THE BEST IN LUXURY COASTAL LIFESTYLES

Just when we thought the winter chills would never come to an end, up pop the first delicate shoots of spring, heralding the long and glorious summer months ahead. It's also the signal for Ocean Home's Platinum List, our annual Best of the Best in luxury coastal lifestyles (page 74). This year's worthy winners are selected from thousands of peer and reader nominations, then hotly debated by our expert team of editors, resulting in a showcase of outstanding home design talents from interiors, kitchens and baths to custom builders, pools and spas. This issue also heads to The Hamptons for a fascinating look at one of the most exclusive summer vacation destinations, not to mention one of the most expensive tracts of real estate on the planet (page 92).

On a sadder note, the international architecture world lost one of its brightest stars recently when Zaha Hadid, the Iraqi-born British architect, died of a heart attack in a Miami hospital where she was being treated for bronchitis. Hadid was the visionary designer behind some of the world's most unique and distinctive buildings - including Miami's One Thousand Museum luxury condominium development overlooking Biscayne Bay. The 65-year-old Pritzker Prize-winning architect challenged the very notion of contemporary design, creating stellar architecture that never failed to provoke and fascinate. Hadid may be gone, but her legacy will endure forever.

DESIGN NEW ENGLAND STYLE

One of the most enjoyable things about my job is the wonderful people I meet across the country, notably at the recent annual awards gala of the New England chapter of the American Society of Interior Designers. The master of ceremonies and Grammy winner Patti Austin, pictured top, fired up the festivities at the imposing Edward M. Kennedy Institute in Boston with a memorable rendition of the national anthem, before bestowing accolades on four exceptional interior design talents: middle image from left, Genella McDonald (commercial), Michael J. Lee (photography), Jean Verbridge (residential) and Rose Mary Botti-Stanley (educator). Above, Nancy Berry, my colleague and editor of Ocean Home's sister publications Northshore and Northshore Home, and I connected with old and new friends, and can attest that New England style and design are in excellent hands. asidne.org

J. MICHAEL WELTON

Mike writes about architecture and design and publishes a digital design magazine at architectsandartisans.com.

What have you written about this issue?

What do you like most about the home?

Strang is a modernist in the true Florida tradition, so this house is about the light and water views.

Three coastal architects you most admire?

Alexander Gorlin (New York), Rene Gonzalez (Miami) and Tom Kundig (Seattle) – all unique and masterful.

JENNIFER SPERRY

Ocean Home's senior copy editor, Jennifer is a writer, editor and stylist based in coastal Mass.

What catches your eve in this edition?

A contemporary, colorful and stylish home on Cape Cod – a new twist on New England design (page 54).

What do you love about this home?

Its irrefutable connection to the landscape; its artistic approach to form, light, space, color and and texture; its individuality.

What's your personal home design style?

My style is classic: naturederived colors accentuating historic details and framed art by talented friends.

GEOFFREY HODGDON

Geoff is a leading residential and commercial architecture and fine arts photographer based in Deale, Maryland.

What have you photographed this issue?

A beautiful oceanfront home in Bethany Beach, Delaware, by leading interior designer Erin Paige Pitts (page 29).

What do you love about this home?

The home envelopes you in the colors and textures of the beach. It's inviting, relaxed and quality workmanship abounds.

My perfect ocean home would be...

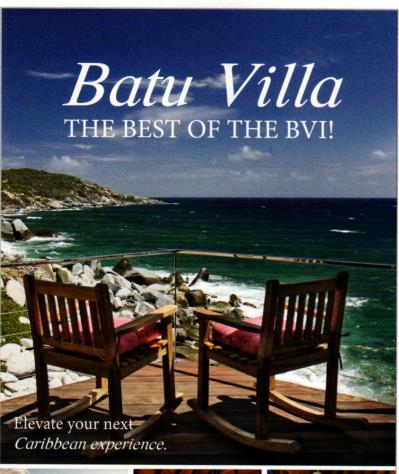

Cedar shake. Antique fishing rods. Surfboards. Artifacts washed ashore. No locks. Louvered doors and sandy floors.

CATCH THE WAVE

Once in a while, a design comes along that takes your breath away. The Wave Cabinet, by Chilean-born, New Yorkbased artist and designer Sebastian Errazuriz (above), is made of thin, narrow pieces of wood. When the cabinet opens, each slat pulls the next one in a series of undulating movements, much like a wave rolling onto a beach. Part furniture, part art installation, it reinvents the familiar process of opening and closing, taking one of the simplest forms of furniture and turning it into a design sensation. "I love the idea of creating beautiful furniture, but I'm much more interested in using the medium as an excuse to trigger people's curiosity and create a connection with them," says Errazuriz. The ingenuity and beauty of the cabinet is best viewed on the designer's video (oceanhomemag. com/cabinet/). It's pure art in motion. meetsebastian.com

PLAN A SUMMER ESCAPE TO ONE OF THESE FIVE FABULOUS BEACHFRONT DESTINATIONS

words by Melissa C. Gillespie

1 Captivating Captiva

Chalk-white beaches, pastel seashells, miles of bicycle trails and spectacular sunrises and sunsets await visitors to Captiva Island, perched just offshore of southwest Florida in the Gulf of Mexico. South Seas Island Resort basks in summer sun and will have you in instant vacation mode. southseas.com

2 Lazing On Lanai

You won't find a single traffic light on the Hawaiian island of Lanai. Home to luxurious retreats like the Four Seasons Resort Lanai - with its magnificent golf course and cliff-side fairways - the island also has rugged back roads leading to natural treasures like Polihua Beach. fourseasons.com/lanai

3 Cape Crusader

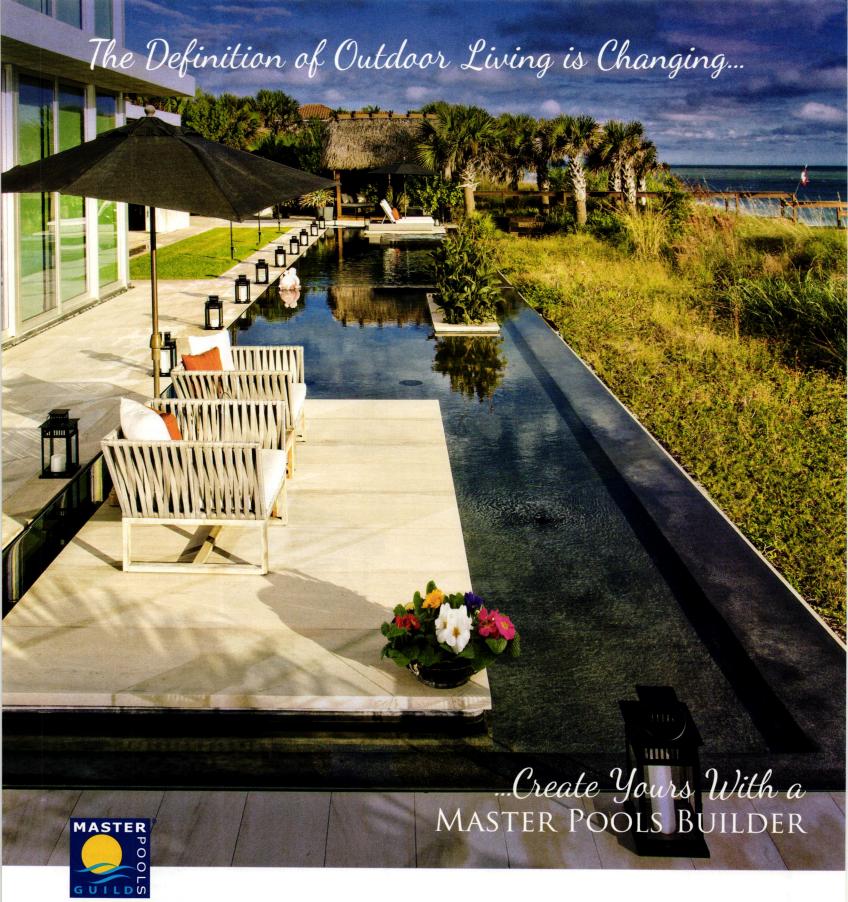

The charming township of Chatham on Cape Cod is the stuff of childhood memories: shingled vacation cottages, scenic beaches, a classic New England lighthouse, lobster rolls and ice cream cones. Chatham Bars Inn delivers luxury accommodations and relaxed beachfront dining in this majestic coastal setting. chathambarsinn.com

4 Sunset Strip

New York City's fashion-forward crowd heads to Shelter Island's Sunset Beach Hotel, a stylish seaside retreat nestled at the eastern end of Long Island. Designed by top hotelier André Balazs, the chic hotel features just 20 guest rooms, beachside cocktails, casual dining and, naturally, fiery sunsets. sunsetbeachli.com

5 Salted Carmel

Historic Carmel-by-the-Sea is a West Coast gem, inspiring writers, artists and photographers; sparking heady romances, and attracting high-profile celebrities for decades. The European-style village, set above a crescent of white-sand beach, offers luxury inns, gourmet restaurants, shops, art galleries, wine tastings and so much more. carmelcalifornia.com

1 Pinnacle Of Design

Sleek and sophisticated, with Capiz shell doors and a bronze finish stretcher, the Adagio credenza by Bernhardt Interiors won a 2015 American Society of Furniture Designers Pinnacle Award. It certainly gets our vote. bernhardt.com

2 Simply Beautiful

Simple shapes and materials are often the most stylish. The Calx Pendant by Cerno proves the point perfectly with its walnut triangle facets forming a square aperture and lined in a metal finish. cernogroup.com

3 Tapping into Style

Form definitely meets function with the chic new Litze Bath Collection by Brizo, combining modern industrial design with a decidedly Bauhaus sensibility. Deb and I will be specifying this faucet for years to come. brizo.com

4 A Touch Of Glass

Deb's current design obsession involves seriously thick glass top tables and the Duran Coffee Table by KGBL, with its handpoured 1 3/8" Borosilicate glass slab top, hits all the right notes for her. kgblnyc.com

TV HOST KATIE LEE DISHES ON RELAXED SUMMER DINING AND RECIPES FROM HER NEW COOKBOOK

words by Karina Antenucci

ummer is a glorious time of year for outdoor entertaining, with sultry evenings encouraging relaxed and casual dinner parties by the ocean. "It's the most exciting time to cook with all of the fresh food that's available, from seafood to fruit and vegetables," says Katie Lee, cohost of Food Network's The Kitchen, three-time cookbook author and star of the new Beach Bites with Katie Lee, a Cooking Channel series in which the self-proclaimed "beach bum" samples local fare from Mexico to the Caribbean.

