number of issues.

While the information required is not complicated, it is absolutely essential that both parties understand and agree on the information. Other contracts, particularly letter contracts, do not cover most of these issues. This opens the door to misunderstandings and conflicts between the owner and architect. Article 1.1.2 is where the project parameters are to be stated. These are the basic outlines of the project, including the project's use. program, time and cost. To the extent possible, these items should be set out in as much detail as is known at that time. You can also set forth a method by which this information will be obtained if not known at the time of your discussion with the owner.

Owners usually place primary importance on the cost of their project. Past versions of B141 did not directly address this cost issue. However, the most recent edition of B141 requires the parties to identify two separate and distinct components of cost: overall "Project" costs and "Cost of the Work." In Article 1.1.2.5, after a discussion with the client, you need to fill in these two numbers. The first, the overall budget, is a dollar figure for everything. This number is the total amount of money the owner will need to spend to complete the entire project, including all soft costs, fees, interest, and any and all other miscellaneous costs.

Many of these costs do not involve the architect directly. However, they can have an impact on the work of the architect if a number is omitted in the owner's calculations. The architect may then find that the project will need to be scaled back to account for the missing costs. The second number is the hard dollar construction cost. Basically, it is the cost of the actual construction of the building. This is the number that represents the cost of the work the architect is designing. The two numbers are separated to make sure the client understands what dollar amount of their budget will be spent on the actual construction of the building and to account for all of the other costs that an unsophisticated owner may not anticipate or be aware of.

It is important to note that the budget amount listed in 1.1.2.5.2 constitutes a "fixed limit of construction cost." You will recall that the 1987 version of B141 (and the new 1997 B151) stated that there was no fixed limit of construction cost unless there was a specific written agreement setting such a limit. Thus, if the lowest responsible bid came in over the budget, the architect was not required to do additional work to bring the cost down unless the client was willing to pay additional compensation. The new B141, on the other hand, contemplates in 2.1.7.6 that the architect will design to the budget and, if the lowest responsible bid comes in over budget. will have to revise the drawings at no additional charge. This is something that owners really like! Actually, owners will have four choices in this event, one of which is to have the architect redesign for free. Article 2.1.7.5 also gives an owner the option to increase the budget, re-bid or terminate the architect.
