TAMIAMI. At last count, there were 23 copies of Brown Jordan's original.
But the imitators have never approached Tamiami quality. The unique lacing with a resiliency that lasts. The hand-buffed heli-arc welding that eliminates rough edges. The durability that comes from handcrafted construction and pure design. To make sure you aren't misled into lesser value, we label every chair. It's a label worth looking for. It means you're getting pure Brown Jordan. And that says it all.

KitchenAid disposers. When you're tired of being in a jam.

With a KitchenAid disposer, you don't have to use a broom handle to break up jams.

The KitchenAid unjams itself. A touch of a button activates our exclusive Wham Jam Breaker which breaks the jam with 120 jolts a second.

Of course, a KitchenAid disposer is built not to jam. It has a big $1 / 2 \mathrm{HP}$ motor that grinds up all kinds of garbage, even tough stuff like steak bones and corn husks.

In fact, KitchenAid stainless steel disposers are so well built we offer a five year limited warranty. Stainless steel grind chambers and cast iron drain chambers fight corrosion, the major cause of disposer failure.

This tiny bit of Moon Drops Under Makeup Moisture Film helps prevent it.  Your face loses more than 6 quarter-teaspoons of moisture every day, even if you don't perspire a drop. To a skin specialist that's 6.67 milliliters. And the more active you are, the more moisture you lose.  Moon Drops Under Makeup Moisture Film helps prevent it. Less than one eighth-teaspoon is all you need. Because of the highly efficient Moon Drops Moisture Barrier. This Barrier bathes thirsty cells and helps them retain moisture. ## It's Sears Open Hearth Bedroom Furniture

Superb construction, 26-step finishing, and an outstanding price make it agreat value. We urge you to compare:

You are about to make a major investment in a set of bedroom furniture. Of course you want it to look beautiful. You want it to last. And you want it to cost no more than it has to.

We think Sears Open Hearth offers you the best combination of all three. Here is what you should look for when you shop and compare:

Examine the Drawers

Look for beautifully made drawers when you want to determine the overall quality of furniture construction. It takes time, care and true craftsmanship to make drawers that will continue to work beautifully. Chances are, if corners are cut in drawer construction, they will be cut everywhere else.

When you shop and compare, look for all these drawer construction features. You'll find them in Sears Open Hearth.

Ball-Bearing Slides made from strong steel to make the drawer slide smoothly.

Positive Drawer Stops to prevent the drawer from accidentally being pulled out too far.

Dovetail Joints on all sides for extra strength.

Tongue-in-Groove Bottoms to hold more weight and make the drawer sturdy.

No-Snag Insides with rounded edges, triple sanding and smooth sealing lacquer.

Anti-Wobble Discs made from self-lubricating nylon. For a smooth pull without "seesaw" wobbling.

Reproduction "Flying Eagle" Hardware cast from heavy solid metal. Brass plated and antique burnished.

Look for Inner Frame Strength

Look inside. Look underneath. Look behind. Don't ignore the inner construction of the furniture frame. If it doesn't include the inside strength features found in Sears Open Hearth, its outside beauty won't last as long.

Tongue-in-Groove and Mortise-and-Tenon Piece Construction. Ordinary butt-edge construction is nowhere near as long lasting.

Corner Cleats and Glue Blocks. Glued and screwed into the frame for extra strength.

Recessed Back Panels for added stability.

Adjustable Casters and selflevelers on all larger pieces.

Meticulous 26-Step Finishing Makes All the Difference

Only firm, evenly textured, kiln-dried northern white pine and fine grade white pine veneers are chosen for Sears Open Hearth. It is a mellow wood and it responds to finishing beautifully. But only, if it is finished with time and care.

The satin glow and warm highlighting you see in Sears Open Hearth take 26 painstaking finishing steps to achieve. From sanding, to staining, to antiquing, to highlighting, to handrubbing. There is no shorter method to bring out the beauty of northern white pine and make it last. You'll really see the difference when you shop and compare.

It's a Sears Best

Sears Open Hearth Furniture has to continually meet strict quality requirements to be a "Sears Best". These tests, in addition to the hundreds of construction checking operations,are why we invite you to shop and compare.

Choice of Pieces

There are 13 different pieces in Sears Open Hearth Bedroom. And 41 more in Sears Open Hearth Dining Room, Family Room and Living Room. Plus a host of Open Hearth coordinated accessories.

Low-voltage lighting makes tracks

Lighting has been simplified at last with a brand new low-voltage system designed by lighting expert Ralph Bisdale. The $6-$ and 12 -volt, swivel-neck, lou-ver-faced lights offer the widest variety of illumination ever. The 6 -volt lamp has a diffusing lens that varies from a pin-spot beam to full flood-or you can have it with a lens that changes the beam from a spotlight to an elliptical-shaped lozenge. The 12 -volt lamp comes with either a narrow spot, flood, or wide flood bulb that's very easy on the eyes. Each one can be freestanding or fixed to circuit tracks. Bisdale's own preference is to mount the lamps on low-level tracks fixed just above baseboard on the wall, with the lights pointed up. The lamps can be purchased in ten House & Garden Colors at $$ 80$ each and also come in white and black for $$ 57$ each. From a new shop, Manhattan Ad Hoc Housewares, 842 Lexington Avenue, New York, N.Y., 10021.

1 rutio

March sewing: a lion and a lamb

Easy-sewing animal kits begin as precut fabric pieces. Tawny "Mr. Ruffies," the lion, has pink felt cheeks, raffia whiskers. "Rosebud," the lamb, is navy pin-dot cotton. Each kit, $16.20. The Whole Kit & Kaboodle, Dept. DK, 8 W. 19th St., New York, N.Y. 10011.

The kitchen in Helga Gruber's apartment is a tiny recess off the living area, with a stove and sink unit side by side and no counter space. To make it work, she designed an L-shaped counter, which gives her space to prepare meals. It contains food storage below, shelves for china, glass, and cookware above.

Materials:

- 4 pine boards, 4 feet by 8 inches by 2 inches
- 1 pine board, 7 feet by 8 inches by 2 inches
- 2 pine supports, 4 feet by 2 inches by 2 inches
- 2 pine blocks, 8 inches by 2 inches by 2 inches
- 1 piece plywood 30 by 6 inches for glassware shelf - 2 molly bolts, wood screws, screw hooks, cup hooks
To build:
Start by mitering 4 -foot pine boards together to make the two L-shaped shelves. Attach pine blocks to ends where they will meet the wall. Fix to wall

Stitch $1 / 4$-inch from edge, then 1 inch down from that to form casing. Step 6: Make a 1-inch vertical buttonhole in right side of casing near corner. Step 7: Thread cord through casing. Step 8: Place cover on bed, tightening cord. Tie cord in bow. On inside, turn up 4 corners; tack to casing to make rounded finish.

To finish a raw wood table or revive a hopelessly decrepit one, try adding texture and color with burlap and glaze. The method here was devised by craftsman Fentress Dorn, who used burlap, enameled in glossy white and glazed in beige for this waterfall-shaped table.

MATERIALS

White household glue
Burlap cloth, 2 inches larger all around than area to be covered 3 -inch roller sandpaper #120, #360
primer and sealer (this one by Bin)
enamel paint special glaze (formula below) polyurethane varnish
Step 1: Pour white glue into tray and apply over wood with roller.
Step 2: Apply cut cloth to underneath and apron of table, trimming edges with scissors. Smooth with hands, then a soft cloth. Follow same procedure for tabletop.

Step 3: Roll another application of glue over whole table. Let dry overnight.
Step 4: Paint a base coat of enamel. When dry, sand with #360 paper.
Step 5: Glazing. To make glaze: 1 cup pure benzine; 6 tablespoons flake white japan color; 1 teaspoon yellow ocher japan; 2 dabs raw umber japan; 2 tablespoons boiled linseed oil. Mix together to the consistency of milk. For a deeper tone, increase raw umber. For a more honeyed color, add more ocher (experiment on a painted white board). Apply glaze with a soft, clean piece of cheesecloth. When table is covered, wipe lightly with another cloth. When dry, protect with a coat of polyurethane varnish. Table made by Torrey, 30 inches long, 17 high, 15 wide.

French Renaissance chair

Can you identify the style and age of my chair and tell me about it? R.I.C. -Wilmington, Md.

The ancestor of your very early 20th-century American chair was the distinctive 16th-century French Renaissance wood open-armchair, the caquetoire (a chair for cackling, hence a chaise de femme), distinguished by a tall and narrow rectangular paneled-back and the top of the open arms forming a $U$ (or horseshoe) shape, as in your chair.

The mark on the back of my plate shows three wavy lines and a crown and has the words "Ranunculus bulbosus" and an "L" on it. Can you identify the plate for me? J.E.H.-EI Cerrito, Cal.

Your Royal Copenhagen porcelain dish, dating after 1890 , is a copy of a piece in the celebrated Flora Danica service ordered in 1789 by the Danish king. In 1802, when the work was halted by royal command, 1800 pieces were delivered to the Danish royal household. Each piece is decorated with named plants copied from color plates in the botanical work by G. C. Oeder-Flora of the Danish Kingdom. The Latin name of the plant -in your case rununculus bulbosusappears on the back of each piece. The letter "L" stands for Linnaeus, the Swedish botanist, who first classified the flower in the 18 th century.

German mark

Can you tell from my rough sketch of the mark, where my dishes originated? B.A.L.-

Chicago, III.

Your dishes were made at a German porcelain factory started in 1884 by Krautheim & Adelberg at Selb, Bavaria.

American Empire sofa

Is my sofa very old? What is its style? We think the decoration unusual, is it? H.A.H.-Lake Park, Fla.

Your sofa with carved and gilt-wood enrichments is a handsome example of the American Empire style, dating around 1820 and perhaps of New York provenance. The dolphin (on the out-scrolled arm) is a remarkable tour de force both of design and craftsmanship.

Silver Communion Service

I would appreciate information about the date of our church's Communion Service. The emblem reads "Meriden B. Company 1380." H.L.K.-Hot Springs, Va.

It is just about impossible to pinpoint a date for your plated silver Communion Service, as the set was popular over a long period of time. It was made by the Meriden Britannia Co., and was first illustrated in a catalogue dated 1867, but was still being offered as late as the 1930s.

Bohemian cup and saucer

Are my cup and saucer very old? Who made them? I've drawn the mark in the hope it is sufficient clue. N.F.B.
—Austin, Tex.

Your cup and saucer were made at a porcelain and faience factory started at Klosterle, Bohemia, in 1793 and still active during World War II. The swastika in the mark indicates the cup and saucer are about the vintage of World War II.

GIVE YOUR LEGS A LIFT  News on leg and ankle care from top orthopedic experts

By Caroline Seebohm

"Her legs were long, slim, and shapely. He eyed them appreciatively." That's the kind of novelist's line we can do without. The shape of legs, like feet and hands, is something we cannot alter much-except, of course, by keeping our weight down all over. But legs are more than art objects for other people's approval. They contain the strongest muscle in the bodythe calf muscle-and they carry us about faithfully all our lives, a job that is often neglected, or misunderstood.

You can't really think of legs without thinking of feet. And that's where care starts. Orthopedic surgeons and podiatrists agree that wearing the right shoes makes all the difference to healthy legs. But what are the "right" shoes? "For walking, wear the lowest heel you can comfortably wear," declares podiatrist Dr. Elizabeth Roberts, author of On Your Feet (Rodale Press). Orthopedic surgeon Dr. Nathaniel

How to stretch your legs

These leg exercises were put together by Dr. John L. Marshall, Director of Sports Medicine at New York's Hospital for Special Surgery, and orthopedist for the U.S. Ski Team. Before you start, he asks you to consider the following:

1 How flexible you are is not important. The important thing is to learn how to stretch your muscles properly.
2 Become aware of the difference between the feeling of a stretch and pain. When stretching you should do it to that point where you feel an "easy" stretch. Hold this position and relax. As you relax-and the feeling of the stretch changes to a mild stretch-go a little further until you once again feel the pull. If you go too far the stretch will hurt and relaxation will not be possible. Straining is not stretching.
3 Do not bounce when you stretch. Simply hold the stretch.

Hamstring stretch (back of thigh) Sit down with your legs straight, heels no more than 6 inches apart. Reach down and get an easy stretch. You will probably feel it in the back of your thighs (shaded area). If you have trouble stretching and simultaneously relaxing in this position, use a towel to help. Put the towel around your feet, grab the ends, and pull yourself forward to where you can relax and stretch. Work your way down the towel until you feel suffiently stretched.
Hamstring stretch using wall Choose an object near you such as a wall, tree, or table, or anything which is about waist high or at a height from which you can comfortably stretch. Place the back of your heel on the object keeping your leg straight out.
 Your leg on the ground should be nearly straight (people with back problems should bend the knee slightly), with your foot pointed forward. Now, slowly bend forward at the waist until you feel a good stretch in the back of the raised leg. Hold this position, then relax.

Nobody colors and cares for your lips quite like we do.

