The Premier Architectural Collection

Determined to create the most classically correct column in the industry, Chadsworth applied the talents of a distinct group of architects tasked with identifying and establishing the current codified rules for the Orders of Architecture. With the results of the collaboration, Chadsworth mirrored this primer and produced a new standard for their architectural wood line and created two tiers of their award-winning PolyStone®.

Branded as Premier Architectural Wood and PolyStone®, the latest profiles feature actual dimensions rather than nominal, have a classical entasis, and a hypophyge adjoining the capital and base. A full line of matching square pillars and pilasters are also available.

These columns, with their profiles established by such an esteemed assembly of architects, make The Premier Architectural Collection an exquisite and unparalleled line of wood and composite columns for the most discerning clientele.

A low-angle, night-time photograph of the Milwaukee War Memorial. The building's facade is a complex grid of dark, vertical and horizontal metal mullions, creating a screen that filters the warm interior lights. A prominent, illuminated staircase is visible on the right side of the building. In the foreground, a white, cylindrical light pole stands vertically. The sky is a deep blue with some light clouds. A semi-transparent green circle is overlaid on the lower left portion of the image, containing the main headline.

Keep the sash. Improve the glass.

Columns and Porches

By Nancy A. Ruhling

With their graceful forms, classical columns have been adding drama and interest to exterior entrances and porches since ancient times.

It was the Greeks who gave us the original trio of architectural orders—Doric, Ionic, and Corinthian—and it was the Romans who added the Tuscan and the Composite to the balanced equation.

Although their stated purpose was to hold up other architectural elements, notably porches, it is their timeless beauty that makes for columns' enduring popularity.

The porch, too, is making a comeback as home buyers are placing a priority on outdoor areas that blur the lines between interior and exterior spaces.

Here are some of the companies that are carrying on tradition, promulgating the classic orders by producing these elementary building blocks of classical architecture.

Aeratis Porch Products,
aeratis.com

The historically accurate porch products manufactured by Aeratis Porch Products are specially formulated to be resistant to temperature changes and water.

"By controlling these two effects on building materials, we can engineer products that outperform many others on the market," says Chris Tidwell, vice president of sales and marketing.

The company, which is based in Tennessee, has been making shutters since it was established in 2005 and is adding custom historic windows, columns, trims, and siding early next year.

"I love trying to understand why homes and materials were designed the way they were," says Tidwell, a partner in the company. "I love understanding the purpose and functionality of products used on the outside of houses."

Chadsworth Columns, columns.com

Established in 1987, Chadsworth Columns is dedicated to creating classically correct columns.

The family-owned company, which specializes in architectural columns, pilasters, capitals, balusters, and various other architectural elements in a variety of materials, offers standard and custom designs and reproduces historical components for restorations.

"We have never ceased our studies to deliver the most architecturally correct columns and millwork," says Founder and CEO Jeffrey Lynn Davis, whose studies began more than three decades ago with the Institute of Classical Architecture & Art. "Our specialty is delivering what is designed, not necessarily what is 'stock,' and our expertise is in our years of experience and training in classical architecture."

"Columns are one of the few building elements that have been here since ancient times," Davis says. "Though materials and designs progressed through the ages, columns represent a basic building component with the capacity to add beauty and meaning to a structure."

Stone Legends, stonelegends.com

The cast-stone specialist Stone Legends has been creating columns, veneers, balustrades, and window and door surrounds for more than three decades.

"We're passionate about what we do because cast stone, which we make by hand, was a craft that was almost lost," says Richard Carey, the owner of the Dallas-based company. "We played a big part in making cast stone Stone Legends: Above, Stone Legends' Tuscan Tapered Smooth Shaft columns are a graceful addition to a covered, arched verandah. an embellishment of masonry that is still considered the oldest and best choice of any time-tested building material of all time."

The family-owned and -operated company often produces more than 20 million pounds of cast stone a year. "We've done that for a lot of years," Carey says. "To put that in perspective, it would be more than 25,000 18-wheeler trucks fully loaded over three decades shipped to all 50 states in the USA."