Lee, who lives mostly in The Hamptons when she isn't filming or traveling, is passionate about entertaining.

She believes the key to throwing a coastal summer dinner party is curating a menu with quality, flavorful and seasonal ingredients that are prepared simply something she learned from her grandmother while growing up in West Virginia, and the inspiration for her most recent title, Endless Summer Cookbook.

To maximize time with guests, Lee suggests preparing cocktails and side dishes in advance. Instead of mixing drinks on demand, she fills pitchers with icy blueberry daiguiris or honeydew melon margaritas, incorporating sweet summer fruits.

She also likes to craft a few different salads, such as quinoa tabouli, Moroccan carrots or her lightning-fast cucumbers with sea salt and chili flakes.

For a main dish, Lee often serves a large piece of grilled fish like halibut with chopped cherry tomatoes, lemon zest, capers and basil. And for dessert, she suggests choosing something decadent and easy to make, such as pecan ice cream balls with hot fudge.

The talented cook favors a casual-elegant, eclectic dinner table setting to enhance the breezy summer ambience. "The Hamptons is fantastic for yard sale shopping. I pull together table collections with different napkin prints, fabrics, glasses and vases of different sizes and shapes," Lee explains.

Though the look is mismatched, she recommends coordinating the color scheme, such as a palette of ocean blues and whites, and keeping flowers like hydrangeas and dinner plates monochromatic. "I find inspiration everywhere," Lee says, invariably while watching a fiery sunset from a Sag Harbor beach, with a glass of rosé in hand and her beloved pug Fionula by her side. OlH

Savoring summer Katie Lee's colorful new cookbook offers an array of delicious recipes and practical advice for throwing the perfect coastal summer party.

COCKTAIL RECIPE

1/4 whole honeydew, seeded, peeled and cut into chunks (about 2 cups)

- 3 tablespoons fresh lime juice
- 1 tablespoon orange liqueur (such as Cointreau)
- 1/2 cup silver tequila
- 1 teaspoon light agave syrup
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon coarse salt Lime wedges

Put the honeydew in a blender and blend until smooth. Pour into a large cocktail shaker. Add the lime juice, orange liqueur, tequila and agave syrup. On a small plate, combine the sugar and salt. Rub the rims of two glasses with a lime wedge and dip the rims into the sugar mixture to adhere. Add a handful of ice cubes to the shaker and shake until cold. Fill the sugar-rimmed glasses with ice, strain the cold margaritas into them and serve.

Platinum List | INTERIORS

hen interior designer Erin Paige Pitts saw a new waterfront home in Bethany Beach, Delaware, she knew her greatest design tool was just offshore. The ocean – alluring and always entertaining – was destined to make a splash throughout the classic shingled home.

"I believe it's all about the view and complementing the exterior environment," says Pitts, principal of Erin Paige Pitts Interiors in Delray Beach, Fla., and Gibson Island, Maryland. "This is how I work."

Today the 8,000-square-foot family vacation home evokes many shades of ocean blue. A clear blue Venetian plaster artwork on the dining room wall, deep-blue tiles around the living room fireplace, soft pillows in various subtle blue tones, and the occasional piece of furniture serve up the coveted color.

"I did everything with the ocean in mind," Pitts says. "Your interior and exterior environments need to be seamless in a property like this. If I'm not using blues, I'm using neutrals."

Tranquil blue works beautifully with the décor's comfortable coastal ambience. The three-story house, designed by Christopher L. Pattey, a senior associate at Becker Morgan Group in Salisbury, Maryland, is an upside-down house, with the main living area on the top floor. The view, through the mostly glass ocean side, is dazzling: sea and sky lit by the spring sun.

The home's architecture gave Pitts plenty to work with. On the lower floor are bedrooms for the owners' three teenage children, a "bunk room" for guests, a media room and a TV room with blue sliding barn doors. Upstairs is the primary living space: kitchen, living room, dining room, guest room, master suite, office and a vast screened porch off the kitchen.

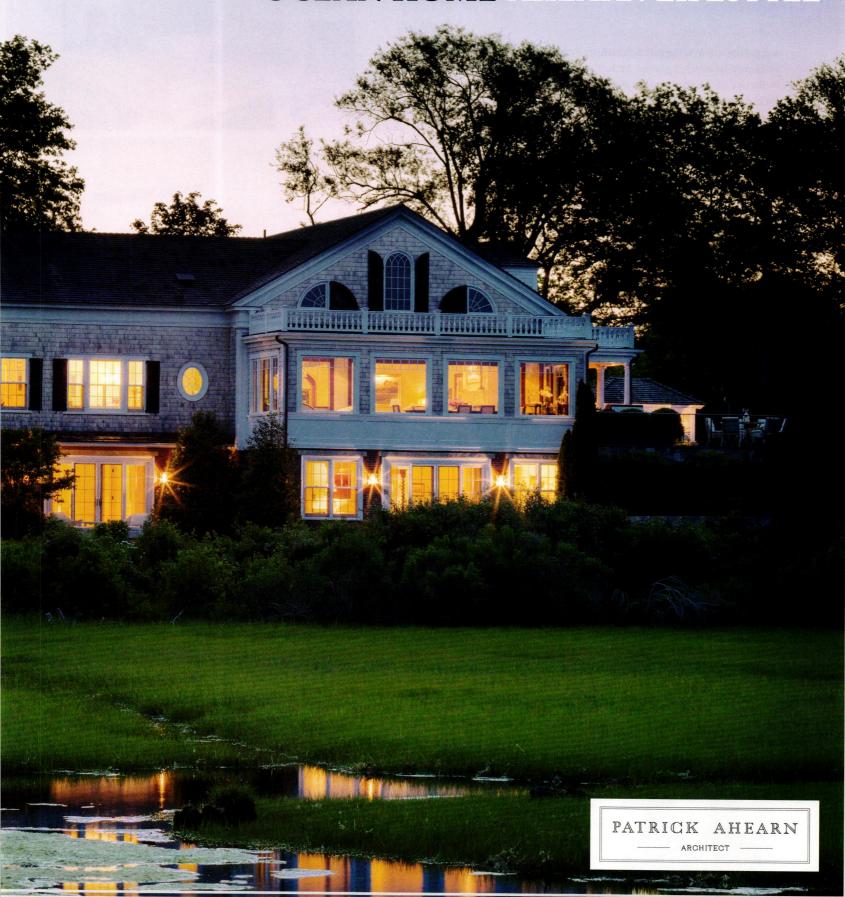

The interior designer says the owners wanted a breezy, coastal aesthetic, but nothing too beachy, so she

LET US HELP CREATE YOUR DREAM OCEAN HOME AHEARN LIFESTYLE

The homeowners are very relaxed, Pitts says, and desired a very "comfortable and livable" interior. They also opted for a mix of textures, so every room has fabrics and materials that beg a closer look: a sisal rug in the living room, wicker here and there, a beaded light fixture.

The living room, dining room and kitchen are bright and open, asserted by soft white walls; cerused oak floors, which were hand scraped for texture variation; and a custom linen rug.

Two off-white sofas are upholstered in Sunbrella fabric, which Pitts loves for its looks and easy care.

Set against these neutrals are the blues - in pillows, accent pieces and artful touches such as the living room's beaded chandelier. The casual, classic look continues in the dining room with table and chairs finished with the look of driftwood.

Pitts had the two end chairs slipcovered "for a bit of substantiality." The nearby kitchen is bright and homey, with two islands and two sinks to suit a family that loves entertaining.

The master bedroom is a peaceful sanctuary with a ceiling of light blue and walls in a warm sandy tone. Comfortable chairs placed near the window are neutral: "They disappear when you're looking out," Pitts notes.

Behind the sisal bed is a hanging panel where a wall was intended to be. "I requested to take the wall out, much to [architect Pattey's] chagrin," she says.

Touches of blue are carried through the other bedrooms and bathrooms, except for the daughter's room, which is filled with shades of soft purple. "It's a fun room," Pitts says. "What girl doesn't love purple?"

Pitts, 44, grew up in Maryland, where her mother studied interior design when Pitts was a girl. "I remember being very captivated," she says. "I remember watching my mother draw perspectives and do different things. I was very taken with it."

A graduate of the Bradley Academy for the Visual Arts in Pennsylvania, Pitts has won several awards, including making the list of Traditional Home's "20 Young Designers to Watch" and also winning the National Kitchen &

Bath Association 2014 Kitchen of the Year award (in the Large Kitchen Category).

Pitts' own Delray Beach home, which she and husband Gregory gutted and renovated, was showcased recently in Luxe Interiors + Design.

When the couple tackled the project, they brought plenty of expertise, with her countrywide interior design work and his career in his family business,

Coastal comfort The homeowners wanted a breezy coastal aesthetic, says designer Erin Paige Pitts, left, who opted to work with a variety of textures, prints and fabrics to create a warm and comfortable retreat.