We've created "glamour that's good for you." Glamorous colors....wet and luscious. Extra shiny. Long-lasting. Creamy and comfortable. ## Quadriceps stretch (front of thigh)

Stand on one foot. Hold onto the wall with your left hand. Stand far enough away from it so that your left arm is kept fairly straight. Reach behind you and grab your right foot from the outside with your right hand. Now slowly pull your foot toward your buttocks until you feel the stretch in the front of your thigh. Hold this stretch for 15-25 seconds. For a greater stretch, hold the same position, then slowly extend your leg backward into your right hand, intensifying the stretch on your thigh (right picture). This will straighten out your left arm.
Quadriceps and knee stretch

First kneel down on both knees, placing your hands on the outside of your ankles. Walk backward with your hands so that they are behind you. Place your hands as far back as you can. Hold and feel the stretch on the front of your ankles, shins, and thighs. CAUTION: If you have or have had knee problems, be very careful bending the knees behind you. Do it slowly and under control.

Calf stretches

Face a wall, standing about 2 feet away from the wall. Rest your forearms on the wall with your forehead on the back of your hands. Now bend one knee and bring that knee toward the wall. Keep your other leg straight and the heel down as you move your hips slightly toward the wall. Keep your toes pointed straight ahead. (Left picture). You should feel a good stretch in the calf of the right leg. If you want to stretch the Achilles tendon from this position, slightly bend the back knee, keeping the foot flat (right picture). This gives you a much lower stretch, which is also good for maintaining or regaining ankle flexibility. By stretching one leg at a time as described, you are able to isolate and control the stretch in the calf muscle.

heels), which force the calf muscles to do an extra balancing act; and too much loss of fluid, during excessive sweating, for example, as sometimes occurs with very energetic exercise.

Legs cramps may feel bad: Swollen ankles look even worse. Swollen ankles are caused by an accumulation of fluid in the bottom of the legs. "Many women get an accumulation of fluid prior to menstruation," explains Dr. Nagler. "It's very natural, and it soon goes away. Another reason why you may get an accumulation of fluid in your ankles is because of weakened leg veins and muscles. If you stand for a very long time, the muscles cannot do their pumping action through the veins, and fluid collects. Long sitting, such as on an airplane flight, can also cause this accumulation. (Varicose veins, too, which tend to be hereditary, can be triggered off by sitting or standing too long.)"

Basketball players are famous for their bad knees and pulled muscles. Luckily for us lesser mortals, our knees usually remain healthy unless we experience some form of osteoarthritis later in life, or unless we suddenly decide to start eating Japanese style. If you are overweight, however, you are much more likely to get stiff knees. There's too much stress on them. And if you do suddenly take it upon yourself to kneel down when you eat, take Dr. Nagler's advice: "Human nature hates sudden changes. In the West, we eat sitting down. Our knees are not used to more stress. Build them up slowly by bending and flexing them. Prepare them by kneeling down every day for a little while, increasing the time until you feel relaxed in that position."
If stiff knees aren't your Achilles heel, what is? The Achilles tendon is the tendon in the calf muscle that inserts into the heel. For normal walking about, it is absolutely necessary to have a healthy Achilles tendon. "When you walk, you press down first on the heel, then roll over and push off with the toes," says Dr. Nagler. "The Achilles tendon then contracts. It must be prepared for this. If you do some forceful activity suddenly, like skiing or playing tennis, and the tendon is not prepared, then you can rupture it."

A pulled leg muscle is caused by similar forces. The tight muscles in the back of the leg can be stretched too hard if you jam your heel down while running, skiing, or reaching for a ball, for instance. If you do this when the muscle is contracted, then you'll get a tear.
For healthy legs and ankles then, some basic rules of nurture are offered by Dr. Nagler:

1. Do some stretching exercises every day to avoid muscle or tendon pulls and joint stiffness (very important if you wish to exercise).
2. For walking, wear low heels. At all times, wear shoes that fit snugly round the heel and loosely enough round the toes for them to wiggle. ("Choose leather or fabric that allows your feet to breathe and be flexible," adds podiatrist Dr. Roberts. "Soles should be leather or crepe rubber-as long as they are flexible.")
3. Keep your legs moving to prevent accumulation of fluid in the ankles. If you have to stand or sit for long periods, run in place or move from one foot to the other as much as possible to allow the veins and muscles to do their work. 4. Wear support hose if you have a tendency to varicose veins, or have to stand for long periods. For these to be effective, the pressure should be strongest around the ankle and decrease as it goes up the calf. This pressure stimulates fluid dynamics, preventing accumulation.
4. Try putting your legs up for 10 or 15 minutes a day in a position higher than your head, to drain excess fluid out of the legs.

Beauty and health products new this month in the stores

Sometimes at the start of a season one new thing seems right-a new shade, a new fragrance, a new way of doing something that gives your looks and spirits a lift. The stores are chock-full of pepperuppers for Spring ' 77 , starting with rich and glorious color! Reds, reds, reds galore. Four of the snappiest reds are to be found in a collection of Poppy Blooms by Elizabeth Arden. The lipstick shades are "Prize Poppy," a blued-red; golden coral "Burnished Poppy,"; clear-red "Hothouse Poppy,"; and "Golden Poppy," with a hint of gold frost. Each $$ 3.50$. For those who love a perfect lip outline, there is "Poppy Blaze" or "Poppy Pecan," a handsome nutty-red. $$ 3.50$ each. Two powder blushes and four nail lacquers complete the group. With fashion leaning toward romance this spring, they'll light up bright smiles.
More red lips from Moon Drops by Revlon: "Golden Caviar," "Red à la Russe" and "Red Sable" tell you where these are coming from . . . inspired by the drama of rediscovered fashions. The Reds à la Russe lipsticks are $\$ 2$ each; STRATHMORE, 400 day battery powered pendulum. $11^{3 / 4^{\prime \prime}}$ h. $\$ 149.95$

It's a clock created to celebrate important occasions . . . anniversaries, weddings, any significant milestone. And its stately design fulfills its purpose admirably. Glass panels display the hypnotic gyration of the ball pendulum from all sides. Walnut-finished wood trim provides a solidly elegant setting. One penlight battery powers 400 days of precision visual pageantry! A most enchanting clock, at fine jewelers, department stores. For catalog send $$ 1$ to Dept. HG-5. Glossy Lip Color for a subtle sheen over any of them. Very sheer, $3. Nazdarovia (To your health)!

Skins tend to be drier during winter and early spring. Two options for cleansing: with a soapless liquid or a cream (which doesn't always give a clean feeling), or with soap and water (which can leave your skin feeling "squeaky clean" but also a bit tight). Neutrogena's experts have come up with new Dry-Skin Soap that, just like its regular soap, has no detergent, alkali, or perfume. What it does have are humectants that help maintain a moisture balance between your skin and the air around it. The transparent soap comes in hand and bath sizes for $$ 1.50$ and $$ 2$ at drugstores and supermarkets.

Pure milk protein has been captured in tiny strawberry-colored particles in Skin Dew Visible Action Moisturizing Emulsion, a continuous-action moisturizer for all skin types. Particles melt on the surface and blend with emollients to keep skin smooth and supple, regardless of the many hot and cold environments your face and throat are subjected to. Two ounces, $$ 5.50$ by Helena Rubinstein.

The house of Dior has a transparent mask called Hydra-Dior Wash-Off Masque, a great help for skin that's been overexposed to weather, indoor heating, and air conditioning. When using a mask, be sure to slather it also on your throat, where sensitive skin takes its share of chafing and rubbing from coats, scarves, and turtleneck sweaters. WashOff Masque, 2 ounces, $$ 9.50$.

Great news for deep ash-blondes, redheads, and brunettes who'd like an extra glow during these dreary days. Clairol's Gentle Lights, a fingerpainting haircoloring kit, makes it child's play to give yourself highlights where you want them. It's easy, it's safe (you literally apply it with your fingers), and the result is soft and subtle. As a start, try first framing your face at the hairline. Takes about 20 minutes to set, then you simply shampoo. Your hair catches light in a very pretty, undramatic way. Only $$ 4.50$ at drugstores.

Two things to know about if you're lucky enough to be taking a late winter vacation: small, lightweight travel sizes of daily grooming products. All the skincare products from Charlie will be available on a regular basis in new small sizes. from $1 to $3. That's also perfect for a locker at the health club, or to keep tucked away in a weekend bag. Clinique collectors have the same opportunity to get hold of small sizes of their favorites as gifts with purchases. These are offered by department stores all across the country. Keep your eyes peeled.

Protein power

It plays a multiple role in good nutrition. Here are protein-plus recipes, required allowances, and a useful protein chart

You simply cannot live without protein. It is different from all other kinds of food substances in that it contains the nitrogen that is necessary for life. Named by the Greeks, "protein" means first importance, and indeed it is. In the United States there is no shortage of protein, but in many underdeveloped countries children sicken and die for lack of it.

You need protein to grow and to repair the wear and tear that is constantly going on in body tissues. Proteins are structural elements, the principal part of the many fibers of connective tissuecollagenous, reticular (or netlike), and elastic. And this is just the beginning of the vast role proteins play. As enzymes, their functions are numerous and impressive. For example, certain muscle proteins are involved in converting chemical energy into mechanical work.

As intra-membrane carriers, proteins serve as shuttles in the transport of molecules and ions across cell membranes. Proteins also provide a carrier function in plasma, the fluid portion of the blood in which the corpuscles are suspended. Antibody proteins help protect the body's defense against infections. And as hormonal messengers such as growth hormone and insulin, proteins carry information that regulates cell permeability and metabolism. Proteins furnish a source of fixed nitrogen for the synthesis of certain basic substances. Heme, for example, a deep-red pigment, is a constituent of hemoglobin. Protein may also serve as a source of energy.

Now that we know the myriad functions protein performs for us, just how much protein do we need? All through life protein is an essential nutrient, but infants, children, adolescents, pregnant and lactating women have special protein requirements for growth. The chart below of Daily Recommended Dietary Allowances was designed by the Food and Nutrition Board, National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council.

Proteins exist in both the animal and vegetable kingdoms. Amino acids linked together in a chain form the main structure of proteins. They may be said to be the building blocks of proteins. The synthesis of proteins and other nitro-gen-containing compounds is one of the important roles of amino acids.

The quality of the protein is determined by which amino acids are used, how often they are repeated in the chain, and the order in which they are joined. There are 200 or more amino acids, but for humans we may divide them into two and cereals may lack one or more of the indispensable amino acids, but the deficiency may be supplemented by eating a food from each of the two groups at the same time. A common example is cereal and milk. Cereal and milk are a good combination any time, and a favorite bedtime snack for many. It is vital to remember that the time factor, the togetherness of each group, is essential in protein synthesis.

bodies, and how much we need to keep ourselves in health, but where do we get it? The chart on page 40 of certain selected foods will help you add up your daily protein allowance. Keep it handy when you're planning your family meals.

It is important to remember that when calorie intake is reduced, the efficiency of protein utilization is decreased. Think about this the next time you go on a diet budgeting calories. When energy intake is impaired by restriction of calories or illness caused by infection, fever, or surgical trauma, special effort must be made to ensure an adequate intake of both energy and protein. Rather than that old cliché, "feed a cold and starve a fever," you should feed both the cold and the fever. As your temperature goes up, more energy is used, so you should increase your calories by eating wisely.

A second erroneous belief is that muscular work increases the need for protein. Studies indicate that a small increase is needed for the development of muscles during conditioning. However, when this is accomplished no increment need be added for work. For healthy people, there is little evidence that exceeding the recommended allowance for protein is either beneficial or harmful.

Most Americans eat more than they really need, and far more protein than they need. Ours is a protein-oriented culture, from peanut butter to pork chops. The two menus above show two different ways you can come up to the required allowance, however, if you feel you might not be eating enough protein. Both, you will notice, exceed the recommended allowance. Both menus in-

You might not know it, but cigarette smoke is mostly gas-many different kinds. Not just 'tar' and nicotine.

And despite what we tobacco people think, some critics of smoking say it's just as important to cut down on some of the gases as it is to lower 'tar' and nicotine.

No ordinary cigarette does both. But Fact does.

Fact is the first cigarette with the revolutionary Purite filter. And Fact reduces gas concentrations while it reduces 'tar' and nicotine.

Amateur archaeology: The joy of the dig

Amateurs in training program dig in at the Ferguson site in southwest Arkansas.

Wanted: Person willing to spend vacation doing arduous manual labor daily. Duties may include digging up dirt with trowel and sifting it carefully, tedious brushing of minute stone and ceramic particles, and sorting of items found. Workers should expect to pay for the privilege of putting in long hours of hard, meticulous, and slow work.

What Suzanne Angstadt, a housewife from Darien, Conn., Elaine Payne, a 9th-grade teacher from Dallas, and Walter Heinze, a retired corporation president, have in common is that they've all answered an ad similar to the one above. In short, they-and thousands of others, from students to lawyershave all been members of an archaeolog. ical excavation team. What makes the idea of literally digging into the past so appealing? Suzanne Angstadt says, "It's a wonderful way to get a historical frame of reference on ourselves, our culture, and our civilization. History is irresistible." Elaine Payne sees the experience as "a key to the past-a way of understanding who and what you are."

Exciting volunteer programs in this country and abroad give amateurs a chance to learn and work in real archaeological digs

By Elin McCoy

For Walter Heinze, "Ancient history has been an obsession with me from the time I was very small. When other boys were reading Horatio Alger, I was reading ancient history." Others mention the joy and awe of discovering and holding a tool used centuries, perhaps millennia, ago and the fascination of putting together bits of stone and earth to solve the puzzle of human history.

