

LIBRARY

THE ARCHITECT

$8.50 the year

MARCH, 1929

Piranesi
75c. the copy

(*Being
No. 2
of a Series of 12*)

About English Treatments And Greenhouse Link-Ups

NOWHERE is the greenhouse so intimate a part of the grounds, as in England.

The custom started way back there 150 or more years ago, with the simple grapery leanto against the nearby garden wall.

Today you find the hot house, or the conservatories, as you know they call them over there, more often than not, linked directly with the residence.

Arthur Guptill, in his recent trip, made a special study of the placing of greenhouses in both England and on the continent.

This sketch of his is reflective of one layout in England.

In their English fashion, the delightful part of the grounds is in the rear, as he shows it. The tie in of greenhouse, garage, and garden wall, is not without its suggestion.

This is Number 2 of the Guptill series of Greenhouse placements. To the previous one you are welcome. By sending us your name, copies will be sent of the series in advance of publication.

LORD & BURNHAM CO.

FOR FOUR GENERATIONS BUILDERS OF GREENHOUSES

Irvington, N. Y.	New York	Philadelphia	Chicago	Boston
Buffalo	Cleveland	Denver	Kansas City	St. Louis
Greensboro, N. C.	Montreal	St. Catharines		Toronto