Noting that "practice comes with age," Carey says that Stone Legends' craftspeople, some of whom have 30 years of experience, have passed their skills down from one generation to the next.

And he notes that the next generation of his family "is heavily entrenched into what promises to be many years yet to come." TB

“ We played a big part in making cast stone an embellishment of masonry that is still considered the oldest and best choice of any time-tested building material of all time. ”

Glass structures, whether greenhouses, conservatories, orangeries or garden follies, serve as windows to the great outdoors, blurring the lines between indoor and outdoor spaces to connect us with nature.

Here are some of the companies that are creating these windowed wonders.

Hartley Botanic,
hartley-botanic.com

The maker of the only Glasshouses and Greenhouses endorsed by the UK's Royal Horticultural Society, the world's leading garden charity, Hartley Botanic has been handcrafting its custom luxury aluminum structures for over 85 years.

The Greenhouses, which come with a 30-year guarantee and range in style from Victorian to Modern, are made in a century-old factory in Lancashire, England.

to making the gardening dreams of customers a reality.”

Noting that the company has been selling internationally for many years, Bobrick says “there is a wealth of knowledge built into every Hartley Botanic Glasshouse. Generations of customers have put their trust in the hands of expert, time-served, highly skilled craftsmen.”

Hartley Botanic’s newest Glasshouse, a Victorian Pavilion, is the largest in its collection. “It makes an opulent garden statement, providing customers with a unique opportunity to create their very own indoor botanical garden,” Bobrick says.

Renaissance Conservatories,

 The custom conservatories, greenhouses, roof glazing systems, skylights, and specialty windows and doors manufactured by Renaissance Conservatories are made to order. The Pennsylvania-based company, which frequently works with architects, frames its products in wood—cedro mahogany, Honduran mahogany, various African mahoganies and oak.

“Every project is designed to meet, or exceed, whatever the local building code requirements are for earthquakes, hurricanes, and snow loads,” says Steve Pearson, an estimator with the company, which has been in business since 1997 and employs a dozen full-time workers, plus some specialty subcontractors.

Jason Sawyer, the company’s owner, is a carpenter by trade. “I am present on every project Renaissance installs from start to finish,” he says. “Every project on our company’s website, or Portfolio Book, has been constructed by one of our in-house installation teams and supervised by me.”

Building conservatories all over North America for more than a quarter-century, Sawyer has worked with some of the world’s leading builders and architects.

“From this experience having worked hands-on in the field, I’m able to bring all that I have learned back to our CAD design team, and apply it to our next projects,” he says.

Pearson notes that seeing the transformation Renaissance Conservatories’ products make in each project is exciting. “We, as a group, enjoy being able to provide the sort of products that create a unique look, and a wow factor, to additions, renovations, and new-construction projects,” he says.

Tanglewood Conservatories, tanglewoodconservatories.com

Founders Alan Stein and Nancy Virts fell in love with conservatories nearly 30 years ago, establishing Tanglewood Conservatories to create custom conservatories, estate greenhouses, pool enclosures, skylights, domes, canopies, and gazebos, and garden follies.

So smitten were they that they hopped on a plane to England, where they spent several weeks studying the architecture of conservatories before designing their first commission. Since then, they have traveled the world, deepening their knowledge and appreciation of these glass houses.

The architect-husband and designer-wife duo, authors of “The Conservatory: Gardens Under Glass” (Princeton Architectural Press, 2020), which proves a concise history and survey of the form. They say that each project “becomes an architecturally significant and technologically advanced synthesis of the architect’s vision, client’s dreams, and Tanglewood’s expertise.”

Dedicated to designing the “most beautiful, high-quality” conservatories in the world, Stein and Virts, through their nonprofit, The Untangled Minds Foundation, have developed continuous learning programs for high school students who want to pursue careers in the manufacturing trades and have created programs for architects to expand their understanding of conservatory architecture through their Conservatory Heritage Society.