The participation of enthusiastic amateurs is a tradition in archaeology. Probably the best known contribution by an amateur is Heinrich Schliemann's discovery of Troy in 1871. Archaeology, like astronomy, is one of the few scientific fields that still gives nonprofessionals a chance to make a contribution.

> Amateurs feel the fascination of putting together bits of stone and earth to solve the puzzle of human history

Joining an archaeological expedition today is quite different than it was about 15 years ago when Walter Heinze first tried to accompany one. Professors at the University of Pennsylvania Museum, which sponsors a considerable number of excavations abroad, told him that he would only be in the way if he didn't have some professional expertise to contribute to a field team. Undaunted after several refusals, Heinze eventually spent a few months learning how to be an archaeological photographer and presented himself again. He was hired and left for his first dig, an excavation at Gordion in Turkey.
If you have a yen to "dig into the past," today there are a variety of ways you can participate, from attending field schools where on-the-job excavation training is available, to participation in archaeological activities through state societies and clubs, to joining an expedition and helping fund its work.

This fortunate situation has come about because many professionals are interested in seeing that amateurs get training so that their archaeological interest is channeled in useful directions. Some have founded field schools for just that purpose, as Hester Davis and Charles McGimsey have done in Arkansas. Mike Roberts, who heads the Institute for Conservation Archaeology at the Peabody Museum at Harvard, believes that amateurs have a role to play because there are not enough professional archaeologists to go around. However, he feels that amateurs digging without professional supervision contribute to the destruction of sites. "When you take the artifacts away from the site, as amateurs often do," he says, "you destroy the context from which you can learn about that artifact." Beginners often don't realize that "pot-hunting" not only has nothing to do with archaeologyit is the antithesis of it. Suzanne Angstadt points out, "Once you've been on a real dig with professionals, you no longer have the desire to take home the artifacts."

What you come home with from a "real dig" is often the sense of having participated not only in scientific research, but also in an adventure. The living and working conditions at archaeological sites are frequently primitive and strenuous, and, depending on the location, climatic conditions may be harsh. Only those who like the outdoors in all types of weather, are in good health, like roughing it in a tent, and can suspend their desire for fine food and air conditioning should apply. While not all conditions are as primitive as those which Walter Heinze experienced on a dig in the Desert of Death in Af-ghanistan-where the only fresh meat was local game, and water had to be brought from over a hundred miles away-many sites have only rudimentary shelters and no bathing facilities. "On the Earthwatch excavation at Natural Trap, Wyoming," Elaine Payne recalls, "we bathed in a horse trough, and it was a luscious feeling after a long day in the pit."

Elizabeth Whitehead, general secretary of the Archaeological Institute of America, has this advice for would-be field workers: "You need patience, endurance, and a good constitution."

Where can you go to learn about proper archaeological techniques and develop some of the skills needed on a real dig? There are scores of field schools in the United States and abroad where an adult amateur can get training. For a free list of field schools in the U.S. write: SAA Field School List, American Anthropological Association, 1703 New Hampshire Ave. NW, Washington, D.C. 20009. At this time there

Thomas King, an archaeologist with the Office of Archaeology and Historic Preservation of the National Park Service, offers this guideline: Make sure the school offers a broad acquaintance with different aspects of archaeology, and has various types of instruction-lectures, seminars, and laboratory instruction. The two field schools listed below are noted for the quality training they provide.

The 14th Annual Arkansas Archaeological Survey Training Program, to be held at a site in the northwest corner of Arkansas during the last three weeks of June, is an astonishing bargain considering the training and expertise that's offered. Participants may enroll in one or several of the 5-day basic and advanced seminars in excavation, mapping, site survey, laboratory techniques, photography, and so on, given by specialists, in addition to helping excavate the site. The cost: $$ 6$ to join the Arkansas Archaeological Society and $$ 5$ to enroll in the program. Trainees who wish to join the formal certification program pay an additional $$ 5$.

Participants can camp free in their own tents in an adjacent field and must provide their own breakfast and lunch. A local school provides bathing facilities and an evening meal (for an additional fee). Children are welcome as long as someone comes along to watch them. Registration is required by May 1. ## When Did You First Realize You Looked Older?

It happens to different women in different ways. Was it at the Cub Scout outing when you looked around and marvelled at how young some of the mothers seemed? Or perhaps you felt strangely out-of-place getting together for an informal reunion with some high school classmates. Could it have been that brief moment when his eyes barely flicked to a youngerlooking woman when you two went out to dinner?
No matter when it happens, it's startling to realize that you look older than you thought. And quite possibly older than you need to. Isn't it time you discovered the secret of the mysterious beauty fluid that can help a woman look younger? This secret, shared by women in many parts of the world, is known in the United States as Oil of Olay beauty lotion.

Oil of Olay penetrates quickly, bringing your skin a wealth of pure moisture, tropical oil and precious emollients to help ease away dryness. It's dryness, you know, that accents aging little wrinkle lines. Soon after you apply the skin-loving liquid, Oil of Olay helps make these lines less noticeable. You'll see the difference. And other people will be able to notice the change, too.

Smooth Oil of Olay on your face and throat. Within moments you'll notice your skin grow softer and smoother. And your complexion has a marvelous renewed lustre and radiance, a look you might not have expected to see again. One of the beauties of Oil of Olay is that it doesn't leave a greasy afterfeel or look. So naturally it's marvelous under makeup. Or, if you like to go barefaced, Oil of Olay gives you a dewy glow, even without makeup.

Oil of Olay, working with nature in its own mysterious way, helps maintain your skin's natural moisture balance so your skin can be softer and more supple. No wonder it can help you look younger.
Can you resist making Oil of Olay an essential part of your beauty ritual? If you're like most devoted users, you'll apply Oil of Olay every morning, either under makeup or to let your skin live in its own moist climate. Again every night, so the precious fluid can cherish your skin into quiet nocturnal hours. Any time during the day when your skin feels dry and you again want to increase the moisture level of your skin is a good time for gentling on Oil of Olay.

Isn't it exciting to look forward to the lovely possibility of looking younger? Who do you suppose will be the first to notice?

Beauty Secrets

If you go without makeup at home, keep a bottle of Oil of Olay handy enough to put in for an almostinstant dewy glow before answering the doorbell. Were you expecting someone special?

When you can take time for a leisurely bath, smooth Oil of Olay® on your face and throat while you're relaxing and unwinding in the tub. It feels marvelous, and the discreet fragrance that surrounds you is one more delicious addition to that peaceful time.

Archaeology at the state level

If you can't attend a field school far from home or take the time to join an archaeological excavation out-of-state, there are still ways to become involved in archaeology. Contact your state archaeological society for information on what's being done in your community. The Beginner's Guide to Archaeology by Louis Brennan (Dell, 1974; $2.25), gives a complete list of state archaeological societies, their addresses and activities, and detailed information on each state's sites and facilities.

He found it! Norwalk Community College dig member pleased with discovery.

Inquire, too, at local community colleges for information about their activities in archaeology. Some, such as Norwalk Community College in Norwalk, Conn., are starting experimental programs for "community avocational archaeologists." Until 3 years ago, Olivia Vlahos, an assistant professor at the college, had no idea there was untapped community interest in archaeology. Now Norwalk has a series of courses to certify local amateur archaeologists. Vlahos believes members of the program will provide a real service to the community and state-surveying the Connecticut area for important sites, helping local historical societies identify materials in collections, and assisting professional

Earthwatch and other digs

Earthwatch is, so far, a unique nonprofit organization. Based in Boston, it provides people and funds for scientific research expeditions, and provides a way for interested amateurs to be working members of a field research team. Most expeditions last about 3 weeks; costs range from about $$ 500$ to $$ 900$, excluding transportation to the archaeological site. Since participants' contributions help make the expedition possible, much of the amount may be tax deductible. All meals, accommodations, field gear, scientific instruments, as well as books sent about a month before the expedition, are included in the price.

Volunteers in Arkansas Archaeological Survey learn about treatment of artifacts.

Participants range in age from 16 to 75 , and come from a wide variety of backgrounds. The main thing to remember is that these are not tours or field trips; each participant is expected to be a working member of the field team. Among Earthwatch's many archaeological expeditions in which you can participate this summer or fall are an investigation of Liberty Hall, the first classical school of Revolutionary times in Virginia; an excavation of a recumbent stone circle in Ireland; an excavation and field school studying the Chaco Indian culture at the Salmon Ruins in New Mexico; excavations of caves and rock shelters on Majorca by the Deya Archaeological Museum and Research Center. The latter is an attractive trip for beginning enthusiasts-the center has plenty of facilities where the amateur can learn laboratory analysis methods and cataloguing, in addition to field techniques. Besides, the living and working conditions are relatively civilized-dormitory 56

Only Pella saves energy with more insulation for less money.
Only Pella makes a double glass wood window with a full 13/16" air space between the panes. And the greater the space between panes, the greater the insulation value. As a result, Pella's Double Glass Insulation System actually outperforms ordinary welded insulating glass, yet costs less per window! Add this fact to Pella's many other "Energy-Tight" features and you have a real money saver.

Only Pella windows are equipped with a hinging system that allows the sash to crank out a full $90^{\circ}$ to the center of the trame. You get lots of elbow room to clean outside glass - even reach the farthest corners - quickly and easily from inside your home. As a matter of fact, every ventilating window Pella makes - casement, double-hung, and awning - is engineered to be the easiest window you ever washed.

 that works like a window shade. It rolls up and out of sight to give you a crystal clear view and let in $20 \%$ more light. Then, when you need it, the screen pulls down and latches firmly into position. An interesting option to the standard inside screen on our Clad Casement.

Only Pella offers an aluminum exterior that needs no painting. Pella is the only major wood window manufacturer to give you the best of both worlds: aluminum cladding in attractive colors outside - all-wood construction inside. We think that's important. Most wood windows that offer clad protection, wrap the exterior finish all the way around the sash so you see it on the inside, which can cause decorating problems. But with Pella, all you see inside is rich, warm wood.

Only Pella offers instant privacy or shade. Only Pella makes the Slimshade ${ }^{\text {® }}$ It fits between the panes of our Pella Double Glass Insulation System and provides privacy at the touch of a dial. But even more important, the Slimshade ${ }^{\circledR}$ when completely closed, can reduce heat loss by as much as $62 \%$ and solar heat gain by up to $82 \%$ when compared with a single pane, unshaded window. An option that results in real energy savings.

Dr. Ruth Rice

Do touching, stroking, and rocking give more than comfort to a newborn baby? Recent research says yes! An experimental project developed by Dr. Ruth Rice, a Dallas nurse, psychologist, and specialist in neo-nati. ${ }^{1}$ development, shows that systematic touching, stroking, and rocking treatments substantially increase the neurological and physiological development of premature infants. Rice believes the treatments will benefit all newborns, though premature babies need and benefit from them most. Since she presented the results of her experiment at last year's American Psychological Association convention, articles about her work have appeared in two medical magazines, and she has received requests for information from parents, nurses, and hospitals all over the world, including Children's Hospital in Oklahoma City, where she recently trained nurses in her infant massage procedures.

Dr. Rice selected 30 premature babies born in a Dallas hospital for her experiment. She trained 18 nurses in the specific stroking and rocking techniques she designed to stimulate the infants' nerve pathways. After the "premies" were taken home, the nurses instructed and guided 15 of the mothers in the treatment, while the other 15-the control groupwere only given standard advice on caring for their babies. The mothers of the babies in the experimental group stroked their babies from head to foot with specified movements for 10 minutes four times a day. After each stroking session, the mothers rocked and cuddled their infants for five minutes. During the 30 days of treatments, each baby's head received over 3,200 strokes. Both groups of babies were fed the same prepared formula for four months.

Infant care: A touching story

After four months, the two groups of infants were examined thoroughly by a pediatrician, a pediatric nurse, and a psychologist, who assessed each baby's physical, neurological, muscular, and mental development. Results were impressive. The stroked babies showed a higher degree of neurological and mental development than the control babies, and they gained significantly more weight.

Rice's research grew out of her interest in tracing the origins of disabilities and defects common to prematures. She wondered whether the abrupt change from the richly stimulating environment of the womb to the relatively stark environment immediately after birth might be a cause. "Within the uterus," Rice says, "the amniotic fluids and the mother's movements are always stimulating the baby-it is being stroked constantly by these in a gentle, rhythmic way." Not only have the premature infants been deprived of the last weeks of intra-uterine tactile stimulation, but during the critical first weeks after birth they are further deprived in the isolation of the incubator. The stroking, touching, and rocking techniques Dr. Rice developed are intended to simulate the tactilekinesthetic stimulation the fetus experiences in the womb.

It may be possible to prevent or at least lessen neurological and muscular defects many premature babies suffer from, such as cerebral palsy, by such treatments, Dr. Rice feels. She also feels the experiments have important implications for the treatment of full-term in-

No fingerprints. Onemore thing youdidint have toask for:

Frankly, no one asked us to design a refrigerator door that would help hide fingerprints. But at Whirlpool, we look for problems-like fingerprints-and then design ways to solve them. Why? Simply because we know we have to build a better product than the next guy if we expect you to be a faithful customer.

So we made our refrigerator doors of textured steel that really minimizes fingerprints. Then, of course, we made them strong. And beautiful to look at.

Then we made sure you could order the doors arranged in the most convenient combination for you. Side-by-side. Or the featured freezer-on-the-top model that puts your frozen goods right at eye level and easy to reach.