THE ART OF THE SAIL

VINTAGE SAILING POSTERS CAN ELEVATE OCEAN HOME DÉCOR AND BE A CHIC COLLECTOR'S ITEM

words by Shaun Tolson

uring the late 1990s, vintage ski posters skyrocketed in popularity. Today, desirable examples can sell for tens of thousands of dollars and are often used to enhance the ambience of mountain lodges and ski homes.

Similarly, vintage sailing posters can add character to coastal residences, bringing the ocean theme indoors. However, unlike the acquisition of ski posters, finding vintage advertisements with sailing motifs requires far more patience and tenacity.

"One of the great things about poster collecting is that you can always find something that caters to your interests," says Nicho Lowry, director of the vintage poster department at New York City's Swann Auction Galleries.

Even so, Lowry explains that a sailing niche within vintage poster collecting has yet to develop, which means that aspiring collectors - or coastal homeowners simply looking for distinctive wall art - must scour catalogues dedicated to sporting posters, travel posters, even product advertisements to find the occasional sailing-themed art. "Collectors like the hunt," says Lowry. "They really like searching, but finding sailing posters is going to be difficult."

Robert Chisholm, owner and founder of Chisholm Larsson Gallery in New York City, concurs. As a solution, he suggests taking a broader approach.

"If you're open to general sailing posters, you can come up with some very interesting pieces," he says. "But if you are looking to decorate your home and you only want America's Cup posters, for instance, you're going to have a tough time, and you will need to have a lot of patience."

Sarah Stocking, owner of her eponymous antique poster gallery in San Francisco, discovered this a few years ago when, to coincide with San Francisco's hosting of the America's Cup in 2013, she attempted to curate an exhibition of vintage America's Cup posters.

The only examples she could find - aside from posters for that year's race - were various pieces from a series promoting the 1987 event in Australia. "If yachting enthusiasts go looking for these posters, they're going to find virgin territory," says Lowry. "It's an uncharted world."

As for how to judge the quality of a vintage sailing poster - should you happen to find one - Lowry assures

SHINGLE BELLE

LEADING ARCHITECTURAL FIRM CARPENTER & MACNEILLE CREATES A NEW ENGLAND HOME THAT PAYS HOMAGE TO ITS ORIGINAL FORM

words by Mary Grauerholz photographs by Richard Mandelkorn

s striking as a coastal home can be on first glance, sometimes it is the details that tip it to breathtakingly beautiful. One such house is OakLedge in Manchester-by-the-Sea, Mass.

Set on an oceanfront rocky outcrop, its shingled cladding shining in the sunlight, the home achieves that elusive stature of appearing delicate in its artisanship yet formidable enough to withstand anything the Atlantic Ocean can throw at it.

The home, designed and constructed by Carpenter & MacNeille Architects and Builders in nearby Essex, is a New England classic, reflecting the late 1880s heyday of Shingle-style architecture.

Eyebrow dormers, artisanal millwork and decorative shingle patterns punctuated by unique shingle voids give the home a powerful, distinctive appearance.

The condition of the original house on the property was too poor to save it entirely, although some features, including much of the foundation, remain.

"The original structure was a cow barn, a small cottage that was originally built in 1873," says Michael T. Gray, AIA, managing director of Carpenter & MacNeille and the project director.

"The structure had grown over the years and became a long rectangular house." Gray and his colleagues also retained an entire wing, added in 1896 and called the Music Room. "It became the living room," Gray says.

While the exterior fits seamlessly with the area's historic character, many of the materials and techniques are new. The floor plan has some modern features to suit the needs of the homeowners, who have two children.

Unseen, but significant, is an innovative 21st-century geothermal and solar mechanical system, that supplies hot water to heat the swimming pool and most of the house's heating and cooling needs.

The home's interior hums with historic style. The centerpiece of the design is the Living Hall, a traditional Shingle-style space in the front entryway that actually serves as a room.

With a fireplace - crowned by an original mantel - and nearby seating, the hall has a graceful, curved panel archway that frames a water view ahead. "Obviously the 'wow' factor walking into the door is the view, looking straight out at the ocean," Gray says.

In the 19th century, the Living Hall set the tone for Shingle-style homes, Gray says. "People would make it the most elaborate room, because that was the first room guests would see. It's the first experience of the house."

Just beyond the archway is the library, a singular space. While an open floor plan is a hallmark of original Shingle style - and radical for its time - the OakLedge layout is more modern, designed for good flow, pleasing sight lines and plenty of sunshine and water views.

Small rooms, including a comfortable study with a handsome paneled mahogany interior and a fireplace surround with hidden doors to contain computer wiring, provide other modern touches.

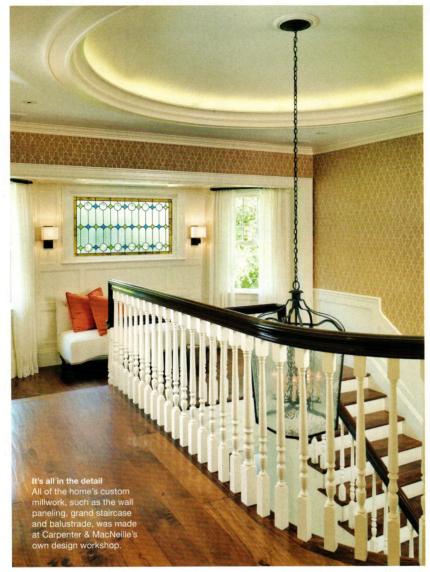

The interior designer, Ashley Scott of Niles-Scott Interiors of Manchester, Mass., injected shots of color and texture throughout the house with accent pieces, chunky sisal and, as Scott says, "hints of surprise" in lamps and other pieces.

The paneled stair hall's grand staircase leads to the second-floor landing nook, a quiet space with a pretty decorative stained-glass window by a local Essex artist. The family also loves the new ocean-facing porch, outfitted with a pizza oven and fireplace of stacked granite.

The interior's custom millwork - such as its beveled wall paneling, staircase and balustrade - was designed and made at Stephen Terhune Woodworking, Carpenter & MacNeille's own shop.

Housed in a trolley car barn next to the architectural offices, the shop turns out custom millwork, furniture and some of OakLedge's finest details, such as the wave-patterned shingles over the portico.

A majestic oak tree sweeps a leaf pattern across the shingles and stands in testament to OakLedge, whose name derives from that very tree and the waterside granite ledge. "There's a lot of movement and texture in the shingles," Gray says.

The shingle voids (openings in the shingles), which wrap around the front and back of the Music Room and allow light to filter through, are special to Gray.

The architect recalls working on an 1880s house, designed by renowned American architect William Ralph Emerson, which had the same motif.

"Emerson created a rhythm of space in that detail," Gray says of the shingle voids. "I said to myself, if I ever have the opportunity to do this, I'm going to. It's one of my favorite details. There's a lot of character there."

Some of the home's original features were used in the new iteration of OakLedge. The foundation stone for the new work is actually veneer granite that was hand cut from the original foundation, Gray says. Tinged orange and brown, the Cape Ann granite (also called Rockport granite) was locally sourced in Manchester.

Another high point of the exterior is the square tower with a brick chimney, made to match the original.

THE DETAILS

For more information, visit carpentermacneille.com.

"We took it down brick by brick," explains Gray. "We wanted to recreate that tower."

Today, the tower stands as a symbol of how OakLedge came to be. As Gray says, "I like to think that if someone who knew the original house came back and saw it years later, they would still recognize it." OIH

THE PAPER TRAIL

MOVE OVER, PAINT. THE MOST EXCITING TREND IN OCEAN HOME DÉCOR IS WALLPAPER PRINTS

words by Andrea Collins

hen it comes to ocean home décor, vibrant paints in a spectrum of cool coastal blues, greens, taupe and crisp whites have long ruled the roost. But a new generation of American homeowners is now discovering the joys of a very different style of wall covering.

Once traditional wallpapers are making a spectacular comeback, fueled by stunning contemporary designs and new technologies and techniques in paper and handling, making wallpaper easier to apply and remove than ever before.

One of the design firms leading the charge is Wallpaperdirect, a long-established British company that has launched Wallpaperdirect USA to meet the demands of American professional interior designers and amateur home decorators.

"Everyone has been experimenting with paints for many years but now they want something different, fresh and exciting," says Alise Heemstra, who heads up the U.S. online operation as well as a sampling and customer service office in Tennessee.

"There's also a generation of people who are buying their first homes, don't have any prior experience with wallpaper and are finding it so easy to use," she adds.

"And the designs we offer by top British brands, such as Cole & Son, Little Greene and Farrow & Ball, are so beautiful and inspiring. These are not your grandmother's wallpapers."

Heemstra says aqua blue is a color trend for 2016, making it ideal for coastal homes. Faux but very realistic brick and wood paneling papers are also in demand, along with animal prints, oriental birds, florals, eye-catching geometrics and metallic and beaded styles.

"White brick with a smooth or textured look is very popular," she adds. "And the wood prints are so realistic, they look like you're going to get a splinter if you rub your hand over them."

Heemstra advises requesting samples of wallpaper designs to test them before purchasing. "Especially with the metallic prints," she notes. "You really need to see these prints in the light of your own home to make sure you pick the right one."

While the majority of wallpapers come from England, Heemstra says delivery of in-stock designs direct to American homes usually takes just three to four days by DHL (a little longer if the paper is not stocked by Wallpaperdirect). The Tennessee office also handles returns for added convenience.

Advances in natural and manmade paper fibers and handling techniques are making wallpaper much easier to apply and remove, adds Heemstra.