Virts, who calls conservatories “magical, delightful, otherworldly spaces,” says owners “speak of them as if they were alive; these spaces nurture the soul and lay a balm on the cares of modern life.”

Noting that “there is so much we can learn from the history of conservatories,” Stein says that “it is our hope that in sharing what we have learned with our community, people continue to admire and appreciate this style of architecture. We have to preserve and celebrate these architectural legends and what they stand for.” TB

Roofing and Gutters

Tile roofs and copper gutters are the crowning touches of the buildings we love.

Here are some of the companies that are raising the bar—and the roof—with traditional products and techniques.

Ludowici,
ludowici.com

A maker of high-quality architectural terra-cotta roofing, flooring, and cladding, Ludowici has been in operation for more than 135 years.

That's when the Ludowicis, descendants of a renowned family of potters whose European origin began over 400 years ago, founded their own company in the United States.

The company, which is now based in New Lexington, Ohio, offers a variety of colors, textures, and customization options, says head of marketing

Lauren Johnson that “allow endless inspiration for architects, designers and homeowners alike.”

The customizable tiles, which adorn thousands of historic and new-build structures around the world and carry a 75-year warranty, are “uniquely beautiful and stand the test of time,” Johnson says.

They also have the lowest water absorption rates, she adds, and are ASTM C1167 Grade 1 rated, color fast, strong and salt-, cold- and fire-resistant.

Working for Ludowici is a point of pride. “You are making a product you believe in—from quality to history and performance,” Johnson says. “It is a huge win being involved with the preservation of historic buildings and being able to assist with restoring them to their original glory.”

Lukis Restoration Co.,
lukisrestoration.com

A family-owned business with eight skilled employees, Lukis Restoration Co. specializes in tile-roof repairs, slate-roof restoration, architectural sheet metal fabrication, decorative copper work, new tile-roof installations, and high-performance synthetic roof systems.

The company, which is based in Illinois and works on roofs throughout the Midwest, has been in business 12 years.

General Manager Andrew Lukis, who learned the trade from his grandfather and father, is passionate about his work.

“The privilege of restoring historical roofs, maintaining unique aesthetics, providing protection from the elements for families, and last but not least carrying on as a third-generation roofer specializing in slate, tile and copper work—all these things dovetail to lay the foundation for my fondness for the profession,” he says.

The company's success, he notes, comes from experience and the proper execution of details—key elements that factor into the longevity of roof systems.

“We are proud to carry on a tradition of old-world craftsmanship, helping solve problems to restore and protect the character of many different structures, each with its own individual charm,” he says.

leading makers in England, France, Spain, Portugal, and Holland, Northern Roof Tiles US was established in 1991.

The family-owned company, founded by Stuart Matthew, also sources used tiles for repairs, commissions tiles for repairs and restorations, and supplies, specialty mortar systems, bricks, pavers, and quarry tiles.

Northern Roof Tiles has worked on a number of high-profile projects, including Frank Lloyd Wright's Darwin Martin House in Buffalo, New York, and The Breakers, Cornelius Vanderbilt's summer cottage in Newport, Rhode Island.

Matthews, whose sons Adam and Simon are taking over the company, is working on one final project: The Yin Yu Tan merchant's house at the Peabody Museum in Salem, Massachusetts.

The house, which dates to 1798, was shipped over from China in 1996, and Matthews was tapped to design and make a replacement pan tile that replicated the look of four of the small original tiles, which had not been fired at a high enough temperature to weather the harsh Massachusetts winters.

“They were installed in 2000 and functioned perfectly,” Matthews says. “Unfortunately, the stock of original cover tiles has been depleted, and it was decided to replace all the existing cover tiles.”

For the project, Matthews’ last, Northern Roof Tile US is working with the renowned English tile maker Dreadnought Tiles to supply 33,000 new tiles that are only 7 inches long.

