

Today's News - February 25, 2003

Talent lost in an avalanche. – Two days and counting to Ground Zero design winner...there's a lot of sniping and apologizing and backtracking going on. – LA Times balances yesterday's in-depth personality profile of the Libeskind with Viñoly today (and not much time to include Schwartz, Smith, and Ban). – Lincoln Center picks a team for its landscaping at least (but money is not in the coffers yet). – Coiffers for project in Dubai are brimming. – Consensus for stadium design yields architectural identity crisis. – A tower builder honored in Baltimore. – Seattle courthouse has a heart of steel. – An architectural icon or a "tube worm" in the works for Cooper Union. – AIA/Dallas sponsors heard-hat tour with Legorreta. – An architectural exercise in building and tearing down bridges (we're not talking politics).