"Paste the Wall is a growing trend in Europe, with papers being developed to allow the paste to be applied to the wall for ease of application and better results,"

"The new wallpapers don't expand or change their shape, so you just apply the adhesive to the wall and press the paper to the adhesive. It's less messy and goes up very quickly because you are not working with water or waiting for the paper to accept the adhesive.

"It's also much easier to remove because the paper stays as one unit and you are not trying to scratch and scrape off tiny strips."

One area of confusion that Heemstra advises clients to watch for is the size and lengths of British wallpapers.

"Our rolls are European size, called metric rolls or bolts," she says. "They can also be known as a double roll because they are twice the length of a standard American single roll.

"Typically, there are almost 33 feet of wallpaper on one roll," Heemstra adds. "The price you see on the website is the price you pay for a roll of that size."

While some suppliers vary, a European roll is generally 21 inches wide (although some can be 27 inches wide). "The wallpaper calculator on our website can help you estimate how many rolls to order based on the size of the rolls we sell," says Heemstra.

rooms with any choice of wallpaper, to give an idea of scale and pattern repeat, and provides handy decorating tools and "how to" videos.

The firm also offers fabrics that are available as beautifully handmade curtains, cushions and art accessories to complete your home design. OlH

The wow factor Stylish prints, such as Albany Wow, top, and Larkhill, are not only beautiful to look at but are very easy to apply thanks to advances in paper and handling, says Wallpaperdirect's Alise Heemstra, left.

POOL CHAMPIONS

A THIRD-GENERATION BUILDER, BASED IN CONNECTICUT, IS AT THE VANGUARD OF A QUIET REVOLUTION IN LUXURY CUSTOM POOL DESIGN

words by Andrew Conway

ext time you look at your swimming pool, ask yourself this simple question: how does it make you feel?

Do the style, shape, size, vanishing edge, color, surface and surrounding space inspire you? Do the cutting-edge technology, automation, water quality, carbon footprint and eco-friendly features excite you? Does the space work for your unique coastal lifestyle?

If the answer to all these questions is a resounding yes, you're tapping into a quiet revolution in luxury custom residential pool design that's changing the very nature - not to mention the look and feel - of the classic ocean home swimming pool.

Once the domain of burly builders - who dropped a precast and kidney-shaped pool shell into a hole in the ground, added a water slide and a fake rock waterfall and called it a day - high-end pool design and construction are diving into a brave new world.

"A lot of people can build pools, and some can build good pools, but it's really about how the clients feel when they're in that space; that's what makes us different," says Bill Drakeley, principal of Drakeley Pool Company, based in Bethlehem, Conn.

This third-generation builder, who founded his own pool company in 2000, is at the vanguard of a new breed of pool designers and builders who are championing a much more thoughtful, collaborative and intuitive approach to creating the perfect pool.

OmniLogic® is the most intuitive backyard controller on the market.

With the ability to save his favorite settings, create his own themes and even turn on his spa from the airport so it's ready when he gets home, OmniLogic is the automation system that simplifies David's life.

See David's story and learn more about OmniLogic at thepowerofsimple.com.

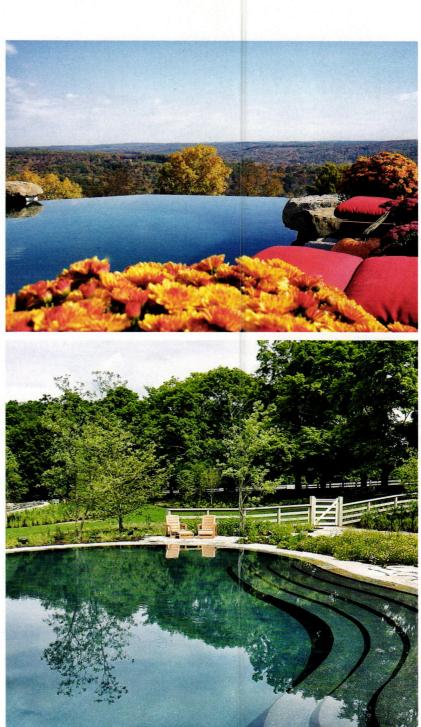

"Everything before seemed forced and contrived and I knew it wasn't right," says Drakeley. "Our designs are into the psychology of the pool space, both mental and physical.

"We ask questions about air flow, the track of the sun, how our clients are going to use the space and how can we ensure they're in a positive frame of mind when they come into the environment. It's very subtle, but this idea of being intuitive is what sets us apart."

This forward-thinking approach – linking a pool with a client's state of wellbeing – results in little more than a dozen residential pools a year of exceptional design and construction quality.

"It's about creating a pool space that's restorative, intuitive, elegant, sleek and supremely luxurious without being overwrought," says Lily Samuels, a Columbia graduate and company vice president who heads up a high-energy executive team with Drakeley.

The dynamic duo – Drakeley with his expert construction skills and Samuels with her contemporary sensibilities – works in partnership with every client, getting to know them, their families and lifestyles before even putting design pen to paper.

While a pool is a quintessential feature of a coastal home, Drakeley argues it should never be a focal point. "It should blend in seamlessly with its surroundings and never compete with the ocean," he says. "A pool has to look right, but it also has to work right."

Working closely with leading architects, landscape architects and even sound technicians and energy space experts, Drakeley and his team of master craftsmen create design-centric pools that will last for decades.

Using quality materials sourced from around the world - travertine from Italy, Canadian marble, glass tiles from Spain - and even rocks indigenous to a unique coastal home site, Drakeley is a full-service pool company that refuses to cut corners.

"Our clients are making a huge investment in their home and lifestyle," says Samuels. "Every single detail matters, to us and to them."

Samuels lists a number of pool trends for 2016: the continuation of rectangular pool shapes; vanishing edges where appropriate; shallow ledges for lounging; perimeter overflows; cutting-edge technology and "green" practices, especially in terms of water sanitation and purification; and pool automation.

Drakeley says pool textures and colors are also changing, driven by extensive use of glass tiles. And many clients are requesting a more natural, mirror-still water surface to create the effect of a stunning reflection pond, which is especially pretty when surrounded by vibrant fall colors.

"A pool is obviously a place to swim, relax and lounge, but today's pools have dual, even multiple purposes to them," he says.

Drakeley's 35 years of experience in construction stands him in good stead. He's currently president of the American Shotcrete Association, is a well-respected voice in the industry and is committed to elevating construction and pool design through education. His many industry awards further cement his reputation.

"There's often a disconnect between the daily lives of a client and the construction and pool company," he says. "We bridge that disconnect and have the intuition to know who the client is and what they want."

But the true test of the firm's success lies with its clients. "We have clients who say they've seen our work,

THE DETAILS For more information, visit drakeleypools.com. been in one of our swimming pools and trust us implicitly," says Samuels.

"And with our waiting list, we have more than a few clients who are willing to wait to work with us. It's very flattering that our pools are coveted spaces that speak to the quality of what we're doing." OlH

BOATER'S PARADISE

STEP ON BOARD A MEMBERSHIP MARINERS CLUB OFFERING THE BEST OF THE BOATING LIFESTYLE

words by Shaun Tolson

en years ago, Tim Barton and Doug Gray, two experienced boaters and longtime friends, launched Barton & Gray Mariners Club out of two harbors on Nantucket.

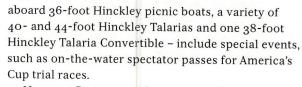

The premise of the club was - and remains - a simple one: to provide all of the perks and pleasures of the boating lifestyle without the hassles or responsibilities that come with owning or operating a boat.

"We wanted to deliver the best part of boating," says Barton, who grew up sailing Optimists on Long Island Sound. "Having a captain on board means our members don't need to have any prior boating experience."

The club currently operates out of 17 ports along the East Coast and northern Caribbean, moving its fleet of more than a dozen Hinckleys between 10 northeastern harbors (from Boston to New York City) in late spring and throughout the summer, and seven harbors in Florida and the Bahamas from mid-fall to early spring.

Three tiers of membership exist, ranging in price from $25,000 to $50,000 annually and requiring a $10,000 initiation fee. The higher the tier of membership, the more boating days a member can reserve at any given time.

However, Barton says that most members join the club for the quintessential day-trips that it offers.

In the summer, those itineraries typically feature jaunts from Nantucket to Edgartown Harbor on Martha's Vineyard, with a stop at Tuckernuck Island for a swim and sunbathing on a private beach.

"The boats offer all the things that are necessary to provide members with luxury hotel-level pampering, including hot-water showers," Barton adds.

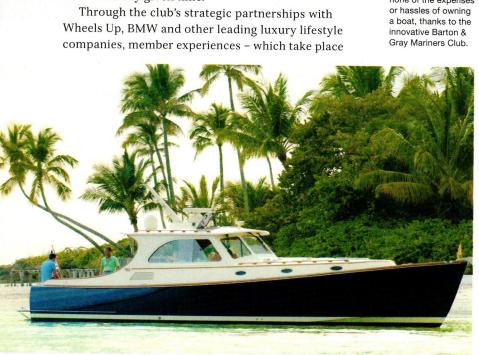

During the winter, day trips in the Bahamas typically include snorkeling, swimming or offshore fishing, although Barton says that sunset cocktail cruises and

Interior and exterior interact faultlessly, a fact that is especially notable because LDa - which handled the interiors - was not part of the original project team.

"That made for an unusual situation," acknowledges designer John Day, who leads LDa's interiors department. "We usually come on board a lot earlier, but with this home we took it forward from the shell."

LDa's team, which included Boston-based C.H. Newton Builders, was responsible for everything from designing the stairways to selecting floor materials, cabinetry, builtins, fireplace, railings, furnishings and décor.

and decorating - but we also needed to be sensitive to the architect's original vision," says Day.