Matthews says working with Dreadnought, which started making tiles in 1805, only seven years after Yin Yu Tan was completed, “has been very gratifying.”

Slate & Copper Services,

For 45 years, Slate & Copper Services has been installing, maintaining, and restoring slate, tile, wood, and sheet metal roofing assemblies throughout the Northeastern United States.

Slate & Copper is family owned and operated and has locations in Easton, Connecticut and Portsmouth, Rhode Island.

A full-service roofing and sheet metal service, it specializes in historical roof restoration and preservation with an emphasis on recreating complex architectural sheet metal elements.

Company founder Scott Donahue says that “there is a considerable amount of fulfillment that comes from being able to contribute to preserving and caring for historically significant structures.” TB

Masonry and bricks, monuments to permanence, bring style and gravitas to the most memorable residences, cultural institutions, and commercial structures.

Here are some of the companies that, block by block, are working in the traditional fold.

Graciano Corp., Graciano.com

A leader in masonry restoration, preservation of historic landmarks, restoration, beautification and repair, award-winning Graciano Corp. has worked on a long list of iconic structures in New York City ranging from Central Park's Belvedere Castle and Rockefeller Center to Shea Stadium and the Queensboro Bridge.

"Our work is so satisfying because we are giving a future to the past," says President Glenn Foglio. "It is not just our trademark statement; it is what we are doing every day."

The company, which is based in Pittsburgh and has an office in New York City, was established in 1916.

"We take pride in our expertise and experience," Foglio says. "Our skilled tradespeople—some fourth-generation masons and craftworkers—have years of experience in the field. Their skills and attention to detail, along with our standardized Quality Assurance program for field and management procedures, bring peace of mind to building owners and managers. We adhere to exacting standards, and on historic landmarks, we follow Department of Interior Standards for Historic Preservation."

Foglio, who has been with Graciano for 40 years, loves "that we can see the turnkey results of our projects from beginning to end, and often times, within a year."

Rugo Stone, rugostone.com

Founded by Brett S. Rugo, grandson of an Italian stone carver, Rugo Stone is dedicated to the design, fabrication, and installation of natural stone, mosaic and other architecturally significant stonework products.

The company, established in 1996 in Virginia, has a senior staff that has over 400 years of collective stone-trade experience and works for some of the most acclaimed architects, churches, developers, construction managers, and homeowners throughout the United States.

Rugo Stone dismantled the white marble sanctuary of a 142-year-old church in Asbury Park, New Jersey, and reinstalled it at St. Dominic Roman Catholic Church in Brick, New Jersey. Rugo cleaned, patched, and restored the marble and produced a new sanctuary floor of Bianco Carrara and Red Jasper marbles. The project also included the restoration of the relief carving of the Last Supper, which involved carving missing elements. Photo by Rugo Stone "From workshop to showroom, we've invested in the best so we can deliver uncompromising quality, safety, and sustainability," says President/Owner Brett S. Rugo.

Growing up among the granite quarries of Barre, Vermont, Rugo began his stone-carving career at 15, working in a marble shop, then a quarry and later on urban construction job sites helping in the installation of stonework. After college, he began working in the greater Boston area before founding the company that bears his name.

Rugo Stone, one of the few companies that still trains and supports master stoneworkers, "is committed to preserving the lasting beauty of master-crafted natural stone for future generations,” Rugo says. “We believe that historic preservation is important to communicate to the future generations the designs, the capabilities, the art, and passion of our predecessors in creating successful, long-lasting projects that have withstood the test of time.”

The Belden Brick Co.,
beldenbrick.com

It started in 1885, when one Henry Belden used the clay and shale from his family farm to make bricks to pave the streets of Canton, Ohio. Today, the fifth-generation family-owned company manufacturers face brick, structural brick, thin brick, clay pavers, and chemical-resistant brick.

“We offer more colors, sizes, and textures than any other manufacturer in the brick industry,” says Brian S. Belden, vice president of sales and marketing. “With the more than 500 color combinations, over 13 sizes and thousands of special-shaped bricks we manufacture, our product line is more versatile and offers more possibilities for quality clay-fired brick than any other manufacturer.”