Then we added convenient, adjustable shelvesone of which can roll out, be removed and used as a utility tray. Crispers with humidity seals specially designed to help food stay fresh and crisp. And porcelain enamel on steel interiors.

Put them all together and we believe you're talking about one of the best refrigerators available. And that's exactly what you should expect from Whirlpool.

1. For strength, wrap 2 -inch masking tape evenly and securely around box lid, and inside and outside of box.
2. For binding the top edge of box and lid, cut 2 strips of red construction paper 18 inches long and $11 / 4$ inches wide. Fit and prefold lid binding in one continuous strip, with $1 / 2$ inch on each side. Fold over excess paper at inner corners. Cut notches of excess paper and miter corners. Glue binding around edge of lid. For box binding, prefold notch corners, then cut into individual strips before gluing (see illustrations).

3. To make lining for the inner floor of the box, trace box on blue construction paper. Cut shape $1 / 4$ inch smaller all around; glue to box floor. Measure inner sides of box, cut blue paper $3 / 8$ inch lower than top edge so you can see red binding. Fit and prefold corners before gluing. Glue, smoothing bubbles. Trace, cut, glue outside bottom of blue paper.

4. Trace lid on blue paper; cut and glue on underside. Place between heavy books approximately 15 minutes to prevent lid from warping.
5. For box hinge, cut a 2 -inch-wide piece of linen (such as a dishtowel) slightly shorter than the back top of box. Saturate with glue. Line up lid with back of box top and glue lid to box, having $1 / 4$ inch linen on box, the rest on lid. Insert a cardboard strip between lid and box to allow hinge some play. Smooth it, weight with books, allow to dry at least 12 hours.
6. Measure exterior sides of box. Cut a continuous length of red paper to cover all but $1 / 4$ inch of box. Fit and crease corners before gluing. Use glue generously; smooth with palm of hand.

 light and a little benevolent neglect and give you year-round bloom

Among the many flowering house plants, the geranium is often overlooked because it is so "common." Yet it isn't really. There are many outstanding varieties, their shapely one- and two-toned leaves accompanied almost year-round by riotous rose and vermilion flowers in singles and doubles. Easy to grow, inexpensive, fragrant, here is a plant that thrives in the dry air so prevalent in today's centrally heated homes. It does need lots of sun, and a cooler spot than most house plants, but a western or southern exposure provides sufficient sunlight, and keeping the plant close to the window keeps it happy.

The most popular geraniums are probably the zonals, so named for the circular, or banded, markings dividing the scalloped leaves into various color zones. Within this group the most striking, and at the same time most problem-free, growers are the so-called French zonals. Their long-lasting flowers and striking foliage are hard to beat. Most of the zonals are hybrids, known as Pelargonium $x$ hortorum, with varietal names from 'Alpha,' a plant with single red flowers, to 'Zip,' darkzoned with cerise blossoms. There's a full range in between. $P$. peltatum, the ivy-leaved geranium, gets its popular name from its resemblance to English ivy. However, it goes the ivies one better by bearing a profusion of lavender, pink, cerise, or almost white blossoms, depending on the variety. As with all geraniums, the secret to a bushy flowering plant rather than a meandering one is occasionally pinching back heavily.

Care and feeding

geraniums are tough runs out the drainage hole at plants originating in the cool semi-arid regions around the Cape of Good Hope in South Africa. Their toughness, of all things, can cause problems when they are cultivated indoors, unless you respect it. Spoil them and you'll get nowhere.

Geraniums don't want the good loose rich soil most plants crave, nor large roomy pots, nor lots of water. What they do want is sun, plenty of it, or else 14 to 16 hours a day of a well-balanced fluorescent solar substitute. They also like a place on the cool side ( 50 to 70 degrees) and so are ideal right up against the windows, where the more delicate African violets and other flowering plants would be too chilled.

Unlike so many other house plants, geraniums do not like their soil constantly moist. Drench their pots until water the bottom, then do not water again until the soil is quite dry; with these splendid plants it is better to err on the too-littlewater side. And in order for that water to drain out well, the geraniums should be potted in a mix having a large percentage of sand. A good proportion is two parts topsoil or prepackaged potting soil to one part peat moss or chopped sphagnum moss and one part sharp or relatively coarse sand. Put several shards or pieces of broken pottery over the hole in the bottom of the pot to make sure drainage will not be a problem. Use a pot only one size larger than the last when repotting; geraniums need tight shoes to bloom. Also, they do better in clay pots than in plastic.

A common problem with geraniums, luckily one of the few, is that the lower leaves tend (Continued on page 211)

This picture just proves something that any farmer who grows things for a living could tell you.You get big lettuce (or tomatoes or whatever) when you fertilize and you get dinky ones when you don't. You can water and put down humus and compost and that's fine but it inn't the same as fertilizer.

We fertilized the big head but not the little. That's why one is big and the other is little.

Fertilizer is food you put in your soil to pass on to your vegetables. Nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium, chiefly. A good supply of nutrients is where all those fat tomatoes and big ears of corn come from.

Some fertilizers tell you to do it 2 or 3 times a crop. That's because their nitrogen usually "releases" right away and after a short time there just isn't much left.You only use our fertilizer once (unless you happen to live in the South and have very sandy soil).

You ought to put it down at planting time, and you can use our fertilizer on all vegetables. (Just do what it says on the box. It won't hurt your plants.)

There's hardly any work to it. Just put it down evenly and work it into the soil an inch or so.

We use everything we make so we know what it will do. You will get more beans or extra tomatoes or bigger lettuce and that's a promise. Our guarantee says, "If for any reason you are not satisfied with results after using this product, you are entitled back.

After a few months a puppy's outsides look full grown.

By the time he's four or five months old, your puppy may start to look like a full-grown dog.

But the fact is, he's still doing some very important growing on the inside.

It's during the second half of a puppy's first year that his bones seal off and harden. So he still needs extra calcium.

His muscles continue to gain strength and he needs extra protein for that.

Even his heart and nervous system are still developing. That calls for extra iron and vitamins.

That's why - for a full year - a puppy needs extra amounts of specific nutrients.
The kind he gets in Purina ${ }^{\text {® }}$ Puppy Chow ${ }^{R}$ - the special formula puppy food.

So for your puppy's health, see your veterinarian regularly. And feed your puppy Purina Puppy Chow for a full year. To be sure his insides catch up with his outsides.

You, along with everyone else, are probably concerned with making your home burglarproof. The days of the skeleton key are gone for all except the locksmith. A lock on all entrances, of course, is one of the prerequisites for your safety -on both doors and windows.
An ordinary lock on a double-hung window is not only a deterrent to intruders, but it also helps correctly position sashes that fit sloppily in their channels. This lock is easily installed by even the most mechanically inept. Center the hardware on the sashes-the larger piece with the lever on the top rail of the bottom sash, and the smaller piece with the hook on the bottom rail of the upper sash. Set the lever in the lock position under the hook, and with a pencil or an awl, mark the screw-hole locations. Do not try to drive the screws into the sash without using a screw starter, an awl, or a bit to predrill the holes in the wood. Next, replace the lock over the holes, insert the screws, and drive them tightly into the sash.

There are other types of sash locks that are installed near corners of railsthis kind of hardware secures the sash while providing ventilation by allowing one sash to be opened a few inches.

If you do not want to take the trouble to mount window locks, do the following:

1. Close the windows.
2. Put a pencil mark on the front face of the top rail of the bottom sash- $3 / 4$ of an inch from the jamb molding on either the right, left, or both sides, and $1 / 2$ inch down from the top.
3. With a $1 / 4$-inch bit, drill a hole $2^{1 / 2}$ inches deep (the hole will penetrate 1 inch into the upper sash).
4. Raise the bottom sash 2 inches, reinsert the bit in the hole, and bore another $21 / 2$-inch perforation.
5. Raise the sash 4 more inches from the preceding position and bore again.
6. Insert a $1 / 4$-inch machine bolt that is $21 / 2$ inches long in one of the aligning screw holes.

No matter which position the sash is in-closed, 2 inches open, or 6 inches open, once the bolt is in place, the window is locked to the outside.

Check door locks to see that they are in good working order. Give the tumbler and latch or deadbolt a squirt of powdered graphite or silicone (not oil). Tighten all screws that secure the lock to the door and the strike-plate to the jamb.

For doors, adding an auxiliary deadbolt cylinder lock is a wise precaution. More effective than the easily opened spring latch often found in older houses, it can be installed above or below the existing lockset. The deadlock feature is a strong metal bolt with a 1 -inch throw (minimum length) that bolts door and door jamb together with the turn of a key. Installation requires cutting a circular hole in the door stile for the lock cylinder, and one in the edge of the door for the bolt, then installing and screwing the hardware in place. The locks open and close by key from outside and inside, or by thumb knob inside. Another type, a rim deadbolt lock, can be surface mounted on the inside frame of a door and has two steel vertical interlocking bolts. For sliding glass doors a simple security device is a steel rod. Place one in the bottom track of each sliding door frame and the doors can't be pushed open.

How to make your house secureThe good old days, when back doors were left unlocked and we were all barefoot and innocent, safety-wise, seem far away. In keeping with the changing requirements of our age, here are some new safety devices on the market that can add a helpful measure of security to your home.

Honeywell, Honeywell Plaza, Minneapolis, Minn. 55408.

Digital door lock

Intruders can't pick this lock; keyless, it opens only with a digital combination, has no pins or tumblers to pick. Press the key switch on the panel and the battery-powered electronic system turns on. Then press, in correct sequence, the 7 -digit numbers of your combination and push the door open. Three distinct, easily remembered combinations of your choice are programmed into the system and can be changed if necessary. Lighted at night, it fits wood, aluminum, hollow metal doors. $$ 225$ with inside door hardware. Electronic Security Systems, Inc., P. O. Box 61403, Sunnyvale, Cal. 94088.

Beware of door stop

Breaking open an entrance door is hindered by this simple "Stop Alarm" device priced under $$ 10$. A rubber-footed door stop, it grips the floor tightly and sounds a 90 -decibel alarm twenty times from its aerosol container if forced entry is attempted. Held by a steel bracket at the door base, it can be installed permanently or suspended by cord from the doorknob. The small 2.5 -ounce stop folds up against the door when not needed, needs no electrical connections to operate its alarm warning of a break-in attempt. Sunbeam Appliance Service Co., 5600 Roosevelt Rd., Chicago, Ill. 60650.

Intercom alarm

This room-to-room intercom and FM/ AM radio system has a general alarm and an intruder-detection circuit with plunger or detector switches for attachment to house doors and windows. Controlled from a 3 -position switch at the base of the system's Master Station, the detector circuit is turned on at the "Home" position, turned off at "Off." The "Exit" position lets you leave and reenter without sounding the alarm. A break-in sets off the alarm whether you are home or away and even if the intercom is off. NuTone Div. Scovill, Madison and Red Bank Roads, Cincinnati, Ohio 45327.

Double protection

Door hardware with double locks provides double security. The Schlage Lock Co. " $G$ " Series, in various finishes and styles, combines a 1 -inch deadbolt with a $1 / 2$-inch deadlock latch. From outside, the deadbolt locks or unlocks the door by key; on the inside, a twist of the thumbturn throws the bolt and locks the door. For double protection, the deadlatch locks automatically on closing the door. For safe, quick exit, both deadbolt and latch retract with the thumbturn. A steel insert in the deadbolt, armor plate over the lock, and a recessed key cylinder are added burglar bafflers. Schlage Lock Co., San Francisco, Cal. 94119.

Palm Beach is full of examples of big houses built for entertaining early in the 20th century. The Breakers, an old hotel that's still a beautifully functioning place, was also built in this period.

Georgia

The French, the English, the Spanish, and the Indians all quarreled over Georgia territory. Once Georgia became a state, troubles continued with the Civil War and Sherman's march to the sea. Atlanta was 27 years old when Sherman burned it and so the historic houses today are the Victorian ones. In the Inman Park Restoration, a several-block area full of quirky Victorian houses, the O'Keefe house built in 1896 is a wonderful example of the asymmetrical Queen Anne style. All of the windows are different in spacing and shape. A shingled house, the exterior woodwork varies from pattern to pattern. The porch goes all the way around, but the second-story porch, or belvedere, is in two sections, front and back.

Columbus, Macon, Athens, and Valdosta all have houses of interest, but it's in Savannah where house lovers ra: really dig in and stay for awhile. The waterfront has all sorts of old commercial buildings; there's a whole section of restored Victorian houses. The city itself was laid out in the 18 th century so that the inner city had 52 parks, and there are numerous handsome early 19thcentury houses. A good example of the town houses in the Federal period, the Davenport house has a sober symmetrical façade, with simple English brickwork, a fan-lit doorway, and a graceful elliptical stairway with a pretty iron rail. On the second floor there are four large bedrooms, each on a corner. Downstairs the layout consists of a central hall with rooms opening off to either side, still perfect for today's living. Of the same period but more strongly classical is the Owens-Thomas house. The side balcony shows the combination of the newly popular cast iron with classical Corinthian elements and acanthus leaf scrolls. It is a two-story brick and stucco house on a raised basement with a classical floor plan: a large central hall flanked by rooms of the same width. Inside are the Adam influences: In the drawing room a continuous Greek fret rings the ceiling and in the corners sunburst spandrels complete the transition from oval to square.