"Warren Schwartz [founding partner of Schwartz/Silver] is a master of contemporary architecture. We didn't want to change his message. We wanted to work in chorus with it," adds Day, noting that a contemporary home is not simple to construct.

"With clean, spare lines and an absence of extraneous details such as crown moldings, baseboards and heavy draperies, there's nowhere to hide," says Day. "We relied on and appreciated the meticulous craftsmanship of the builders, C.H. Newton."

The client, who was closely involved throughout the process, wanted an artistic yet playful design. Most importantly, though, the home had to be livable and not just a contemporary showpiece.

"She wanted a home that you could walk into with sandy feet and gather around the hearth," Day says. "Her mantra was, 'Beautiful, but first [it must be] functional.'"

With that mantra constantly in mind, Day knew the family home had to be so much more than merely modern.

"It would have been easy to make the home a contemporary case study," he says. "But this client didn't want it to have just one single message. Her taste is eclectic. The home had to be pragmatic. It had to marry contemporary design with a livable, approachable feel."

That dual desire presented a design challenge. "With a much wider palette than the typical modern home, it became even more important that the exterior architecture, interior elements and décor aligned and did not feel oddly disjointed," Day says.

Warm welcome

The client wanted a home that family and guests could walk into with sand on their feet and gather around the hearth, says John Day, who oversaw warmth and character to the design. A hand-tufted wool Tibetan carpet in the entrance foyer warms the granite floor while adding color. Walnut cabinets bring a measure of softness to the kitchen and grass reeds are sandwiched within shower panels.

The wide open floor plan offers few walls, so rugs serve as works of art while imparting texture and pattern.

The client expressed her love of color. "She especially loves red," Day says, hence the inclusion of the mirroredback frosted red resin kitchen cabinets. "She adores the impact of the red kitchen - she loves the depth, shimmer and sparkle of the cabinets," he adds.

Day is especially proud of the fireplace, with its cantilevered granite hearth and red artisan glass tiles. "It supports the architecture as well as the client's taste for pops of color," he says. Swirls of undulating glass add depth and character.

The overall effect is dramatic: a sleek, uncluttered, contemporary home that is also comfortable, livable, stylish and visually stimulating.

"It took many conversations with the client, imagery, showroom visits, three-dimensional renderings and design mockups to make sure we successfully hit the mark," Day says. "With such a multi-faceted project, everything and everyone had to work in unison." OH

THE PERFECT STORM

AN ARTFUL HOTEL IN THE HEART OF MANHATTAN DELIVERS A CALM SANCTUARY IN A SNOWSTORM

words by Andrew Conway

he blizzard of January 2016 is raging around us, dumping more than two feet of snow on the almost deserted streets of New York City and bringing the entire city to a close.

Inside the Quin, a luxury boutique hotel in Midtown Manhattan, we're safely - and very happily - cocooned in a sanctuary of calm and composure as if nothing whatsoever is happening outside.

A giant video art wall projects splashes of vivid color across the sleek yet intimate reception lobby; neatly pressed staff hover unobtrusively to attend to guests' needs; pots of steaming coffee and hot chocolate await in an adjoining lounge.

Upstairs in our junior suite - one of the hotel's 208 stylish rooms, suites and a new triplex penthouse our generous sitting room, bedroom and streamlined marble-and-stone bath offer an even quieter and more comfortable place to relax.

The temptation is to snooze on our king-size Duxiana bed and Sferra Venetian linens, soak in the oversize tub with Fresh spa products or watch a movie on the widescreen LED HDTV and order room service.

Cool and calm From the top, the Quin's new triplex penthouse terrace. a stylish quest suite and art-filled lobby

Instead, we head down to The Wayfarer - the Quin's contemporary spin on a classic American grille - and tuck into an excellent Saturday brunch while watching the near-record blizzard blanket the city with snow.

Perched on the corner of West 57th Street and Sixth Avenue, in the cultural heart of New York City, this welcoming and visually stimulating hotel takes the art of luxury, comfort and service to a new level.

A member of Small Luxury Hotels of the World, the Quin opened in late 2013 and quickly established itself as a fixture on the city's art, foodie and social scene.

The hotel's unique Quin Arts creative program, curated by DK Johnson of The Arts Fund, adds an eyecatching edge to the guest experience with constantly changing artworks and installations.

Just one block from Fifth Avenue, two blocks from Central Park and a stroll to Carnegie Hall, Lincoln Center, Rockefeller Center, the Museum of Modern Art and other top cultural institutions, the Quin is surrounded by some of the city's finest art, music and fashion.

But for the snow, we'd have been ideally placed to explore all the attractions

New York City has to offer. But on this wild weekend, in this amazing blizzard, we were in the perfect hotel in the perfect storm. OlH

AN EXQUISITE OASIS

Few places in the world offer award-winning golf, easy access to some of the most desirable ski resorts, breathtaking views, and proximity to two major urban cultural centers. Add in a remarkable community lifestyle, delightfully charming nearby towns, fresh semi-custom home designs, and discerning golf and club members will understand that Winchester Country Club is the hidden gem of a lifetime.

The 18-hole course, the final and stunning design by Robert Trent Jones Sr. and Jr., is both challenging and beautiful, garnering a multitude of accolades including being named among the "Top 100 Golf Courses" by Golfweek Magazine. Golfers of all abilities love the course's abundant challenges and its beautiful layout tucked amid panoramic views of the Sierra mountains and Sacramento valleys. Measuring 7,144 yards from the back tees and playing to a par 72, the golf experience at Winchester blends engaging play seamlessly with the dramatically scenic landscapes and mountain vistas.

As the heartbeat of this golfing community, the newly renovated and lodge-style Clubhouse features a private main dining room and pub, pro shop, locker rooms, swim, tennis, full gym fitness center and more. The club is expertly managed by Troon®, the leader in golf course and club management.

In addition to the remarkable golf experience, the lifestyle at Winchester Country Club is simply one-of-a-kind. With strikingly fresh architecture, quick and easy Tahoe ski access, a full array of community activities, and luxurious yet approachable club living, Winchester is a unique and remarkable way of life, a Northern California hidden gem that must be seen to be believed.

The finishing touch to this remarkable golf and lifestyle community are the fantastic Winchester homes that are now available, specifically designed for the ultimate in foothill living. These remarkable, livable designs create a special connection between home and nature. Unique architectural approaches and elegant natural finishes are evident throughout each Winchester masterpiece, with designs that nestle perfectly into some of the world's most beautiful vistas.

For a golf experience that is below the snow and above the fog in the magnificent Sierra foothills, Winchester Country Club has it all. Custom home sites range from one to six acres and start at $200,000, while semicustom-built homes start at $1.175 million. SAILFISH POINT

Not All Oceanfront Communities are Created Equal.

At the southern tip of Hutchinson Island in South Florida lies Sailfish Point, an unspoiled island paradise where the Gulf Stream keeps waters temperate while onshore breezes moderate the climate.

This 532-acre secluded sea-island community is surrounded by the Atlantic Ocean, St. Lucie Inlet, and the Indian River. Residents enjoy five miles of pristine shoreline, an oceanfront Jack Nicklaus Signature golf course, elegant beachfront clubhouse, full-service marina with immediate ocean access, and the ultimate in private security.

Here, at one of Florida's most prestigious addresses, is a most comfortable lifestyle with a breathtaking array of living possibilities from spacious beach and harborfront homes to intimate oceanfront condos, link-side villas and townhomes with private docks.

For those who enjoy life on the water, everything comes together at Sailfish Point. Travel easily by boat into town for dinner or over to the Bahamas, only 60 nautical miles east. From Sailfish Point Marina and Yacht Club, one of the largest private marinas in Florida, you are merely five minutes to open water.

While water surrounds life here, there are also plenty of activities on dry ground. Har-Tru tennis courts maintained to professional standards, a fitness and aquatic center with professional trainers and a luxurious full-service spa and salon are all available for residents and their guests.

An excellent par-72 Jack Nicklaus Signature golf course, stretching along ocean and river, offers 7,088 yards of challenging fairways and no tee times – essentially your own private 18 holes of exceptional golf. Of all private Florida golf communities, Sailfish Point is anything but par for the course.

Every hole has water views, whether ocean, river or lake, while some are graced by all three. Play begins just steps from the practice area, moving throughout the island and culminating in the par-4 signature 18th, dubbed "Window on the Sea" for its remarkable ocean view.

Five tee boxes make for great play at every skill level and balmy breezes complement every round. Four full-time teaching professionals are on staff to help you make the most of your play, while the pro shop offers an extensive range of equipment for your game.

Connected to the mainland by a fixedspan bridge, residents of Sailfish Point are 10 minutes from the restaurants, shopping, medical services and small town charm of downtown Stuart. A private airport is minutes away and bustling Palm Beach is just an hour south.

Sailfish Point is life as you choose it, surrounded by astonishing beauty.

VICTORY RANCH

Luxury Mountain Homes In Utah's Great Outdoors

On the edge of Utah's Wasatch Mountains, just minutes from Park City and Deer Valley, lies the private, year-round residential community, Victory Ranch. Set along a majestic stretch of the Upper Provo River and amidst 6,700 pristine acres of rolling hills and aspen groves, Victory Ranch offers an unmatched setting for active individuals and families to escape from the everyday and reconnect with nature's untouched beauty.

Owning at Victory Ranch puts one of America's finest private golf courses right outside the front door of your modern mountain vacation home. Carved from the dramatic high-country landscape and surrounded by the picturesque natural beauty of Deer Valley and the Uinta Mountains, the 18-hole Rees Jones-designed course challenges all skill levels while sweeping views in every direction test your focus.