The company, which has over 500 employees, has worked on prestigious projects across the United States and Canada.

“We value our distributor network that works with architects, home builders, and mason contractors to make these projects come to life,” Belden says. “It’s the quality products we make and the relationships we build in the industry that position us as ‘The Standard of Comparison Since 1885.’”

Weathercap Inc., weathercap.net

The only authorized seller of its patented joint-protection Lead-T Caps, the family-owned Weathercap, based in Louisiana, has sold to customers working on projects around the country.

The Lead-T Caps, originally patented in 1933 and improved and patented again in 2001, provide a protective system for horizontal and vertical joints in masonry. They are flexible, cover the sealant, resist corrosion, can be painted, and resist molds.

“We have styles for 90-degree joints and Y-joints,” says Vice President of Sales Stacie Negueloua-Marton, whose parents bought the Louisiana-based company in 1997. “We also accommodate a wide range of joint widths from 1/8 of an inch all the way up to 3 inches.”

Noting that she enjoys learning something new from every project, Negueloua-Marton says that “Weathercap is on newly constructed buildings and on buildings that are hundreds of years old. We sell direct to the consumer, and I find the interaction with a diverse customer base from across North America intriguing.” TB

Doors, Windows, and Shutters

By Nancy A. Ruhling

Traditional-style windows, shutters and doors—architecture’s jewelry—serve as warm welcomers, inviting people to come inside and visit.

Here are some of the companies that are crafting the classics.

Architectural Components, architecturalcomponentsinc.com

Working out of a mid-1800s mill in Montague, Massachusetts, Architectural Components crafts custom and reproduction wood architectural millwork, primarily windows, exterior doors, and doorways for historic preservation projects.

“Windows and doors are so critical to the look and feel of a building and can make or break the restoration, so we take our part in that process very seriously,” says President Chris James, who bought the company, which was established in the 1970s, in 2015.

James, a mechanical engineer and woodworker, has worked for more than three decades in manufacturing fields, including the aerospace industry, experience, he says, that “taught me a lot about manufacturing to tight tolerances and high-quality standards.”

“We always want to know the history of the building we are working on to understand the period that we should be reproducing and what styles best fit that project’s goals,” he says. “We are often asked by architects to help them make decisions regarding the design details—glass specification, muntin styles and widths, door sticking or molding profiles, sash balancing systems, and hardware-on windows and doors.”

Rockwood Door & Millwork, rockwooddoor.com

A second-generation family-owned company, Rockwood Door & Millwork works with builders, architects and designers, to craft custom wood doors.

Founded in 1986, Rockwood is based in the Amish country of Ohio, and many of its craftsmen learned the art of fine woodworking from their fathers and grandfathers.

“From special materials to creative engineering, we bring new potential to architectural doors and millwork,” says Vince Troyer, head of business development. “We apply our expertise to solve unique design challenges and meet the most demanding aesthetic, quality and performance requirements.”

The team at Rockwood loves connecting with clients and coming up with solutions that take projects to the next level.

Seekircher Steel Window Corp., seekirchersteelwindow.com

The repository for the world’s largest collection of vintage steel casement windows and doors, Seekircher Steel Window Corp. restores and sells them for use in prestigious projects around the country and also does custom fabrication work for select clients.

“One of my favorite parts of what I do is incorporating vintage steel windows from our collection into projects,” says President Todd Seekircher, whose father, John, established the company nearly a half century ago. “I love the process of picking styles, configurations and sizes that work for people’s home additions, renovations, or interior applications such as office enclosures, wine rooms, or room dividers. The restored windows and doors add such a unique aesthetic.”

Based in Peekskill, New York, the company has worked with many of the nation’s top designers and architects, including Alan Wanzenberg, Steven Gambrel, and Peter Pennoyer.