Kentucky

At the time of the Revolution, woodsmen were hacking their way through the wilderness to open a passage from Virginia to Kentucky through the Cumberland Gap. The state has three distinct areas: the lakes in the west, the Bluegrass in the north central section, and the mountains in the east. Several houses caught my interest. ## Louisiana Creoles-Americans of Spanish origin; Cajuns-Americans of French-Canadian descent; plus American descendents of the Irish, English, and Germans, all settled in the Mississippi delta country. The north is rural: full of rivers, hills, forests. For a variety see the very different houses of country plantations and the town houses of New Orleans. Around St. Francisville is a series of big, late-18th-century and ante-bellum plantation houses done Louisiana-style. Oakley Plantation, (see page 84), converts the classical peristyle to its own many-storied use: The first floor veranda is open; the second is shuttered in, almost like a sleeping porch. Open daily April through October. Nearby is Rosedown, an ante-bellum house with 17 thcentury French gardens.

Gallier House, New Orleans.
In New Iberia, the National Trust property, Shadows-on-the-Teche, is a typical classical revival town house built right on the bayou.

In New Orleans, two 19th-century town houses have a very different feel. The Gallier House, which is open daily except Monday, has a double gallery (that's what porches, balconies, or verandas are called in New Orleans), which had cast iron instead of wood columns for support. The elaborate ironwork in the second story is typical both of New Orleans and the period in general. Inside the double parlors are separated by gilt-capitaled, fluted Corinthian columns making the house Italianate outside and classical inside. These Adam-inspired, though much diluted, interior details are also typical of the Hermann-Grima house with its wrought-iron decorated double transom and curving stairwell.

Mississippi

Spaniards followed De Soto to this countryside 80 years before the Mayflower landed in Massachusetts. Cotton was grown along the Mississippi almost since that time. With the river, the railroad, and the Natchez Trace converging in Natchez in the 19th century, there was prosperity enough to produce many ante-bellum houses. Both the Natchez Garden Club and the Pilgrimage Garden Club have taken great care in restoring them. Some are in private hands and open during spring house tours, and others are open year-round. Atypical of these big Greek Revival houses is Longwood, a Moorish octagonal house built just before the Civil War and never completed inside. All the rooms open onto a central oval hall, which gives a great sense of interior space but little privacy.

Longwood, 1860's, unfinished. Natchez.

Pratt-Thomas House, 1833, Columbus.
Columbus is a very old Mississippi town with many old houses. The PrattThomas house is typical of a small antebellum house, called a raised cottage because of its high basement. The elliptical staircase becomes a device for getting people from the ground up to the second story first floor.

North Carolina

North Carolina, twelfth of the original thirteen states, is a sneak hit for anyone who likes to comb the countryside for o!d houses. One of its beautiful mountain resorts, Asheville was a little BadenBaden without the waters around the turn of the century and later. In 1890, George Vanderbilt began to assemble the pieces of a French château. Richard Morris Hunt, architect of other huge Vanderbilt palaces, was in charge and produced a pretty though still very large country house. If you associate this sort of thing with Newport, R.I., see how one of these big houses can look if set in the rural countryside of the foothills of the Great Smoky Mountains. Though balanced, the façade is asymmetrical with an entrance pavilion that includes flying buttresses and clustered pinnacles. Thomas Wolfe also lived in Asheville. The Wolfe house and Vanderbilt's Biltmore are open to the public.

Back in time and of a totally different feeling is the old Salem restoration in Winston-Salem. This entire town, which was founded by a group of immigrant Moravians from Pennsylvania, was begun in 1766. A very different sort of place than other city-towns of the late 18th century. Both more medieval and more distinctly European in their halftimbered construction, these houses relate more to Jamestown than anything else.

In New Bern another one-of-a-kind, Tryon Palace, was built at the same time as Salem. Built for the then-governor by an English architect, it was one of the stylistically most advanced houses of its time. It burned in 1798 and has been restored. Tryon relates to the most beautiful late Georgian houses being built in Virginia at the time. Watch for the threedimensional treatment of the façade: projecting pediments, colonnades, freestanding portico, plus a low hipped roof that was even newer stylistically than everything else. Open daily except Mon.

South Carolina

There are many houses to see in South Carolina but so many of note are gathered in Charleston that it's easiest to concentrate on them. The single house is the perfect example of a local house type that evolved to suit the climate. A single room wide and two rooms deep, and sitting sideways to the street, these houses are entered through two front doors. The street door opens onto a porch at the end of which is another door. The single house is several stories high, each story with a porch or "piazza" overlooking the garden. If these houses had faced the street, the piazzas would not have been private outdoor sitting rooms. The picture of Church street shows a row of single houses. The Edmonston Alston House is an elaborate single house. The Nathaniel Russell House is the perfect example of a Federal house in the Adam style. The outside is simple and the inside more elaborate with oval rooms, a flying staircase. The music room in particular is a combination of Adam elements and Charleston adaptations. Four double sash windows open onto a balcony, not as French doors would, but for ventilation. Two panels mirrored to look like windows line the doorway into the room and reflect the light and the gardens. Window frames and entablature are carved wood; swags are putty; frieze all putty, and fireplace

Nathaniel Russell room, Charleston.

Single houses, Charles St., Charleston. both wood and putty. Disguising of the materials is an Adam characteristic as is all the carving, the use of white and gilt.

Andrew Johnson House, Greeneville.

The Hermitage, Nashville.

Tennessee is a state of mountains and rivers brought under control by the TVA. Andrew Jackson and Andrew Johnson both had houses here. In Greeneville, Andrew Johnson's 1850 brick house expands away from the street like a New England saltbox. The initial square brick structure has two rooms on the first floor and two on the second. It became an Lshape with a later addition. Open daily.

Outside of Nashville, Andrew Jackson's big Greek Revival house, The Hermitage, is also open to the public. Look for the two front doors, one on the first floor, one entering the upstairs porch from the second floor, a curious way of announcing on the exterior of the house that the central halls, both upstairs and down, are identical. The massive cornice that tops the big six-column colonnade spanning the façade hides gables and windows of a third floor.

Virginia

Virginia represents Southern architecture in its finest hour, not only in the 18th century but also in a variety of periods. Near Norfolk, the Adam Thoroughgood House built in 1640 (see page 84) is a handsome example of 17 th-century architecture, which still looked back to medieval-European rural house-types. This is the prosperous house of a once-indentured servant who made good in Virginia, a yeoman's house of the sort prevalent before the development of big landowners, who began to build the more style-conscious plantation houses.

Stratford Hall, near Fredericksburg.
Stratford Hall is one of the early big country houses in the 18 th century. The home of the Lees, it is a massive H shape, austere but very classical. It perhaps relates more to mid-16th-century Italian palaces than to other, also-massive, early Georgian houses.

Carter's Grove is a remarkable early Georgian house owned by Colonial Williamsburg. The façade is a continuous broken line by a central square flanked by lower wings stretching out to either side. Inside, large rooms were set aside for entertaining and all the household activities went on in separate houses or dependencies. Westover, also on the James River, is another Georgian house that relates to Carter's Grove but was built earlier.

The 18th century in its most classical mood is Monticello, which takes the harmonies of mid-18th-century architecture and uses them in the form of their original inspiration-as a Greek temple. It is also with Monticello that modern conveniences begin to appear: dumbwaiters, bedrooms that work like sitting rooms, and dependencies placed underground.

How to go:

Since a car is a must for this sort of trip, airline packages, called "Fly-Drives," make a complicated reservation process into a simple one. By calling the reservations number at American, Delta, National, or United, one can book roundtrip airfare, a rental car, and hotel rooms in as many states as you like, all at once. Southern Airways and Piedmont also offer Fly-Drives into certain cities. Though the South has beautiful, one-of-a-kind resort hotels, there may not be one everywhere you go. So do rely on the big hotelmotel chains for clean, functional rooms. Sheraton, Marriott, Holiday Inn, Ramada are all over the South. A good guidebook is a must. Mobil, Fodor, AAA have them. Rand McNally's Discover America Guide details historic houses and sites. The best house guide: An American Heritage Guide to Historic Houses of America.

The spirit of Marlboro in a low tar cigarette.

Lighter in taste. Lower in tar. And still offers up the same quality that has made Marlboro famous.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

Courage, vision, feeling. In our work and in our lives, that's the true spirit of romance. It's doing whatever you do lustily and with passion, exploring, taking risks, following impulses, and convention be damned. In decorating, romance gives us the courage to make things pretty, to put our feelings on the line. And why not? While our skins are toughened by the outside world, a little honest sentiment at home reminds us that we can still be vulnerable, that we also have a heart. It's not that we don't want to face reality, we just need to sand down its jagged edges, to create a personal reality of our own.

When you create a room that dares to show how you really feel, and what you really love, you've captured the modern spirit of romance. Because romance in decorating has nothing to do with anyone's notions but yours-your sense of freedom, self-expression, surprise. The same qualities that put excitement in your work, sparkle in your eyes, and interesting people in your life. Starting here, a gathering of the houses and gardens of some very romantic spirits-encouragement for your own to rise and shine.

DARING TO BE ROMANTIC BY JANE O'REILLY

I$y$ notions of what is romantic were fairly well fixed when I was 10 years old and first heard the song about a stranger seen across a crowded room on some enchanted evening. I am still quite attached to those notions. Champagne is, of course, romantic. So are white lilacs out of season, long-distance telephone calls at midnight, Fred Astaire movies, fur rugs before bedroom fireplaces.

In time, some of my notions of the romantic had to be given up. Maribou bed jackets made me sneeze, red leather address books were too often lost. Lacetrimmed nightgowns hand-hemmed in Belgium were too often thrown into the laundry with the sweat socks.

As the proportion of sweat socks rose in relation to the tattered remnants of lace nightgowns, I reflected sorrowfully, and with considerable lack of originality, that life is not, as a rule, very romantic.

I was wrong. Life is romantic; infinitely unpredictable, endlessly possible. What was not romantic was my own stubborn attachments to a few ideas of what romance should be. Limousines and candlelight and meaningful glances are all right as far as they go, but they don't go very far. As concepts, they serve best in advertisements. In real life, they are somewhat banal, and the constant effort to avoid banality is the essence of romanticism.

The Oxford English Dictionary defines romantic as that which is ideal, purely imaginary, having no real existence.

*  Right: Flowers and romance-it was love at first sight when they were first introduced ages ago-and the honeymoon promises to last forever. "Romanticism is here to stay-and flowers say it best," declares Gustav Zumsteg, who has designed sheets that show he means it: They're patterned with tiny violets stretching to infinity. Designer Mark Hampton and his wife loved the idea so much that they chose the sheets for their own bedroom. A violet garden covers walls, bed, and valances. Shirred, sheets become curtains and table skirt. The garland border on bed sheets turns up in a pattern of its own on comforter, chair, and canopy lining.  Opposite page, insert: In the bedroom, wall-to-wall flowers are clarified and anchored by a natural straw rug, white night tables, and white porcelain lamps. According to the dictionary, a romantic novel is that in which the imagination is most free; romantic music combines imagination and passion; and a romantic project (a bedroom, a valentine, a trip to the moon) is that which goes beyond what is customary or practical.

Afree flight of the imagination, a leap beyond the expected and the ordinary, risks taken to achieve an idea-those are the truly romantic things.

Places, objects, music are not in themselves romantic simply because we think they are or because someone else once declared them to be. They become romantic only in so far as someone has made them expressions of a romantic idea, has invested them with imagination and daring.

Nature is the most romantic, because it is never ordinary, never predictable, and can never be duplicated even by the most unlimited imagination. The Grand Canyon, a prairie, a waterfall, one violet are each in their way very close to some ideal form.

People who do not wonder at the world they live in are not romantic. It is not necessary to live in constant fatuous preoccupation with the beauty of a blade of grass, but a person who never notices grass denies the essential inspiration to the mind and spirit. The poet Yeats lived in a cloud, but suddenly some part of the world would appear to him as a glorious unique revelation and he would sit right down and write a poem about it.

A picnic in the snow beside a winter-bound lighthouse is a response to a place, and a shared pienic is a response to people who notice (Continued on page 115)

Left: The romance of ruffles -there's nothing softer, more feminine, more inviting. In this bedroom, designer Zandra Rhodes used them abundantly on the freestanding bed's pillow shams, dust ruffle, and headboard. On the banquette Miss Rhodes used sheets shirred at their borders and flowing to the floor in a double-ruffled skirt. "I wanted to design a revolutionary sheetsomething as luxurious as the hand-embroidered linen sheets of days gone by," says Miss Rhodes. "So I added a 3-inch pleated satin frill." "Zandra's Octagon" was a natural for octagonal pillows and forms a geometric design for the screen. "Zandra's Trellis" on bed, banquette, and curtains. Sheets by Wamsutta. while the others are warm at home watching the football game. It is not romantic if two people have trudged out in the cold and the wet dragging along some hot cocoa because they think it will make a nice setting for romance.

The lights on the George Washington Bridge at night are not romantic because they form a nice backdrop, but because they are there because someone dared to imagine such a bridge.

It is the imagination that counts, the risks taken, the expression of self. That is why travel can be romantic, but not always. The willingness to experience makes Cleveland romantic for some people, but Venice can be a bore for a grudging spirit.

Most Americans believe that without love there can be no romance. Of course love makes everything better. It is the principal adventure available to every human. Being in love is letting oneself in for a flight of extreme romantic daring-risky, idealizing, a time when the sweat socks and banality of life are transcended.