Away from the course, owners enjoy Victory Ranch's world-class fly fishing, miles of private mountain biking and hiking trails, water sports on the Jordanelle, yurt camping, 5-stand shooting and a host of beautifully appointed amenities such as a ski-in/ski-out lounge in the heart of Park City, The Post clubhouse with its pool and fitness center, a riverside restaurant and a host of kid-centric activities.

Originally conceived as one of the lowest density communities in all of Park City, the developer, Sterling Bay, has elected to reduce density further from 700 homes to approximately 350, providing unmatched exclusivity for a legacy home. The majority of homes at Victory Ranch are being constructed on remarkable one- to fouracre lots within walking distance of core amenities.

With the growing demand for luxury mountain living at Victory Ranch, the developer has released new homesites and cabin home collections, and has introduced new amenities to enhance the Victory Ranch lifestyle. This past winter, Victory Ranch opened its newest amenity The Post, and it will soon break ground on a new activity clubhouse, The Barn. Inspired by the classic western barn house, this new amenity will host an array of family and kid-friendly activities, including a wellness center with juice bar, full fitness facility, full-service spa and paddle tennis and tennis courts. An entire barn will be dedicated to teens and children, complete with a pizzeria, ice cream bar, game room and half-court basketball gym.

Homesites and custom cabin homes are priced from $425,000 and $1,485,000 respectively. For more information about Victory Ranch, please visit VictoryRanchUtah. com or call 435.785.5000.

telescopic view of a private and tropical canal, the blue waters of Biscayne Bay and the Atlantic Ocean in the far distance are the raisons d'être for architect Max Strang's newest residential design in Coconut Grove, Fla.

"It's all about the trajectory of the view," the award-winning architect says. "On the horizon you can see Stiltsville, the remaining houses of a historic fishing camp out there in the middle of the bay. It's a great artifact."

The Hucker residence may have been inspired by that vista, but this striking home is also a vision unto itself, and one that crisply articulates a finely honed sense of contemporary architecture and design. A sparkling white stone and stucco gem, it was masterfully designed in the tradition of Florida modernists like Paul Rudolph and Gene Leedy.

And that's no accident. Midcentury modern design is woven into this architect's DNA. Strang not only grew up in a home designed by Leedy, but he considers the modern master his mentor too.

Leedy was a friend of the family when Strang was young, and the two used to tour construction sites of Leedy's midcentury modern homes in Sarasota and Winter Haven.

"In Winter Haven, I was constantly surrounded by Gene's work," says

Strang. "Aside from many homes of family friends, he designed the city hall, police station, fire station, doctors' offices, garden club and the country club [with Paul Rudolph]. I was immersed in modernity."

Once Strang graduated from the University of Florida, he interned at – where else? – Leedy's office. Then he was off to Columbia for a graduate degree, interning with rock star architect Zaha Hadid in 1996 before returning to Florida to set up his own fledgling practice in 1998.

Since then, Strang has thrived in a design environment that's dually challenged by rising sea levels and a complex set of zoning restrictions. In Miami Beach, that means building six to seven feet above grade. In Coconut Grove, flood restrictions demand even loftier heights.

"Coconut Grove is not on a barrier island like Miami Beach," he says. "You have to build higher on the water because it comes in and then has nowhere to go. The coastline is like a catcher's mitt – water gets caught up in there."

Strang designed the Hucker home to stand two stories tall, starting at eight feet above grade. It's actually a compound with two buildings: the main house comprising four bedrooms and five and a half baths and a smaller structure that serves as an office, guest suite and art studio.

His clients, Rupert and Katherine Hucker – he's English, she's Australian – moved from Trinidad to Coconut Grove seven years ago with their then nine-year-old daughter. They liked the neighborhood and wanted a home with a view of the water and a place where they could entertain friends and family.

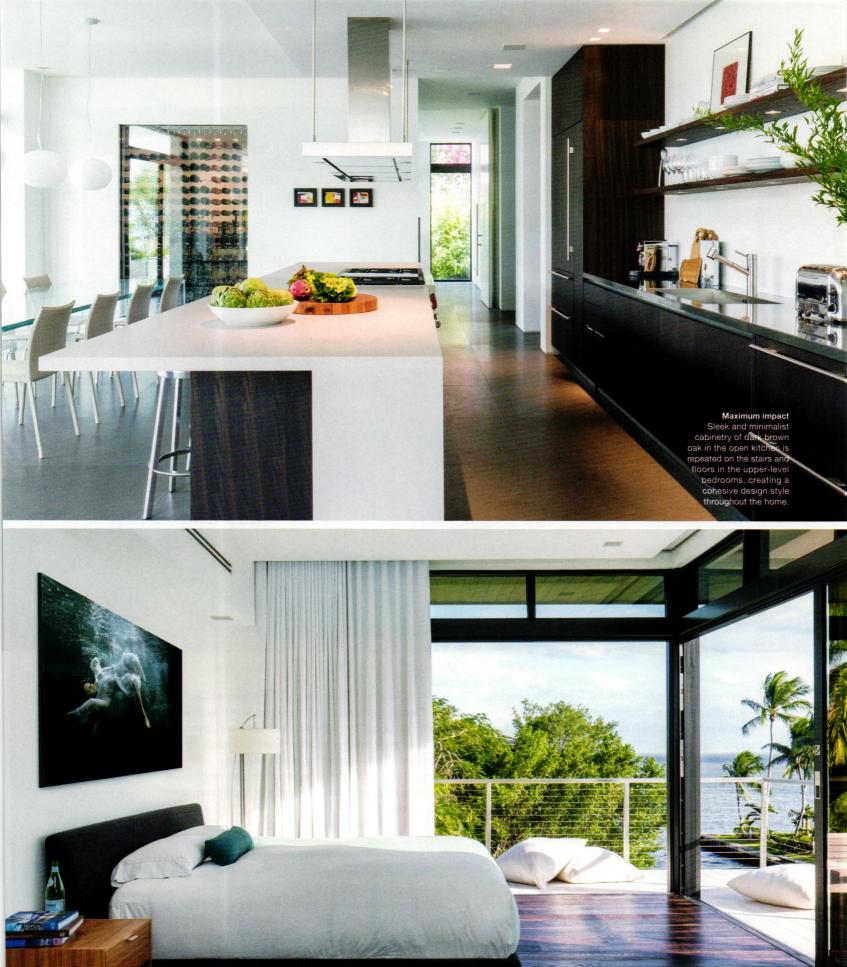

Strang and his Hucker residence project team, comprising Alexandra Mangimelli, Maria Ascoli, Jason Adams and Jordan Johnson, delivered it all, in spades.

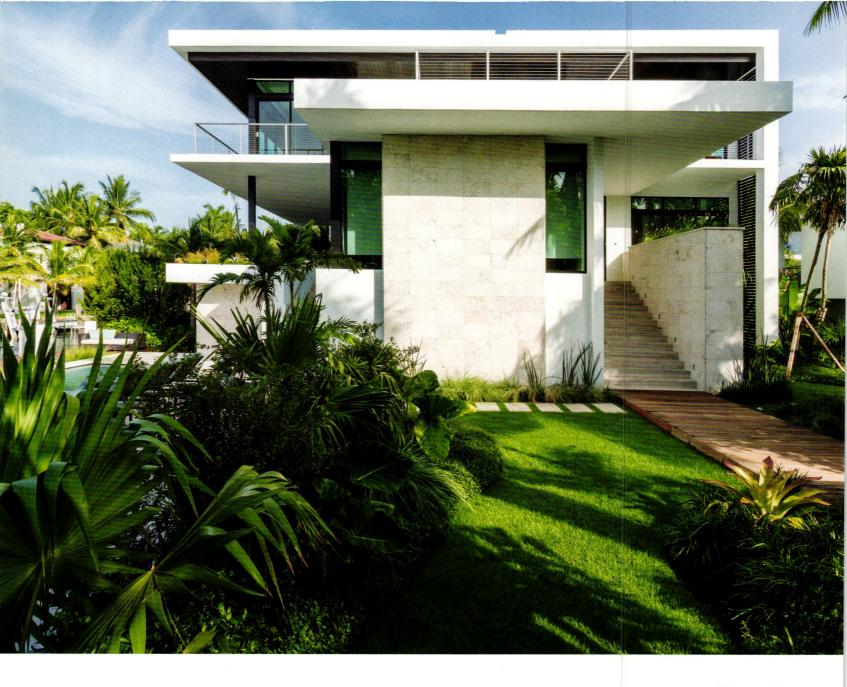

In addition to maximizing that compelling view to the southeast, he gave the Huckers a spacious, 5,200-square-foot home with long, clean lines, deep overhangs and a relatively simple but eye-catching architecture.

The overhangs give the house its strong identity but are a necessity too. "You've got to get out of the sun," Strang says, "but they also define it as a Florida house."

Guests drive up to the home, which is sited on a cul de sac, park on the street and pass through a wooden gate opening to a lush private garden. They can choose between walking up a formal staircase to the front door or taking a shorter, more informal route along stepping stones leading to a pool terrace.

Adjacent to the 53-foot-long swimming pool and small Balinese-style pavilion is a set of stairs rising to the home's central terrace. That's the spot where breezy outdoor grilling and entertaining are de rigueur.

"I placed more emphasis on the casual arrival than the formal," says Strang. "There's the obligatory front door, but 90 percent of the time guests arrive at the lower-level entrance."

That might be attributed to the allure of the pool, clad in Balinese blue limestone tiles that are cream and turquoise in color and sourced from a single mine in Indonesia. "The minerals in the pool tiles help cleanse the water," says Katherine Hucker. "We had been to Bali and knew exactly what we wanted."