“We generally have around seven to eight employees, which allows us to be deliberate about the types of projects we take on and provide exacting personal involvement and attention to each of our customers, whether it’s a $1,000 or $500,000 project,” Seekircher says.

Shuttercraft, shuttercraft.com

Known for supplying competitively priced custom interior and exterior wood shutters for historic homes, including the White House, Shuttercraft works in partnership with several family mills in the United States.

“My father, Dwight Carlson, started the company in 1986,” says Colleen Murdock, who took over the business in 2006. “He couldn’t find real wood shutters with movable louvers for his home’s exterior. He found a U.S. mill to make them, and soon partnered to form a long-term relationship to offer authentic shutter styles nationwide, adding full painting services and custom options.”

customers from as far away as New York and Boston.

"We are able to match existing shutter profiles for restoration and replacement projects," she says, adding that her employees are like family and that some have been with the company for over two decades. "We also offer hard-to-find interior traditional bifold movable louvers in all sizes, along with plantation shutters and Colonial raised and Shaker panels."

Shuttercraft prides itself on its customer service and depth of knowledge.

"We assist customers with measuring, hardware applications for functional shutters, shutter types that include authentic movable louvers, fixed louvers, raised and flat panels, board and batten, arches, capping, and endless cutouts," Murdock says.

The Cooper Group, thecoopergroupct.com

"What does a historic building need from its windows? That's the question we are constantly asking," says Brian Cooper, president and CEO of Cooper Historical Windows and Liberty Restoration Glass. "Through extensive research and development, we have found and established emerging technologies for a more energy-efficient window that will not jeopardize the intended aesthetic of a historic window."

The Cooper Group, which is based in Connecticut, specializes in new thermally broken steel windows in hot rolled, cold rolled, stainless steel, and bronze and in historical, high-performance glass units that feature the company's proprietary Liberty Restoration Glass.

The family-owned company, which has about 40 employees and more than 45 years of construction experience, has developed a restoration glass that is flat, enabling it to build single-pane glass and insulated glass units to what Cooper says are "the very highest standards" that match most cylinder glass from 1800 to 1920.

The Cooper Group's historical windows, which have Accoya wood sashes that do not shrink or swell or require frequent repainting, feature water-based finishes.

"Accoya is a renewable plantation pine," Cooper says. "It will last outdoors for 50 years with no finish on it."

The company's steel windows have a true thermal break in the frames and R-10 Plus energy ratings.

The Cooper Group can direction-ally tune windows on every wall of the building to control solar heat and maximize reflection of heat back into the building to lower heating and air-conditioning costs, a technology that Cooper says is not being utilized across the window market.

"Restoration is not only about the preservation of historic buildings but about the preservation of the craftsmanship that is required to save these significant structures," Cooper says. "For over 40 years, the possibility of breathing new life into structures that continue to exist in our landscape centuries after they were built has been my calling. Our focus is to preserve history, be architecturally respectful, and build windows to last the test of time, and second, to preserve the craft by passing on those skills to the next generation." TB

TIMELESS QUALITY

Open flame burning is an optional light source available in most of our fixture designs or custom made to match your own design. We offer an electronic ignition option for gas burning lanterns, which can be configured to run dusk to dawn. These igniters also have a feature that will relight the flame if it gets blown out by high winds. Ignition systems are proudly US made.

Ball and Ball continues to create authentic reproductions of period designs using period fabrication techniques and superior craftsmanship. We have over 65 years of experience fabricating reproductions of lighting fixtures.

Heritage Tile played a pivotal role in the faithful restoration of the Bradley House, a Prairie School masterpiece designed by Louis Sullivan in Madison, Wisconsin. Our contribution to the preservation of this historic landmark included Subway Ceramics glazed ceramic tilework, Viva Tile porcelain mosaics, and specialized tile design consulting services for the renovation of two shared bathroom spaces. This effort ensured the integrity of the structure's interior architecture, allowing the home to continue showcasing its timeless beauty and historical significance.