But we do not recognize that our responses to heroes and heroines, to the exhilarations of spring, to the delights of art are also romantic. When we deny the sources of those responses, we deny our emotions, lose touch with ourselves.

Showing our emotion is good for us. Emotions are the sources of our (Continued on page 148)
A) Left: Romance as only the O- 19th century knew how-all in soft colors, full of creature comforts, and with flowers everywhere. That was the inspiration Françoise de la Renta and Robert Perkins drew upon when they designed the bedroom here, with curtains gracefully drawn back to reveal a sitting room at one end, a bath at the other. To articulate their mood, they used sheets: as curtains hung from brass rods; patterned with wild flowers on the bed and Austrian window shades. And on walls and the outside of the bathtub, they applied sheets with roses and lilies of the valley scattered across a background of stripes. A border of voluptuous roses adds an extra molding around windows. Inset, left: In the sitting room, table skirt and pillows made from sheets. there's something dreamy about a tiny cottage hidden in a clearing and surrounded by a flower garden. It's the quintessential rose-covered cottage where living is simple but comfortable, the decorating unpretentious but unabashedly pretty outdoors and in. "It's like living in a birdhouse," says designer-owner John Robert Moore. "It reminds me of a thatched-roofed English cottage, the kind you read about in storybooks." So the first thing he did was plant a proper English garden of climbing roses, larkspur, and hollyhocks. Then he restored the interior so that now it looks like the sea captain's house it was 200 years ago: "Everything that was once charming about the house had been hidden." Beginning in the living room, he removed 200 years' worth of accumulated paint and wirebrushed ceiling beams leaving some of the old paint. He scraped the fireplace, Dutch ovens, and nearby cabinets and found antique English flowered fireboard. In the eat-in kitchen, he removed a ceiling and uncovered the original peak and beams. He painted the linoleum floor a leafy green, and while the paint was still wet, textured over it with a sponge. The little house is furnished with found-furniture and antiques, all covered in different lighthearted prints. The table skirt is an unfinished appliquéd quilt. "Patterns blend naturally," says Mr. Moore. "But you have to know when to use a bold print and when to use a small one."

STAYMG YOUNG LONGER

Alex Comfort, author of The Joy of Sex, offers his own provocative views on living a long, vigorous, and solvent life in America today  By Caroline Seebohm

Editor's note: Alex Comfort, author of the best-selling The Joy of Sex and More Joy, is a physician and biologist. He is one of the founders of the new discipline of gerontology, the study of the scientific nature of the aging process. But his energies have been focused most recently on social gerontology -the role of old people in society-and his new book, A Good Age (Crown), is really a consciousness-raising work which he hopes will do as well as The Joy of Sex in educating both young and old on how to grow up without "agism." The book is dedicated to his father, who died in 1976 at the age of 94-"after about 2 months of old age," says Dr. Comfort.

(0)Id people are simply young people who have been around a long time." Read that again. It's Alex Comfort's opening salvo in his crusade against "agism." In The Joy of Sex, Dr. Comfort reassured people about the myths surrounding sexual behavior. Now, in his book A Good Age-using his 25 -year background on human biology and gerontologyhe has decided to try to reassure people about the myths surrounding age.
"Old people are people who lived a certain number of years, and that is all," deciares Dr. Comfort. "If they have physical problems, so do young people. If they get lonely, so do teen-agers. As you grow up, you don't feel any different. You go on feeling young, with added experience."

It sounds so simple, put like that. And reassuring. But surely it's not that easy. What about the "aging process?" Doesn't that get in the way of feeling young?
"Of course there is biological aging," says Dr. Comfort. "The body, hair, ears, and eyes undergo changes. You tend to need less sleep. You may forget things a little more easily. But if you exercise, you won't slow up much physically. And intelligence does not change, in spite of what you may have heard. Those images of thousands of brain cells being destroyed daily are very misleading-the loss is trifling compared to the amount of brain in reserve."

There are also some changes in human sexual performance -but not what we have been led to expect. "Every study shows that a high proportion of older people are either still having sex or would welcome an opportunity to have it, because they are fully able to enjoy it," declares Dr. Comfort. "There are some signs of change. But in the absence of disease or the belief that the old are or should be asexual, sexual requirement and sexual capacity are lifelong." Dr. Comfort is very reassuring to the new generations in this context. "Almost certainly the 'new old' will score higher because they have grown up living sexually, view sex positively, and are determined to go on as long as possible in the style they have known." The author of The Joy of Sex knows whereof he speaks.

According to Dr. Comfort, the problems of aging have very little to do with physiological symptoms. "Biological aging only accounts for 25 percent of the difficulty," he believes. "The real problem is the attitudes we have toward people who are no longer young-attitudes that affect their behavior."

In other words, it's a question of role-playing. Remember when the Women's Movement started pointing out how women were expected to be the weaker sex, stay-at-homes, earn less money, faint at the sight of blood, and so forth? Women were playing roles assigned to them by society. Older people are forced to role-play in exactly the same way. They are supposed to be infirm, physically slower, slower on the uptake, no longer useful to the world.

"Two days ago at a movie I saw an older and a younger woman sit down together," Dr. Comfort relates. "I think they were mother and daughter. The old lady was trying to wind her watch. She was doing it slowly. The young woman took it away from her and said, 'I'll wind it.' Her mother said, 'I'll never learn about this watch if you don't let me wind it. I've had it a year and haven't gotten to wind it yet.' The daughter said, 'But you're turning it the wrong way.' And the old lady said, with great determination, 'But I wasn't trying to wind it, I was trying to set the hand.'
"Now that old lady knew perfectly well how to wind her watch, and she should have been allowed to do it. Her daughter "childrenized" her. You go into a restaurant and see an old woman and a young woman at a table, and the waiter comes up to the young woman and says, 'Does she like her eggs sunny-side up?'-as if the older woman was some sort of mute buffoon who couldn't order a meal. Here's another example: Old people take a lot of naps. People think there's something wrong with them because they often nod off, but actually they simply sleep less at night and nap more. Society points a finger and says, 'You're no good any more.' Not only that, but society's prejudices indoctrinate us before they hit us. On this basis we obligingly become nonpersons when the clock points to the appropriate age."

There's one bright light at the end of this tunnel. "You can change attitudes. You can fight back." This is Dr. Comfort's call to the barricades. "When a minority has been subjected to intensive propaganda by society, a certain amount of con-sciousness-raising can bring them finally to refuse to tolerate that sort of treatment. People have stopped using insulting ethnic names about each other now to the extent that they did. In movie mythology, all Mexicans were villains, all Englishmen were comic aristocrats, all cowboys were heroes.

forcolor

To be born with a passion for color can land you on the side of angels. It can also-if over-indulgedsubmerge you in an eddy of riotous hues-and that's not what color is for. Color must be handled with wisdom, a strategy not always easy for people in love. No one knows this better than Vivien Duffield who heaps her color passion on her house: "I could never live in a mouse-colored house," she says. "The more color poured into a room the better I like it. But, after a succession of houses, I have learned that vivid rooms lined up like tin soldiers lose their impact."

With this house, she decided to change the rhythm-so she could have all the color she loved and still stay in control. But to do this called for a master. Built in 1896 in a curious semi-Gothic style, the house offered only two inducements: space, and a magnificent lake view. She called her friend Tony Cloughley, an architect and interior designer who had done two houses for her, and asked him to inspect the monster. Did it have any chance? Yes-but it wouldn't be easy. And it wasn't. "It took 3 years, and I learned how to mix cement, and make color work."

Far left: The Chinese Room, so-named because of its sweet, pungent red, its lacquered furniture, and its painted silver wallpaper, is a very good example of how to make color more intense simply by isolating it. The room opens on one side to a terrace, all green and white and studded with scarlet flowers, on the other to a stone and steel entrance hall that is also a little museum. There is nothing in it but painting and sculpture. "The red fabric," says Mrs. Duffield, "is linen the color of a beautifully ripe red raspberry. I like pink-reds better than the hot ones, although they have their place-which to me is the garden.'

"The green lacquer dining room is a reminder of pine trees"

"At heart, I suppose, I'm a blue girl," says Mrs. Duffield. "I know what Ruskin meant when he said that blue is an everlasting source of delight. So my sitting room is a Chinesey blend of robin's-egg and faded jeans." Green, too, is one of her delights. The dining room has lacquered walls the color of certain pine needles-"I grew up in an English pine-circled house"-and her bedroom, a combination of apple and Adam greens, is "cool as peppermint." Colors are kept from rubbing elbows by buffers of neutral-colored areas. You walk along through beige or white halls, open a door-it's like coming upon a rare shell in the sand. "An invaluable lesson, thanks to trial and error and Tony Cloughley, who taught me how to have all the color I want, but no monotony, no clash. If color were a cake, I'd have mine-and eat it too!

Right: The dining room, with mirrored shutters to reflect more green; table designed by Alessandro Albrizzi.

There are three dominating colors in this part of the world: silver, blue, and green -a lake, the sky, and the trees. And Mrs. Duffield didn't want to lose them indoors. "I wanted nature inside as well as out, either as an echo or a reflection." So she has a blue room and a green room since these are "colors that give you the sky, grass, and leaves. Not real, of course, but what beautiful echoes." She papered the Chinese room in shiny silver to echo the glimmer of the nearby lake. And for real reflection, Mrs. Duffield used lots of mirrors. The dining room has mirrored shutters, and the bath is wrapped in mirrored squares. "If you want to, you can see yourself and the lake reflected in twenty-seven ways. I counted them." So, short of taking off the roof, there is as much of the outdoors inside as can be managed. Even the Chinese Room plays its nature-loving part: "It's a flower."

named Michael Balog constructed last February in New York a bedroom/sitting room in which everything from the furnishings to the knickknacks on the bureau tops was covered with a solid coat of paint-in just one color. Three such colored worlds were created over a period of weeks while artists, designers, collectors, and the curious came to have a look and have their reactions recorded on film. Some twenty people spoke with us about their feelings toward the megadose of red, white, and black-and-white that Balog chose to experiment with. He is shown in a room he constructed for House & Garden at right with Mary Margaret Loughead, who helped him assemble the project. The quotes, also at right, are for your consideration and amusement. Some responses were positive, some critical, but everyone reacted strongly and everyone felt that his appreciation for the natural colors of life had been greatly enhanced by the experience of being plunged into a totally monochromatic environment. What actually happened in the colored rooms? We asked a psychiatrist and an optometrist to comment. ,

Don't be surprised when others do not find your color choice as pleasurable as you do.

Ilike to live right at the door to the garden. If I'm going to shell peas I want to sit on the doorstep and do it in the sun," says Robert Carrier, who lives in England in a historic stately home that's also a threestar restaurant. Hintlesham Hall is, not unexpectedly, formal-at least the public areas. But when it came to planning his own rooms, Mr. Carrier decided to express his unique brand of comfortable nonconformity. "I wanted one garden, which becomes a sort of annex to the kitchen, a place to prepare vegetables as well as pick them. The real work center, however, is in the center of the common room-a big hickory-topped work island, always ready for action, that also turned out to be the entertaining center. The only division between living-dining and kitchen area, it serves both handily: On the kitchen side, cupboards and drawers hold pots, pans, utensils; within reach of the dining table, storage for china and glasses.

big workroom. A studio, a dining room, a place where I can paint if I want to, a place to cook in all the time, where friends can be with me while I do it, where the dog can be on the sofa. A really comfortable, what they used to call in the 18 th century, common room. An uncommon common room." His very 20th-century version is livingroom, dining room, and kit-chen-a combination more and more people are discovering as they realize how much they live in their kitchens. But Mr. Carrier added one important element: The door opens directly on a vegetable Karen Radkai

It's every bit as glorious as a flower garden," says Mr. Carrier, who used Mount Vernon and other 18th-century gardens" as inspiration even though "we began with one of the best nettle beds and boulder crops in East Anglia. For drainage we rolled corrugated cardboard boxes tightly, placed them in rows the length of the garden, and when they rotted we had our channels." Each bed has a crop and a border specially chosen for the happiest combination of color and shapes like dark wild strawberry greens with a border of silver-gray santolina, and cascading beans with fiery orange nasturtiums. "One patch is all dark and mysterious with purslane, purple basil, arugula, and bay ... a sort of herbal fugue." Mr. Carrier calls it a trompe l'oeil garden because it looks like more work than it is. Since everything's in small areas, he's not daunted by great stretches of gardening. "In a 10minute burst of energy I can completely weed, plant, or pick a whole patch."

Daring to be romantic
creativity. We talk about "creative outlets," and the phrase means a good deal more than a bit of therapeutic piecework. It means a way of shaping and disciplining, examining and patterning our emotions. If we deny our feelings, the energy will come out in much less desirable ways: headaches and depressions and long winter colds, a general sense of being oppressed by people and places.

Nothing can be romantic unless it is an expression of one's own self and emotions. The trouble is, one of the great dilemmas of life is trying to figure out who one's self is. That is why people's houses are so endlessly fascinating. The spaces people live in always reflect who they are, one way or another, and their bedrooms are the most revealing of all.
I think of a dear friend's house, each room carefully planned with comfortable chairs and soothing colors. And yet her bedroom is furnished with a Spartan single bed, with a plain white coverlet, and solid mahogany furniture.