The pool terrace is surrounded by a garden rich in sumptuous plantings indigenous to Florida: succulents, gardenias, bougainvillea and coconut palm trees. "It's well kept, but fairly untamed," she adds. "It's sublime – not just visually, but to walk around it; the scent is just heavenly."

Should they choose to ascend the staircase for the more formal approach, visitors arrive at an overlook of garden and pool. Through the front door and foyer, that telescopic view opens up to the southeast while interior spaces are all about merging inside and out.

"The living area, kitchen and outdoor terrace are all one," adds Hucker. "Max achieved the open living space that we wanted."

Because she's an artist, Hucker was specific about colors and materials to be used – first the stone and wood, then the fittings and fixtures. "We used local keystone and Italian basalt, gray with specks of cream in it, and gray-veined travertine," she says.

"All the basalt slabs were cut into three-foot by three-foot tiles for the entire first floor, and we used the gray-veined travertine outside, so there's continuity."

In the kitchen, there's minimalist cabinetry of dark brown oak, which is repeated on the stairs and floors in

Grand entrance

Guests can opt to walk up a formal staircase to the front door or take a shorter and more informal route along stepping stones that lead to a beautiful pool and terrace.

upper-level bedrooms. All the walls are white, with the exception of a feature wall in the main room, a space that's filled with light thanks to its oversized windows.

"That room is phenomenal. It's so cool when it's all open, and it's a great place for us to hang out," adds Hucker. "The whole room is pointed in the direction of the bay, overlooking the pool."

One wall features a large print of a photograph from the artist Christo's 1983 landmark art project in Florida, which he wrapped 11 tiny Miami islands in pink fabric. One of Hucker's friends worked on Surrounded Islands and gave her the print as a gift.

"You see this big pink photo that's one meter by three meters," says Hucker. "It picks up the blue of the bay and the sky and the green of the garden."

Hucker's own paintings are displayed throughout the residence and will soon be joined by new works, created since the end of the home's design and construction phases in 2015. "I've gotten back to painting in the last three months," she says.

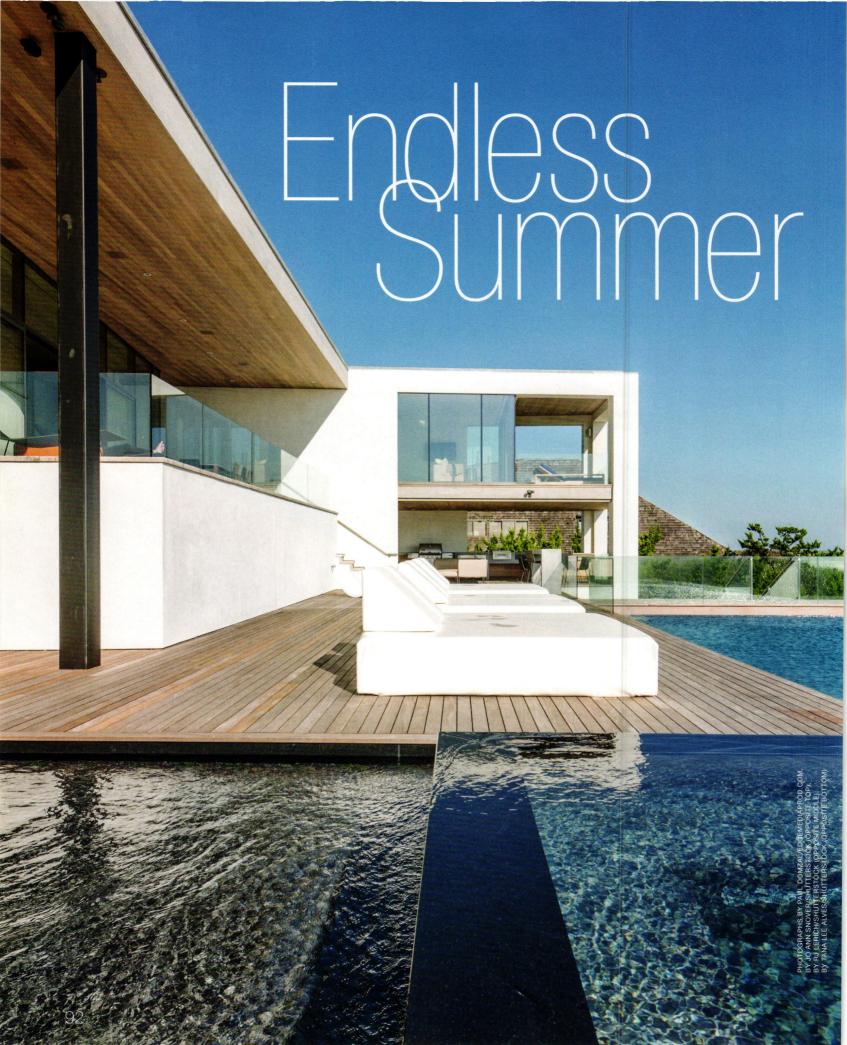

She works in charcoal, acrylics and oil, and her new home serves as her muse. "I was intimately involved in its design and it provides me subject matter, but not in a literal translation," she says. "It's abstract, more and more, and each time I take a section and paint it on a larger scale. There's an interplay between shapes and spaces and colors and textures."

The home has resulted in an enduring friendship between clients and architect. "Often when I come back to Miami, I stay in their guest house," says

Strang, who recently opened an office in Telluride, Colo. "This home has become more than a commission – it's an abiding friendship." OlH

THE HAMPTONS IS A PLAYGROUND FOR THE RICH AND FAMOUS DURING SUMMER BUT OFFERS AN EXCEPTIONAL OCEANFRONT
LIFESTYLE YEAR ROUND

words by Andrew Conway

It's a quiet Friday morning in late March. The sky is clear, the sun is shining and the air is cool and crisp, with just a hint of early spring in the breeze – one of those days that makes you feel good to be alive.

The neat hedgerows and mature trees lining Atlantic Avenue, in the tiny hamlet of Amagansett, surround grand but pretty homes with gambrel roofs, shingled walls, white-painted shutters and clipped lawns.

At the end of the street is a classic beach hut, closed up tighter than a lobster trap, and four salt-encrusted surfboards standing guard at the entrance. The small parking area is empty, covered by windblown sand, with a narrow path leading over a sand dune.

And there, in all its glory, is the vast panorama of the Atlantic Ocean, its white-tipped waves roaring and crashing onto an entirely deserted beach, dotted with a handful of imposing mansions and stretching to the horizon.

I'm in the heart of The Hamptons, one of the most expensive and exclusive tracts of real estate on the planet, and life is looking very good indeed. An iconic playground for the rich and famous during summer, The Hamptons actually offers an exceptional coastal lifestyle throughout the year – assuming you have the money (and lots of it) to buy into it.

The pot of gold at the end of the rainbow for high-flying hedge fund executives, cashed-up corporate titans, global oligarchs and Hollywood celebrities, this glorious stretch of Long Island coastline – less than 100 miles from New York City – is a place like no other.

"There's really nowhere for wealthy people in New York who have children to go away on the weekend," says leading Corcoran realtor Susan Breitenbach, a long-time resident of The Hamptons and one of the nation's top brokers with sales of more than $3 billion.

"They're not flying to Nantucket and getting fogged in. They're not going to the Jersey Shore. The Hamptons is so accessible. They can get everything out here that they can in the city – good caterers, yoga teachers, child care – and enjoy this wonderful coastal lifestyle in a great family community."

Tim Davis, a lifelong Long Island and Hamptons resident and fellow Corcoran power broker with sales of $3.5 billion, agrees. "This is a lifestyle destination," he says. "It's safe, clean, naturally beautiful and there's power broker Tim

Davis at $50 million.

While maps of The Hamptons list more than 20 distinct towns and villages, from Westhampton and Quogue in the west to Montauk in the east, there are eight that shine brighter than others, all linked by the busy – and in summer gridlocked – Montauk Highway.

The largest of the eight key communities, and closest to New York City, is Southampton, with its bustling and historic town center and immense oceanfront estates to the south along Meadow Lane and Gin Lane.

A few minutes' drive to the east is Water Mill, a blink-and-you-miss-it village with high-end homes extending south to Flying Point, overlooking the beautiful Mecox Bay and ocean.

Neighboring Bridgehampton has a more rural look and feel with exclusive homes north and south of the highway, many with stables and set on sprawling lots that were once open farmlands and potato fields.

Sagaponack is reportedly the most expensive zip code in the nation, with even larger estates and mansions, like "This is a lifestyle destination. It's safe, clean, naturally beautiful and there's something for everybody here."

- TIM DAVIS HAMPTONS POWER BROKER

industrialist Ira Rennert's $100 million-plus palatial Italianate compound on Daniels Lane.

North of Sagaponack is Sag Harbor, a compact but charming former whaling town – mentioned in Moby Dick – with historic homes clustered around the curved Main Street, lined with antique stores and boutiques. Take in a performance at the iconic Bay Street Theater and dinner at The American Hotel, a Hamptons social institution.

In the heart of The Hamptons lies East Hampton, a bucolic residential enclave with a pond, swans and stone church straight out of an English period novel. Main Street is lined with upscale designer stores, where cashmere and linen seem to be the standard dress code.

More oceanfront estates along Lily Pond Lane and Further Lane, separated by Hook Pond and the elite Maidstone Club, regularly sell for record prices. Leading Compass broker Ed Petrie recently sold a trio of Lily Pond Lane properties, belonging to a prominent hedge funder, for $110 million.

Farther to the east, Amagansett has the most "old Hamptons" feel. It's the one community that appears to have changed the least with the influx of serious money in the past few decades.

"I call it the Tribeca of The Hamptons," says Breitenbach. "It's not as built up as the rest and is a bit tucked away. There's a farmers' market there and it has more of a country feel to it."

Montauk is the most easterly community, located on the farthest reaches of Long Island's South Fork and almost separated from the rest of The Hamptons Nature and nurture Above, Montauk Point Light stands guard at the most easterly tip of Long Island's South Fork. Opposite top, the magnificent Villa Maria in Water Mill is listed at $72 million by Bespoke Real Estate, or you can rent 61 Startop Drive, Montauk, right, for a week during summer for a cool $65,000.

(see "A Fork in the Road" next pages). Its dunes and oceanfront attract a younger surfing-and-party set during the summer season.

Summer is naturally the peak of The Hamptons' vacation and social scene – kicking off with Fourth of July celebrations and running through Labor Day. There's a whirl of glamorous society and sporting events, from beach parties to polo, and house rentals can fetch from $30,000 a week up to half a million dollars.

"Rentals are definitely increasing; it's going to be another busy summer," says Krae van Sickle, a leading broker with Saunders Associates.

"Our rental season is very much tied up with the financial markets," adds Davis. "If the financial people are making money, they're happy to spend more on a rental, and that affects our buying season too."

After three record years from 2013 to 2015, real estate sales in The Hamptons also show no sign of contracting. "It's going to be very hard to compete with 2015 because it was such an incredible year," says Breitenbach. "But prices for premier properties in good locations, especially oceanfront, just keep going up.

"I've sold a home for $2.1 million, then for $4 million. The owners knocked it down, built again and sold it for $12 million. And it just sold again for $29 million. That's over the course of many years, but even in the past five years, the prices have gone crazy," she adds.

"Waterfront really garners the highest premium across the board, there's no doubt about that," says Michael Cantwell, chief marketing officer of Water Millbased Bespoke Real Estate, which launched in 2014.

"We're dealing with very special properties on unique parcels of land and waterfront. Homes this rarified in The Hamptons are comparatively less affected by the ups and downs of the financial markets than your average properties," he adds.

One of Bespoke's trophy homes currently on the market is the magnificent Villa Maria on Halsey Lane, Water Mill, which is listed for $72 million. Cantwell says the firm's average sales are in the mid to high $20 million region.

Despite its enormous wealth, exclusive homes and celebrity status, The Hamptons is a surprisingly welcoming, inclusive and unpretentious destination. There's a relaxed country-meets-coast vibe; the various beaches are open to the public (albeit with parking permits) as are many social, culinary, arts and sporting events.

Another surprise is the region's diverse residential architecture, with an eye-catching patchwork of traditional shingle, gambrel and gabled homes set alongside striking and cutting-edge contemporary residences.

"Modernism is making a huge comeback in The Hamptons," says Chris Coy, a principal of leading modern architecture firm Barnes Coy, based in Bridgehampton and New York City.

"A modern home can lend itself beautifully to an ocean setting," he adds. "We use lots of warm materials – teak, cedar siding, stone and stucco – and lots of glass to capture the ocean panoramas.

"People want to have an intimate experience with the view, especially after they've paid $25 million for a property. They want to embrace that ocean view; they want it to come inside and be part of their lives."

The juxtaposition of classic and contemporary homes in The Hamptons might appear jarring to some, but it actually makes for an interesting, unique, even quirky architectural tour of the region.

One of the most fun things to do is drive around the wealthiest neighborhoods – especially out of season when there are no leaves on the trees and hedgerows – and enjoy a jaw-dropping glimpse of luxury coastal living at its finest.

The seasonal rhythm of The Hamptons is also changing. Once largely a summer playground, with many vacation homes shuttered for the rest of the year, it's now encouraging increasing numbers of homeowners to relocate family and work from New York City and stay for weekends and longer periods throughout the year.

This ongoing "sea change" is creating year-round activities – beachcombing in the spring, apple picking in the fall, sledding in the winter, to name a few – and adding a new layer of community to the year-round local population.

It's not all happy Hamptons, however. Some communities are concerned about the rapid growth and changes brought about by the "new money" and are fervently protective of zoning restrictions. Route 27's traffic chaos in summer is also a persistent annoyance.

Regardless, The Hamptons remains a solid real estate investment. "It's definitely a safe haven, with inherent natural beauty, great recreational amenities, geographic limitations and lots of zoning restrictions that keep it from getting over-developed," says van Sickle. "It's also surrounded by water and close to New York City, and these are durable market attributes," he adds. Breitenbach agrees. "It's very hard to lose money on real estate here," she says. And if you can't afford to buy in, just head down Atlantic Avenue in Amagansett and claim your own beachfront slice of The Hamptons, if only for an hour or two.

GETTING THERE: TRAINS, PLANES & AUTOMOBILES

FROM NEW YORK CITY

Depending on the season and traffic, it can take 90 minutes to four hours to drive from New York City to The Hamptons. You can also go by regular Jitney bus service (hamptonjitney.com) or Long Island Rail Road (mta.info/lirr).

For a fast and fashionable arrival, Blade is an Uber-like helicopter service offering flights from Manhattan to East Hampton (flyblade.com), or you can opt for a scenic seaplane flight from NYC to Shelter Island operated by StndAIR (stndair.com).

Be aware, however, you'll definitely need a car if you want to explore The Hamptons and all it has to offer.

FROM BOSTON

Take I-95 south to the New London ferry terminal and the Cross Sound Ferry to Orient Point on Long Island's North Fork. You can shortcut to Sag Harbor on local ferries, via Shelter Island and North Haven, or drive through the charming Long Island wine country around Great Peconic Bay, via Riverhead and Hampton Bays.

MONTAUK

at Scarpetta Beach, the stylish restaurant at Gurney's Montauk Resort & Seawater Spa, and the joint is jumping. Cocktails are crossing the bar faster than a sailfish in the ocean and diners are ordering dishes heaped with seafood and pasta.

A fire pit is roaring on the adjoining deck, warming other guests who are braving the late-March chill. The night sky is clear, with an almost full moon casting shadows across the wide beach and dunes below.

The air is thick with the aroma of sea salt, and all around is the intoxicating roar of the Atlantic Ocean as wave after wave rolls continuously onto the beach.

Welcome to Montauk, the most easterly coastal community in The Hamptons, and arguably the most special. Perched on the farthest reaches of Long Island's South Fork, Montauk enjoys a more remote and secluded lifestyle than its upscale neighbors.

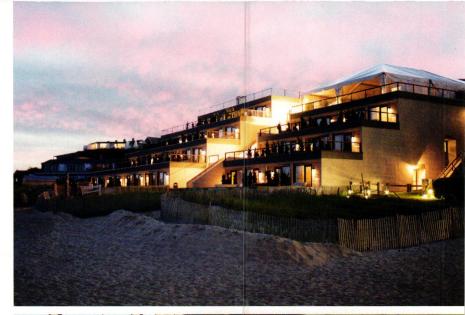

While the town itself is nothing to write home about – a low-key fishing village, almost at the end of Montauk Highway, with a smattering of shops and restaurants – the coastline is sensational.

Cocooned by Hither Hills Preserve on one side and Montauk Point State Park and its iconic lighthouse on the other, Montauk offers calm bay waters to the north and wild oceanfront to its south.

Take the fork in the road on Old Montauk Highway and you'll be rewarded with classic seaside vacation resorts, vast hilltop mansions and tiny beach shacks, all vying for their own private haven in The Hamptons.

Ours, happily, is Gurney's Montauk – a breezy oceanfront retreat and Hamptons institution for 90 years that is undergoing a multi-year and multimillion dollar renovation by its owners and real estate moguls George Filopoulos and Lloyd Goldman.

Their goal is to transform the only year-round resort in Montauk into a stylish and contemporary vacation retreat and a lively social center of The Hamptons for a new generation of guests.

The first two phases of the renovation have delivered 38 refurbished oceanfront guest rooms, a revamp of the Beach Club, a redesign of the resort's ocean-fed seawater swimming pool, updated common spaces and five new dining and social venues, including Scarpetta Beach.

This summer's rollout includes an additional 42 oceanview renovated rooms and the start of a major head-totoe overhaul of the spa, slated for completion in 2017.

The prime accommodations are the 38 ocean-side guest rooms in Forward Watch, tiered in four levels that cascade like a waterfall down to a 1,000-foot private sand beach.

Designed by Michael Kramer, of New York City's Michael Thomas and Co., the new-look rooms are a blend of Hamptons sophistication and beachside comfort with a calm, neutral color palette.

Reclaimed cedar siding, oak and driftwoods play central roles in ceilings, floors and wall accents, along with modern interpretations of vintage furnishings. Custom dip-dyed ombré drapery complements the ocean, while the compact but efficient bathrooms have crisp white tiles with black fixtures.

The public areas have a relaxed beach vibe: more chic and upscale in Scarpetta Beach, more casual in the adjacent bistro (serving breakfast and lunch) and retro lobby bar offering coffee, snacks, pastries and ice cream.

Various outdoor decks create plenty of room for alfresco dining, relaxing and enjoying the panoramic ocean views. Gurney's is also partnering with a collection of fashion brands for a series of "pop-up" outlets on weekends throughout the summer.

As part of the major restoration, the resort has a new executive team led by General Manager Michael Nenner, who joins from Four Seasons with more than 15 years of luxury resort experience across America. "We want this to be the Post Ranch Inn of the East Coast," he says.

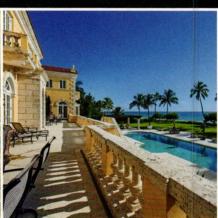

Montauk itself is changing, attracting a younger and very social beach crowd during the summer season, and Gurney's is riding the wave. It's not quite there yet, but it will be soon. gurneysmontauk.com O|H