Other friends have acquired an apartment full of expensive, "good," impressive antiques and artifacts. All of it is uncomfortable and forbidding, stiff and unwelcoming. No wonder I never quite believed their hearty invitations to make myself at home. Even they have not made themselves at home there.

I would far rather visit my friend whose loft studio has somehow grown, an uncontrollable mass of plants, cats, odd pots and pans tumbled in with the books. But it is a reflection of her, warm and spontaneous, taking pleasure in insignificant but pleasing bits.

My own bedroom is an uneasy compromise between my romantic ideal and the unenhanced me. I would prefer a bedroom which achieved the effect of a wisteria arbor in full bloom, but at the moment the piles of books and papers and mystery novels drifting about the counterpane seem a truer reflection.

I have a large brass bed, which I bought many years ago in England, at a moment of faith and hope in the future. I imagined myself conceiving and bearing children in the bed, and finally spending a peaceful old age propped up on lace pillows in it. The bed lasted longer than the marriage, and I have never acquired the lace pillows. But the bed is my symbol of a readiness to take romantic risks. It pleases me.

A room will never, never be romantic if it does not reflect the person whose room it is. A habit of leaving galoshes on the chest of drawers may be regrettable esthetically, but it will still make a more comfortable room than one so perfectly created in someone else's image of the romantic that the inhabitant seems to be an accessory.

And now that I have insisted on a reflection of one's own imagination as well as taste. I wonder how I can go about creating a wisteria arbor in a New York apartment.

It's marvelous to enter a house through the kitchen -it's warm and friendly, especially if there's something cooking on the stove," says Mrs. Harry Brague, who owns a very inviting kitchen in an old Dutch house she renovated. You enter directly into the convivial keeping room warmed by a huge stone fireplace with original mantel. The kitchen occupies one part of the keeping room, dining another, so guests can watch while Mrs. Brague finishes one of her soups or stews. "The ambiance lends itself splendidly to the one-dish dinners I love to prepare." She finds inspiration for new dishes by opening the refrigerator First she decides what needs using up, then concocts such things as a relish of vegetables too abundant to eat fresh. The possibilities for adventures are endless. "I believe there are two kinds of cooks-tasters and bakers. I'm a taster. I use recipes as guidelines and keep tasting until it's right. Sometimes I seem to have a good portion of the meal eaten before it gets to the table!" Often much of the food is prepared ahead-dessert and bread stored in the freezer; stew to be reheated. "I'm very organized; since the nearest store is a 12 mile round trip, I try not to forget things. I drive into the city occasionally and pick up things I need then." Mrs. Brague feels the nicest thing you can do for family and friends is to cook for them: "It says you like them."

Mud pies and other good and easy desserts children can help make

Cooking is as much a matter of texture as taste. And that makes it a natural for children -you get to lick your fingers a lot. Mrs. Mitchell Rosenthal teaches her fearless hands-on cooking methods to her children. Ten-year-old Alexis often works with her mother in the kitchen turning out special dishes under her mother's watchful eye; "with Lexy's fast hands and organized mind, she's a great help to me," says Ellen Rosenthal, one of James Beard's talented students. Lexy specializes in cake decorating and lace cookies-her personalized birthday cakes are in demand among her friends. For more complicated dishes, she dons the assistant chef's cap and helps her mother. Lexy also plans the mechanics of the Rosenthals' dinner parties: "I just tell her how many people," says her mother. "She sets the table, works out the seating, helps me cook. Mud pies, bread-and-butter pudding, and the others we did here are return performance favorites."

$\underset{\text { of fruit liqueurs }}{\mathrm{AB}}$Add a highlight of fresh fruit flavor to drinks and desserts By Anthony Dias Blue

Oranges from Spain, cherries from Yugoslavia, black currants from France-you don't have to toup the world to taste these exotic fruits. A few bottles of fruit liqueur can bring you an international garden of flavors.

Fruit liqueurs, brilliant in color, capturing the flavor of fresh fruit, always high in sugar, are different from eau de vie, a dry, clear, high-proof, distilled fruit spirit, and from domestic fruit-flavored brandies, 70-proof grape brandies flavored with fruit concentrates.

Fruit cordials can be sipped straightout of brandy snifters to better appreciate the bouquet-on the rocks, or blended into cocktails. You can glaze a duck with liqueur made of oranges from Spain, liven up French toast with oranges from the Caribbean, lace a fruit salad with marasca cherries, or spice your champagne with French black currants.

Recipes  and quick tips

Cranberry-tinted vodka: In a tall glass stir half vodka and half cranberry liqueur (Regnier Cranberria or Heublein's Boggs) over plenty of ice.

cherries, and pistachio nuts. Splash with a little Grand Marnier, passion fruit juice, and a twist of lemon. Serve as an appetizer or dessert.

ANSWERS TO THE QUIZ

1. C Romantics tend to be at the mercy of their emotions-and this may surprise you, but a recent psychological study from Harvard shows that women are better at handling their emotions than men; in other words, men are the romantic sex!
2. A This age of full frontal nudity is less romantic than the Victorian era, when the peep of a petticoat or hint of an ankle was enough to send the gentlemen into transports of delight.
3. B Like all true romantics, Chopin's life and art were inseparable; he poured his passions into his music, releasing it from the conventional forms that preceded it.
4. B The poem is the perfect romantic form of expression-it speaks to the heart through imagery and metaphor, using language to set the emotions free. 5. C Tristan and Isolde, Abélard and Héloïse, Romeo and Juliet-the reason these pairs are so romantic is because they represent an ideal that can never be attained. The phrase 'romantic agony' was invented to describe these dreams of perfection-never to be fulfilled.
5. B If you chose this, you probably surround yourself with memorabilia, keep old letters, hate to throw anything out. Nostalgia is madly romantic.
6. B Hopelessly impractical-but so thrilling!
7. A If you're Tristan or Isolde (see above) there's nothing much you can do but wish.

Music in the night, A dream that can be heard?
Isn't it romantic?
Moving shadows write the oldest magic word.
I hear the breezes playing in the trees above.
While all the world is saying, You were meant for love.
Isn't it romantic?
Merely to be young on such a night as this?
Isn't it romantic?
Ev'ry note that's sung is like a lover's kiss.
Sweet symbols in the moonlight,
Do you mean that I will fall in love perchance?

creates in those rooms. Light energy enters the eye through the pupil and hits the retina which is filled with a fluid called 'visual purple' or rhodopsin. The breakdown of the fluid by light is what gives us our 'color-seeing' ability. So light is experienced and acted on. One way we have to control our physical response to light is by using tinted lenses. Yellow lenses reduce glare from haze and fog by filtering out the blue wavelengths of darkness. Gray, green, and brown lenses filter out ultraviolet wavelengths of glare.
"I have been very interested in a therapy called 'syntonics' which explores the uses of colored light and its application for the amelioration of physical conditions. We've known that infrared and ultraviolet light could be used in the treatment of disease for some time. These are, however, invisible wavelengths of the light spectrum. Syntonics concerns itself with the visible portion, the radiant energy we can actually perceive as color. Admittedly, until people are hooked up to biofeedback systems that specifically measure physiological reactions to light coming through the eye, there is little proof as to how man is affected. Respiration, blood pressure, perspiration indicators guide our efforts to determine whether a color is positively, negatively, or indifferently affecting a patient.
"I had some luck with a patient who had developed a cataract. There is a theory that a cataract results when the lens behind the eye becomes heated, the symptom manifesting itself by a clouding of the lens. By projecting a soft green light into the eye and by prescribing greentinted lenses, we filtered out the stimulating infrared wavelengths. We cannot say we 'cooled' the lens with green light; we can say we were able to prevent further clouding possibly by interfering with the infrared. We restored a degree of clarity to the lens without surgery; this is very important. Green is the balanced center of the color spectrum between red and violet. The body responds to calming green. We don't know exactly why now, we can only observe what works."

out food is punishment for most people, it is an ideal way to absolve one's sins.

And once the fasting guides get through with fasting as a venerable human tradition and as a perfectly natural thing to do (after all, some animals instinctively reject food when they're not feeling well or when hibernating), they get into their real raison d'être: the fact that not eating makes you lose weight. The authors and publishers of these books are perfectly aware that potential buyers tend to be esthetically, rather than ascetically, inclined. They know, too, that patience is not usually a virtue found in fat people who want to be slender (hence, cover lines such as ". . . lose weight the quickest, easiest way possible"). They suspect that the concept of food deprivation awakens in many people visions of malnourished children, so much is made of the fact that fasting is not synonymous with starving. Fasting, they say, is voluntary food avoidance. Starving does not occur by choice. During a fast, furthermore, your body nourishes itself (more about that later). Starvation sets in when your body has depleted its resources.
One would think that observing foodless Fridays or weekends or entire weeks would be as unpalatable as, for instance, a steady intake of nothing but bananas and milk. But people are buying fasting books like hot cakes and swallowing the advice therein. They are-voluntarilycommitting themselves to special retreats (or farms or resorts) to live on water alone (plus, perhaps, doses of fruit juice or shots of vitamins). You hear testimonials about phenomenal gains in slimming. Participants claim that not eating anything is pleasant, even fun, and that you don't miss food at all. (Then there's the advantage of being able to spend grocery-shopping, cooking, and eating time for other, nobler purposes. One book even goes so far as to extol fasting as an economy measure.)

It is probably true that fasting is easier on the willpower than any other form of dieting. To understand why, it is neccessary to understand what happens to your body when it is not being fed. What happens is so complex that a complete explanation would require much more space than I have and a degree in biochemistry. But, as medical nutritionist Dr. Morton Glenn explained to me, the physical changes actually begin within 24 hours after eating stops, at the point when all the calories you had previously consumed are used up and your body begins to utilize internal, rather than external, resources. Your metabolism changes drastically. Circulation, respiration, and other body functions slow down. On a normal diet, most of your body's energy comes from glucose (which comes from the carbohydrates you consume). When fasting, however, once the glucose supply is gone, most energy comes from ketone bodies, acids which are formed in the liver from your fat deposits. When your body is in ketosis, you experience nausea and an unpleasant taste in your mouth. Your appetite, consequently, disappears.

On a low-calorie diet, by contrast, your taste buds "remember" your last meal and you anticipate the next one. If a diet allows a snack of ten freeze-dried peanuts, it takes the discipline of St. Augustine to resist continuing on through the whole bag. Fasting rids you of all such compulsions. Which sounds ideal.

But it's not. The body, it happens, cannot function entirely on fat deposits. Some protein breakdown is also necessary to maintain normal carbohydrate levels in the blood. So your body also starts feeding on lean tissue (muscles, liver, heart, etc.). The body's consumption of its own protein stores results in "negative nitrogen balance," the excretion of too much nitrogen through the urine. Among other possible negative effects of fasting are: vitamin and mineral deficiencies, potassium imbalance (which can trigger heart ailments), and very low blood pressure.

Fasting has been called "the ultimate diet," and the phrase can be taken literally. Although all books on the subject are threaded with the caveat that no fast-in fact, no diet-should be undertaken without a doctor's approval and/or supervision, the warning is meaningless. My instinctive reaction to such advice (and that of most people I've talked to) is, "Oh, I know I'm in perfect health so I don't have to spend money on a medical go-ahead." This is fine if luck happens to be with you. But for people with ailments they are unaware of, fasting can be dangerous, even fatal. One day without nourishment can put a diabetic into a coma. My single experience with fasting had a less serious, but quite unpleasant, result. I did it without considering my "low-normal" blood pressure. Fasting for two days made it drop so far below normal that I blacked out.

Even for a person with no abnormalities, fasting can be harmful because of the abnormalities it causes. As Shirley Ross writes in Fasting, the Super Diet: "Under ordinary eating circumstances, you have a built-in system of checks and balances learned since infancy. You know what you are putting into your body and how it will affect you, for better or worse. During a fast, you are in foreign territory. The normal signposts and warning signals will not help you . . . The changes that occur in the blood and urine are not visible to the naked eye. Careful medical supervision during an extended fast is a necessity."

And an extended fast, according to Dr. Robert Linn, is not for people who are "just a little bit overweight." Dr. Linn wrote The Last Chance Diet, a book which explains his program of fasting, but with a daily intake of hydrolized amino acids to prevent the body's consumption of its own protein. Dr. Linn did not invent this concept. It is the result of research by quite a few nutrition specialists, and this type of regime is used in obesity control at several hospitals (Thomas Jefferson Hospital in Philadelphia, for one). Dr. Linn did not originate the protein supplement he uses, either. It has been used in hospitals for years. He did, however, start calling it "Prolinn" when dispensing it in his office. And this is what it is called in his book. (On December 15, 1976 the New York Daily News reported that the State Attorney General's office had charged that advertising for The Last Chance Diet was misleading because, according to the book, the diet depends upon Prolinn, which can only be obtained by patients of Dr. Linn or his associates.)

Dr. Linn, who is opposed to total fasting, took off 65 pounds himself about 10 years ago. He knows firsthand the agonies of low-calorie dieting. His form of fasting, he says, offsets the trauma of "not seeing weight come off fast enough for what you're giving up" since, as in any foodless program, the appetite disappears so the sacrifice seems nil. And, of course, fasting brings fast results.
"But weight reduction without weight maintenance is ridiculous," says Dr. Linn, whose patients are taught to eat sparingly for life. Dr. Morton Glenn agrees that changing peoples' eating habits on a permanent basis is the only valid weight reduction technique, but he doesn't believe fasting is the way to do it. He puts his patients on "balanced dietshigh protein, moderate carbohydrates, and low fat." Dr. Glenn won't even allow his patients to have skim milk in coffee, because the day might come when they don't have skim milk around and they might succumb to cream. "Fasting," according to Dr. Glenn, "doesn't teach people good diet habits, how to eat. Now some doctors think they can offer a little protein powder to prevent the breakdown of muscle tissue. But this does not take away from the basic problem of teaching people how to eat correctly in order to keep weight off." Dr. Seymour Halpern, president of the American College of Nutrition, concurs: "Fasting is like sweeping the dirt under the carpet when guests are coming. The room looks clean, but the dirt's still there" (i.e., you have not changed your basic eating habits).

The word on fasting, even from its most zealous advocates, is that it is not for everybody. But the truth is that fasting is really not for anybody except those who are critically overweight and choose to give up food under a program which provides both nutrition supplements and strict medical supervision. As for "shortterm fasts": Although you can lose 3 to 5 pounds in 24 hours, the weight is in fluids, and it will return as quickly as it disappeared. One-day fasts have been recommended to "clean" the body, rid it of toxins-but, in fact, your body is not dirty, does not need airing out (unless, of course, you're going by the sort of beliefs that spawned primitive purification rites). Another rationale behind brief fasts is that they give your digestive system a rest. But, as Dr. Halpern told me, "your digestive system doesn't need a rest" (it gets what rest it needs every night while you sleep).
After an evening of glutting myself with three books on "the ultimate diet," I came up with yet another reason to abstain from fasting. By the time you get through with the prefast routine (a couple of days of dainty health-food-type snacks and juices), endure the no-food period, and complete the break-fast ritual (slowly revving your body up to a normal diet via gradually increasing consumption of liquids, then a little yogurt, etc.), you could die of boredom.

Staying young longer
In books, little girls played with dolls, little boys played with cars . . . Well, all that is changing now. And so it should with the old.
"We've got to put our skates on. Stop letting old people be portrayed as buffoons or slow-witted. Otherwise we're going to end up in the same trap. And old people themselves must take up cudgels. If you are called 'old biddy,' or 'grandpop,' say 'I've got a name and you can use it.' A senator was taking a group of older people around the senate chamber. He treated them like children, and finally , turning to one of them, he asked, 'And what did you used to be?' The old man fixed a beady eye on him and replied, 'I still am.' Don't let yourself be put down. In Beethoven's words, 'Take life by the throat.'
"This means keep on working. Prepare for retirement by planning a new occu-pation-like finding a new job after dismissal. It's no coincidence that working people live so long. Picasso never stopped working; nor did Helena Rubinstein or Coco Chanel. Just look around for proof. And if you've got nothing else to do, get active politically. You have got an advantage in that whereas women and blacks had to fight for the vote, you've got one, and it's very powerful. Write to your congressperson to get rights for old people, respect, and health care. Grow old disgracefully-hit back. Better than playing shuffleboard, and it will help those who come after-us."

In the recent election, everybody from the presidential candidates on down began addressing themselves to the older constituency. After all, in 1970, 10 percent of the population was over 65-by 2,000 it may be 20 percent. Dr. Comfort's words relate to a real phenomenon in the country-and the most obvious proof of that is the founding of the Na tional Institute on Aging, which became operational in 1975; with this the United States finally recognized the importance of growing old and what it means to every citizen-since every one of us will ultimately experience it.

WOULD YOU LIKE TO TAKE 70  YEARS TO REACH AGE 60 ?

In addition to this new political consciousness, enormous progress is taking place in the scientific arena. "We are working on the hypothesis that there is an 'aging clock' in the brain," says Dr. Comfort. "We are trying to find out what it controls. Does it modulate the whole life cycle? Does it exist in men and women? There's a lot of work to be done on this. It's getting very interesting, because we are moving toward the possibility that the aging clock is in the hypothalamus-in which case you might be able to control it by tightening a knob with a screwdriver, as it were, and seeing how far you could slow it down. Or you might be able to fool it as to calorie intake, and make it slow itself-or try reducing the tryptophan intake (found in food), which we have found does affect the rate of aging in some animals."

The possibilities are very exciting. Biologists are closer to plumbing the mysteries of aging. "What this research will do perhaps is ensure that people remain in better condition for longer," explains Dr. Comfort. "It would incidentally probably prolong their lives. But it would also prolong the period of vigor. In other words, you would take 70 years to reach 60."

This is not, of course, a promise of immortality. Human beings are mortal, and there is no escaping that. But we can escape the role-playing inflicted on us by society when we get past middle ageand after all, it is in all of our interests to escape it, since one day we will be the ones who care. "I will never be an old man," said Bernard Baruch. "To me, old age is always 15 years older than I am." As Dr. Comfort says, "Old age as it is now sold is an imaginary state." Which is presumably what Oliver Wendell Holmes had in mind when he declared, "To be 70 years young is sometimes far more cheerful and hopeful than to be 40 years old." May it happen to all of us.

9 THINGS TO REMEMBER ABOUT STAYING YOUNG

In his book, A Good Age, Alex Comfort gives nine "attitudinal lessons" that he thinks can help us all stay younger longer. They may be summarized as follows:

1. Aging has no effect upon you as a person. When you are "old" you will feel no different and be no different from what you are now or were when you were young, except that you will have had more experiences. In age your appearance will change, however, and you may encounter more physical problems. When you do, these will affect you only as physical problems will affect a person of any age.
2. "Oldness" is a political institution and social convention, based on a system which expels people from useful work after a set number of years. Folklore is used to justify the expulsion, by depicting those expelled as no longer competent. This folklore is not true.
3. Retirement is another name for dismissal and unemployment. It must be prepared for exactly as you would prepare for dismissal and unemployment.
4. You are one day going to join an underprivileged minority. The remedies available to you will be those available to other minorities-organization, protest, and militancy.
5. When this happens you will be poorer than you think, so prepare and reinsure if you can. Best of all, try to stay in paid useful work.
6. On the other hand, you need not look forward to illness or decrepitude. Your memory, sexuality, activity, capacity for relationships, and zest should normally last as long as you do.
7. Science is nearer than most people realize to attempting to slow the health deterioration of age so that vigor will last longer and death come later.
8. The "old" will make up a large percentage of the population by the year 2000, enough to raise a ruckus if thev get together and ensure they are not, as now, picked off singly. When this happens, the word "old" will change meaning.
9. As an "old" person, you will need four things-dignity, money, proper medical services, and useful workthings you always needed. So either set out now to see that you do get them, or work to force society to change its posture-or do both.

TAB CURTAINS

Many early American homes had no curtains at all. But those that did most likely had tab curtains. Tab curtains are found here in Plymouth at the windows of houses built as early as 1640

PILGRIM STRIPE We love them and use them throughout our own weathered saltbox home. The simple elegance of tab curtains makes them as right for the finest Contemporary homes as they are for the most authentic Colonial homes. They are as functional as they are beautiful, sliding easily on simple rods. They do not require expensive and complex drapery hardware. And they are available both in plain natural muslin and in a variety of colors and fabrics to suit your taste.

Natural: Permanent press muslin
White: Polyester/cotton blend.

Let your plants sleep late

With sap moving in the trees and sunshine getting warmer every day, it's only natural to want to be out there gardening. Take it easy, though-winter still has a few nasty blows ready for the unwary. If your garden is in a climate that demands winter covering for spring bulbs and perennials, wait until sprouts begin to poke up under the covering material before removing it. If your broad-leaved evergreens have been covered for the winter, remember that it is the parching wind and bright sunshine of March that damage still-dormant twigs and leaves. The covering should stay in place until the ground has completely thawed and plants can absorb moisture from the soil to make up for what they lose to the air and sunshine.

With a fringe on top

Aptly named, the fringe tree, Chionanthus virginicus, is profusely decked in late spring with clusters of narrow-petaled creamy-white flowers. A native of the southeastern United States, it is considered by some European horticulturists to be one of the finest of all American flowering trees. It may be either a spready shrub or a tree 25 to 30 feet high, hardy as far north as Boston. Female trees produce dark blue, oliveshaped fruits in late summer. Male trees are said to have more flowers, but I've noticed that both sexes are completely covered with bloom at flowering time. The fringe tree likes a deep, rich, not-too-wet soil, and is subject to attack by the same scales that damage lilacs, but otherwise has few natural enemies. Since it drops very little in the way of litter, it is an ideal small tree for shading a garden bench or sitting area. Most nurseries grow fringe trees or can get them from wholesale growers if asked.

Help for city gardeners

Best 1977 news so far is that the Federal government is preparing to help city gardeners. The United States Department of Agriculture is expanding its nutritional education program to include the growing of food crops on city lots. Six cities will be setting up pilot programs this year: Chicago, Detroit, Houston, Los Angeles, New York, and Philadelphia. In each, technical details will be handled by the Extension Service of the state university or agricultural college. If you live in one of these cities and want to know more about the program, call the local horticultural society, extension service office, or City Hall. Also, plans are afoot to succor the muchabused trees in our cities. The Urban Trees Act of 1976 (H.R. 15838 or H.R. 15660 -but it will get a new bill number in the 95 th Congress), will be voted upon sometime this spring. The act, if it becomes law, will provide funds for the maintenance of street and park trees in our cities. Trees, of course, are the first victims of straitened city budgets, so everyone interested in the urban landscape will be supporting passage of the bill. Congressmen really do pay attention to letters from constituents, so don't hesitate to write favoring passage.

All-American winners

When you choose plants for next summer's garden, it's wise to make use of the experience of others whenever possible. All-American Selections has been at the business of distilling garden experience since 1932, and has a long list of successful plants to its credit. For 1977, the nation-wide panel of experts has selected 4 new vegetables and 4 new flowering plants to bear the A.A.S. shield. Leading the list is the cabbage Savoy Ace. Awarded one of the judges' rare gold medals, this is a cabbage of the dimple-leaved savoy type, maturing about a week earlier than other kinds and producing heads of 4 to $41 / 2$ pounds. Spinach Melody and pumpkin Spirit are also given high marks, while the hybrid squash Scallopini combines characteristics of the patty pan type with zucchini's colors. In marigolds, the largeflowered Primrose Lady and compact Yellow Galore have both been awarded bronze medals. The double-flowered, salmon-pink petunia Blushing Maid and compact rose-pink geranium Show Girl are also bronze medal winners. Winners can be recognized by the red, white, and blue All-American Award shield on seed packets and seedling flats. Look early, though-stocks are limited and are bound to be snapped up in a hurry.

Winter reading

Crunching through snow, whether in high boots or on skis or snowshoes, can be a liberal education in botany. Those blackened stalks poking up out of the white drifts are all that remain of what were once lush green plants. If you look closely, and without preconceived notions of what bright colored flowers they may once have been, these dry stalks, strung with seed pods and the remnants of leaves, are truly beautiful. And, in their own way, they're even more interesting than when they were green and full of summer juices. One person who enjoys the beauty of plants in winter and delights in identifying them is Lauren Brown, whose enthusiasm has overflowed into a book. Weeds in Winter (Norton, $8.95), illustrated with line drawings by the author, includes 135 plants commonly found in the northeastern states, with a botanical key for the identification of each. The author's keen eye, deft pzn, and lively way with words make Weeds in Winter a book to enjoy as well as to consult.

fants after birth. Lack of stroking and touching, she believes, may be one of the causes of colic, hyperactivity, infant allergies, and sleep and feeding problems.

An advocate of "family-centered childbirth," Dr. Rice would like to see hospital procedures changed to allow touching and stroking of all babies to begin immediately after birth with fathers participating as well as mothers. As she counsels, "A baby is not just a passive, unfeeling piece of humanity, it is learning and responding intensely right away we have a great deal of influence over that response and we have to use it wisely."

Dr. Rice has put together a pamphlet and a tape with the stroking and rocking techniques for parents. The reverse side of the cassette has a recording of maternal heartbeat sounds. Dr. Rice believes infants are comforted by sounds reminiscent of the intrauterine environment; she has played such heartbeat tapes in hospital nurseries with 50 crying babies, and within 90 seconds, she reports, they all fall asleep. Unfortunately, this delightful response lasts only a few weeks! The pamphlet and tape are $$ 12.95$. Write to R.I.S.S., Inc., 6455 Meadow Road, Dallas, Tex. 75230.

Geraniums  continued from page 76

to turn yellow and fall off. Usually this is due either to overwatering or lack of air circulation in a high-humidity home. Pinch back and let the plant send out new shoots from below.

Yellow leaves sometimes also come from lack of fertilizer. When they are growing, strong geraniums need to be fertilized lightly every week or two. You can use any of the many available plant foods, but select one low in nitrogen, or you will end up with a lush green plant and few flowers.

Miniatures:

you can still find room for a bright geranium. The miniature varieties of $P$. x hortorum first bred in the late 1800 s are still around, and as diminutive as ever. There's 'Black Vesuvius,' for instance, with single, bright orange-scarlet flowers. 'Pigmy' is another delightful dwarf; so are 'Fairyland,' 'Imp,' and 'Perky.' Pot them in 3 -inch pots, and make sure their niche is sunny and cool. If there's no space left on the windowsill for even one 3 -inch pot, these miniatures all do splendidly under fluorescent lights.
